PUBLISHERS' PREFACE.

THE design proposed by the publication of the Imperial Family Bible was, to provide an edition of the Sacred Volume, sufficiently high in the style of its Embellishments and Typography to secure a place in the libraries of the learned and affluent, and at the same time, so moderate in price, and accessible in its mode of publication, as to fall within the reach of all classes of the community. That this design has been accomplished, the Publishers have abundant evidence in the commendations which the work has received during its progress, and in its extensive acceptance by Christians of all ranks and denominations throughout the empire. Independently of all other considerations, the Publishers are thankful that they have thus been the means of largely circulating the Word of God, and been privileged to present it in a form which claims for this edition, as far as regards beauty and elegance of appearance, precedence over all others that have hitherto issued from the press.

The Publishers trust that the pledges into which they entered, regarding the distinctive features of this edition of the Holy Scriptures, have been fully redeemed. To the purity of the Text, the fidelity of the Comment, and the accuracy of the Typography, ample testimony has been given by the most learned and pious ministers of the present day; many of whom have likewise testified not merely to the beauty of the Engraved Illustrations, but also to the judicious care with which they have been selected.

As the arrangement of the Notes in two central columns may lead to misapprehension regarding the amount of comment introduced, the Publishers deem it proper to remark, that whilst the space occupied by them is considerable, as compared with other commentaries, it has been the aim of the Editors to compress and to condense the materials of which they are composed, so far as perspicuity would admit; by which means there has been brought to the illustration of the Sacred Word, in this edition, a greater extent of valuable comment than is to be found in many of the larger commentaries. From the plan that has been pursued, it will be obvious, that the Notes, in many instances, are original, so far as language is concerned; but the

PUBLISHERS' PREFACE.

Publishers wish it to be distinctly understood, that in no case has an opinion been advanced, or a doctrine propounded, which is not supported by the authority of the soundest Divines.

It is unnecessary for the Publishers to extend this Preface further than to congratulate their Christian friends on the completion of the Imperial Family Bible; and to express a fervent hope that as, under divine providence, they have been permitted to send it forth to the world, and to disseminate it widely throughout the country, it may, in a large degree, be instrumental in propagating a knowledge of Divine Truth, and in making known to many the way of salvation.

INTRODUCTION.

ON THE NECESSITY OF A DIVINE REVELATION.

THE argument for the necessity of a divine revelation proceeds on the idea that there is a God, that he is a Being of infinite perfection—infinite in power, wisdom, goodness, justice, and mercy—that his intelligent moral creatures ought to worship and serve him in a way suited to his character and perfections, and that their happiness must depend on his favour. These things being admitted, and viewed in connection with the character and condition of mankind, it is not difficult to make out the absolute necessity of a divine revelation before we can serve or enjoy God aright: that is, a discovery made by God to man, in an extraordinary way, over and above what is made known to us by the light of nature or reason.

'The objects of our knowledge are of three kinds:—Thus some things are discernible by the light of nature without revelation; of this kind is the knowledge of God from the traces of his wisdom and power exhibited in the works of creation, "for his invisible things, even his eternal power and Godhead since the creation of the world, are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made," (Rom. i. 20.) Other things are of pure and simple revelation, which cannot be known by the light of nature; such is the doctrine of the salvation of the world by Jesus Christ. Others again are discoverable by the light of nature, but imperfectly, and therefore stand in need of revelation to give them further proof and evidence; of this sort are a future state, and eternal rewards and punishments. But of what degree soever the revelation may be, whether partial or entire; whether a total discovery of some unknown truth, or only a fuller and clearer manifestation of truths imperfectly known by unassisted reason; it must be supernatural and proceed from God.'[1]

'No one who believes that there is a God, and that he is a Being of infinite power, wisdom, and knowledge, can reasonably deny, that he can, if he thinks fit, make a revelation of himself and of his will in an extraordinary way, different from the discoveries made by men themselves, in the more natural and ordinary use of their own rational faculties and powers. For if the power of God be almighty, it must extend to whatever does not imply a contradiction, which cannot be pretended in this case. Can it be supposed that the author of our being has it not in his power to communicate ideas to our minds, for informing and instructing us in those things which we are deeply concerned to know? our inability clearly to explain the manner in which this is done, is no just objection against it. And as it cannot reasonably be denied that God can, if he sees fit, communicate his will to man, in a way of extraordinary revelation; so he can do it in such a manner, as to give those to whom this revelation is originally and immediately made, a full and certain assurance that it is a true and divine revelation. For if men can communicate their thoughts by speech or language, in such a way as that we may certainly know who it is that speaks to us, it would be a strange thing to affirm, that God, on supposition of his communicating his mind and will to any person or persons, in a way of extraordinary revelation, has no way of causing his rational creatures to know that it is he, and no other, who makes this discovery to them. To admit the existence of a God, and to deny him such a power, is a glaring contradiction.'[2]

'Since no man can presume to say that it is inconsistent with any of the attributes of a Supreme Being, or unbecoming the wisdom of the Creator of all things, to reveal to his creatures more fully the way to happiness; to make a particular discovery of his will to them; to set before them, in a clear light, the rewards and punishments of a future state; to explain in what manner he will be pleased to be worshipped; and to declare what satisfaction he will accept for sin, and upon what conditions he will receive returning sinners: nay, since, on the contrary, it seems more suitable to our natural notions of the goodness and mercy of God, to suppose that he should do all this, than not, it follows undeniably, that it was most reasonable and agreeable to the dictates of nature, to expect and hope for such a divine revelation. Accordingly we find it to have been the general belief of mankind in every age, that some kind of commerce and communication subsisted between God and man. This was the foundation of all the religious rites and ceremonies which every heathen nation pretended to receive from their deities, and the generality of the heathen world were so fully persuaded, that the great rules for the conduct of human life must receive their authority from heaven, that their chief legislators, such as Minos, Pythagoras, Solon, Lycurgus, Numa, &c. &c. thought it not a sufficient recommendation of their laws that they were agreeable to the light of nature, unless they gave out also that they received them from God.

'Besides, the wisest and best of the heathen philosophers, particularly Socrates and Plato, were not ashamed to confess openly their sense of the want of a divine revelation, and to declare their judgment that it was most natural and truly agreeable to right reason, to hope for something of that nature.'[1]

Farther, a divine revelation was not only probable and desirable, but also absolutely necessary.

The history of past ages clearly shows, that mankind, by the mere light of nature, could never attain to any certain knowledge of the will of God, of their own true happiness, and final destiny, or recover themselves from that state of moral corruption and depravity into which they had fallen.

If we examine the writings of the most celebrated philosophers and sages of antiquity, we shall find, that they were not only ignorant of many important points in religion, but also that endless differences and inconsistencies prevailed among them with regard to points of the greatest moment; while some of them taught doctrines which directly tended to promote vice and wickedness in the world, and the influence of all in rectifying the notions and reforming the lives of mankind, was altogether ineffectual. But in order to illustrate and confirm the point, we shall advance a few particulars.

1. The ideas of the ancients respecting the being, nature, and worship of God, were dark, confused, and imperfect, often puerile and degrading.

While some philosophers asserted the being of a God, others openly denied it; others, again, embraced, or pretended to embrace, the notion of a multiplicity of gods, celestial, aerial, terrestrial, and infernal; while others represented the Deity as a corporeal being, united to matter by a necessary connection, and subject to an immutable fate. As every country had its peculiar deities, the philosophers (whatever might be their private sentiments) sanctioned and defended the religion of the state; and urged a conformity to it to be the duty of every citizen. In consequence of these discordant sentiments, the grossest polytheism and idolatry prevailed among the ancient heathen nations. They believed in the existence of many co-ordinate deities, and the number of inferior deities was infinite: they deified dead, and sometimes living persons; the former often out of injudicious gratitude, the latter usually out of base and sordid flattery. According to the vulgar estimation, there were deities that presided over every distinct nation, every distinct city, every inconsiderable town, every grove, every river, every fountain. Athens was full of statues dedicated to different deities. Imperial Rome, from political principles, adopted all the gods which were adored by the nations who had yielded to her victorious arms, and thought to eternize her empire by crowding them all into the capital. Temples and fanes were created to all the passions, diseases, fevers, and evils to which mankind are subject. Every human action, function, or even weakness, had its appropriate divinity. Suited to the various characters of their divinities were the rites of their worship. Some were vindictive and sanguinary; others were jealous, wrathful, or deceitful; and all of them were unchaste, adulterous, or incestuous. Not a few of them were monsters of the grossest vice and wickedness; and their rites were absurd, licentious, and cruel, and often consisted of mere unmixed crime, shameless dissipation, and debauchery. Prostitution, in all its deformity, was systematically annexed to various pagan temples, was often a principal source of their revenues, and was in some countries even compulsory upon the female population. Other impieties were solemnly practised by them in their temples, and in public, from the very thought of which our minds revolt. Besides the number of men who were killed in the bloody sports and spectacles instituted in honour of their deities, human sacrifices were offered to propitiate them. Boys were whipped on the altar of Diana, sometimes till they died. Multitudes of human victims, often infants, were put to death in the most shocking form, to appease their demon gods.

It does not appear that the mysteries were any thing else than occasions and nurseries of wickedness.

2. The ancients were ignorant of the true origin of the world, and of mankind.

Some of them asserted that the world existed from eternity; others admitted that the formation of the world was owing to chance; others ascribed it to a plurality of causes or authors; while those who acknowledged that it had a beginning in time, knew not by what gradations, nor in what manner the universe was raised into its present beauty and order.

3. They were ignorant of the origin of evil, and of the cause of the depravity and misery which actually exist among mankind.

'The wisest and most judicious of the heathen philosophers were not backward to complain, that they found the understandings of men so dark and cloudy, their wills so biassed and inclined to evil, their passions so outrageous and rebellious against reason, that they looked upon the rules and laws of right reason as scarcely practicable, and which they had very little hopes of ever being able to persuade the world to submit to. They saw that human nature was strangely corrupted, but at the same time they were compelled to confess, that they neither knew the origin of the disease, nor could discover a sufficient remedy. They could not assign any reason why mankind, who have the noblest faculties of any beings on earth, should yet generally pursue their own destruction with as much industry as the beasts avoid it.'[1]

4. They were ignorant of the manner in which God might be acceptably worshipped, and of the means by which such as have erred from the paths of virtue, and have offended God, might again be restored to his favour; they were utterly unable to discover any method by which a reconciliation might be effected between an offended God and his guilty creatures, and his mercy exercised without the violation of his justice. The light of nature, indeed, taught them that some kind of worship or other was due to the Supreme Being, but in what particular manner, and with what kind of service he will be worshipped, unassisted reason could never discover. Accordingly, even the best of the heathen philosophers, such as Plato and Cicero, complied with the outward superstitious religion of their country, and advised others to do the same; and while they delivered sublime and noble sentiments concerning the nature and attributes of the supreme God, they fell lamentably into the practice of the most absurd idolatry.

'The light of nature showed their guilt to the most reflecting of the ancient philosophers, but it could not show them a remedy. From the consideration of the goodness and mercifulness of God, they entertained a hope that he would show himself placable to sinners, and might in some way be reconciled; but what kind of propitiation he would be pleased to accept, and in what manner this reconciliation must be made, the light of nature could not point out. Here nature fails, and expects with impatience the aid of some particular revelation. That God will receive returning sinners, and accept of repentance, instead of perfect obedience, they cannot certainly know to whom he has not made such a revelation; or whether God will not require something farther, for the vindication of his justice, and of the honour and dignity of his laws and government, and for more effectually expressing his indignation against sin, before he will restore men to the privileges they have forfeited; they cannot be satisfactorily assured, without a special revelation: for it cannot be satisfactorily proved, from any of God's attributes, that he is absolutely obliged to pardon all the sins of all his creatures at all times, barely and immediately upon their repenting. There arises therefore, from nature, no sufficient comfort to sinners, but anxious and endless solicitude about the means of appeasing the Deity. Hence those various ways of sacrificing, and those numberless superstitions which overspread the heathen world, but which were so little satisfactory to the wiser part of mankind, even in those times of darkness, that they could not forbear frequently declaring, that they thought such rites and sacrifices could avail little or nothing towards appeasing the wrath of an offended God, or making their prayers acceptable in his sight, but that something seemed to them to be still wanting, though they knew not what.'[2]

5. They knew little or nothing regarding the necessity of divine grace, and assistance towards our attainment of virtue and perseverance in it.

'It was, indeed, a general practice among the heathens to pray to their gods; but then the things they ordinarily prayed for were only outward advantages, or what are usually called the goods of fortune: as to wisdom and virtue, they thought every man was to depend upon himself alone for obtaining them. The Stoics, who were the most eminent teachers of morals among the heathens, endeavoured to raise man to a state of absolute independency, and some of them asserted that the will of man is unconquerable by God himself. (Epictetus, b. i. chap. 1.) Seneca represents it as needless to apply to the gods by prayer, since it is in every man's own power to make himself happy; and speaking of virtue, and a uniform course of life always consistent with itself, he says, "This is the chief good, which if thou possessest, thou wilt begin to be a companion to the gods, and not a suppliant to them."'[3]

6. They had but dark and confused notions of the summum bonum, or supreme felicity of man.

On this topic, Cicero tells us, there was such a disagreement among the ancient philosophers, that it was almost impossible to enumerate their different sentiments, while he at the same time states the opinions of more than twenty philosophers, all of which are equally extravagant and absurd.

7. They had but weak and imperfect notions of the immortality of the soul.

'The existence of the soul after death was denied by many of the Peripatetics, or followers of Aristotle, and this doctrine seems to have been disbelieved by Aristotle himself. The Stoics had no settled or consistent scheme on this head, nor had the doctrine of the immortality of the soul any prominent place among the tenets of their sect. But even among those philosophers who expressly taught this doctrine, considerable doubt and uncertainty appear to have prevailed. Thus Socrates, a little before his death, tells his friends, "I am now about to leave this world, and ye are still to continue in it: which of us shall have the better part allotted to us, God only knows;" from the scope of which passage, it appears, that he was doubtful whether he should have any existence after death or not. And again, at the end of his admirable discourse concerning the immortality of the soul, he said to his friends, who came to pay him their last visit, "I would have you to know, that I have great hopes that I am now going into the company of good men; yet I would not be too presumptuous and confident concerning it." In his apology to his judges, he comforts himself with the consideration "that there is much ground to hope that death is good; for it must necessarily be one of these two; either the dead man is nothing, and has not a sense of any thing; or it is only a change or migration of the soul hence to another place, according to what we are told. If there is no sense left, and death is like a profound sleep and quiet rest without dreams, it is wonderful to think what gain it is to die; but if the things which are told us are true, that death is a migration to another place, this is still a much greater good."'[1]

'The same doubts were entertained by Plato, the most eminent of the disciples of Socrates. Cicero, who ranks among the most eminent of the heathen philosophers, laboured under the same uncertainty. After having advanced a number of excellent arguments in behalf of this doctrine, and stated several opinions concerning the return and duration of the soul, he says, "Which of these two opinions is true, (that the soul is mortal or immortal), God only knows, and which of these is most probable, is a very great question."'—Cic. Tuscul. Quæst. b. i. In another place he says, 'I know not how, when I read the arguments in proof of the soul's immortality, methinks I am fully convinced, and yet after I have laid aside the book, and come to think and consider of the matter, alone by myself, presently I find myself slip again insensibly into my old doubts.'—Ibid. 'While these great men and their followers were perplexed with doubts on this great point, others of the heathens entertained the most gloomy notions, some imagining that they should, after death, be removed from one body into another and be perpetual wanderers, and others contemplating the grave as an eternal habitation, and death as the complete termination of man's existence.'[2]

8. The ancient philosophers attained to no certainty respecting the eternal rewards and punishments of a future state, and of the resurrection of the body.

The poets indeed celebrated, in sublime and beautiful verse, the joys of Elysium, or a state and place of future bliss, and painted in dismal colours the miseries of Tartarus, or hell; but these were only regarded as fabulous representations: and although the philosophers and legislators were sensible of the importance and necessity of the doctrine of future punishments as well as rewards, to the well being of society, yet, strange as it may seem, they in general discarded this doctrine, and represented all fears of future punishment as vain and superstitious. Polybius complains that in his time the belief of a future state was rejected by the great men and by the bulk of the people, and to this disbelief he ascribes the great corruption of manners; but even while Polybius blames the great men among the Greeks for encouraging the people to disbelieve and despise future punishments, he himself represents them as only useful fictions. Cæsar also treated the notions respecting future punishments as fables, and Pliny, the naturalist, represents them as childish and senseless fictions of mortals who were ambitious of never-ending existence.

As to the resurrection of the body, neither the philosophers, nor the common people among the Greeks and Romans, seem to have had any notion of it. For although their poets made frequent mention of the ghosts of departed men appearing in a visible form, and retaining in the shades below their former shapes, yet by such representations, if they mean any thing, they mean no more than that the soul, after this life, passes into another state, and is there invested with a body made up of light aerial particles, quite different from those of which the former body had been composed. When St Paul at Athens spoke of the resurrection of the dead, we are told his hearers mocked or treated it with contempt as a strange doctrine, (Acts xvii. 18, 20, 32.) The Epicureans and Stoics are particularly mentioned in this passage, but the other sects of philosophers, even those who argued most for the immortality of the soul, held the doctrine of the resurrection of the body in contempt. They could not conceive that the gross matter which they saw laid in the grave, or reduced to ashes on the funeral pile, or blown away by the winds and scattered in the air, should ever be raised or collected again and revivified: neither did those who argued for the immortality of the soul, believe that the resurrection of the body, if it were possible, was desirable; for they looked upon the body as the prison of the soul, and considered that the happiness of the soul consisted in its being loosed and disengaged from the body.

When therefore we consider the ignorance and uncertainty which prevailed among some of the greatest teachers of antiquity, respecting those great and fundamental truths which are the chief barriers of virtue and religion, it appears certain that the heathens had no perfect system of moral rules for the conduct of life, or for the promotion of piety. Thus most of the philosophers accounted revenge to be not only lawful but commendable. Pride and the love of popular applause were esteemed the best and greatest incentives to virtue and noble actions: suicide was regarded as the strongest mark of heroism, and the perpetrators of it celebrated as men of noble minds. Theft, as is well known, was permitted in Egypt and in Sparta. Plato taught the expedience and lawfulness of exposing children in particular cases. The exposure of infants, and the putting to death of children who were weak or imperfect in form, was permitted at Sparta by Lycurgus. At Athens the women were treated and disposed of as slaves; and it was enacted that infants which appeared to be maimed should either be killed or exposed. Nothing could exceed the cruelties which were exercised against slaves both among the Greeks and Romans. Among the Spartans they were not only generally treated with great harshness and insolence, but it was part of their policy to massacre them on several occasions, in cold blood, and without provocation; the gratification of the sensual appetites, and of the most unnatural lusts, was openly taught and allowed.

Such being the character of the heathen gods, and such the nature of the worship offered them, it is not surprising that their morals corresponded. Indeed it would be very surprising if they were any thing else. Their own base character formed that of their deities, and was strengthened and nursed by being perverted into a religious affection and duty. It is sufficient to say that numberless testimonies from their own writers, as well as the remains of their acts that have come down to us, such as those disentombed from the ruins of ancient cities, fully and amply verify the description of St Paul in the first chapter of his epistle to the Romans, viz.; 'Because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things. Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonour their own bodies between themselves: who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen. For this cause God gave them up to vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature: and likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompence of their error which was meet. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient; being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding, covenant-breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful: who knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them,' Rom. i. 21—32.

There were, indeed, among the heathens some few philosophers who cherished better principles and inculcated comparatively purer tenets than those already alluded to; and no doubt these men were raised up and designed by God, who never left himself wholly without witness, as instruments to reprove, in some measure, and put some kind of check to the extreme superstition and wickedness of the nations in which they lived, or at least to bear witness against, and condemn these nations. But still the instructions of these individuals were very defective and inefficient. They never were able to reform the world, or to keep together any considerable number of men in the knowledge and practice of virtue. Their precepts were delivered to their own immediate pupils, and not to the lower orders of people, who constitute the great mass of society. Besides, the ethical systems of the philosophers were too refined for the common people, most of their discourses upon morals being rather speculative and learned, nice and subtle disputes, than practical and universally useful instructions; and even those things of which they were not only certain themselves, but which they were also able to prove and explain to others with sufficient plainness and clearness, such as are the most obvious and necessary duties of life, they had not sufficient authority to enforce and inculcate upon men's minds so as to influence and govern the general practice of the world. The truths which they proved by speculative reasoning wanted still more sensible authority to back them, and make them of more force and efficacy in practice; and the precepts which they laid down, however reasonable and fit to be obeyed, were still destitute of weight, and were but the precepts of men. They could present no motives sufficiently powerful to animate men's minds and stimulate them to the practice of true virtue, and support them under the trials and calamities of life. In fact, the philosophers never did nor could effect any remarkable change in the minds and lives of men such as was undeniably produced by the preaching of Christ and his apostles. In the original uncorrupted state of human nature, before the mind of man was depraved with false and erroneous opinions, corrupt affections, and vicious inclinations, customs and habits, right reason may be supposed to have been a sufficient guide and a principle powerful enough to preserve men in the constant practice of their duty. But in the present circumstances and condition of mankind, unassisted reason is altogether insufficient to accomplish this end. In short, the heathen philosophy was every way defective and erroneous, and if there was any thing excellent or commendable in it, there is great reason to believe that it was not the genuine result of the mental efforts of the philosophers, but derived from a higher source, even from very ancient traditions, to which they themselves usually assigned a divine original, or from scattered portions of the revelations contained in the scriptures, with which they had become acquainted through various channels.

If we direct our attention to the heathen nations of the present age, such as Tartary, the Philippine islands, many parts of Africa, China, and Hindostan, we learn, from the unanimous testimony of navigators and travellers, that they are enveloped in the grossest ignorance and idolatry, and that their religious worship, doctrines, and practices are equally corrupt with those of the Pagan nations of antiquity; yet they also possess the same light of reason which the ancient heathens enjoyed. With regard to Hindostan in particular, the polytheism is of the grossest and most debasing kind. There are not fewer than three hundred and thirty millions of deities claiming the adoration of their votaries! The rites are the most impure, the penances the most toilsome, the modes of self-torture almost innumerable, and as extraordinary and as exquisite a degree as human nature can sustain. The burning or burying of widows, infanticide, the immersion of the sick or dying in the Ganges, and self-devotement or destruction by the idol Juggernaut, are among the horrid practices which flow from the system of idolatry established among them, and which are exceeded in folly and ferocity by none to which paganism has given birth. The manifest effects of this system are an immersion into the grossest moral darkness, and an universal corruption of manners.—Asiatic Researches, vol. viii. And yet the inhabitants of Hindostan are highly celebrated for their progress in the useful arts, and for intellectual acuteness.

In addition to the ordinary sources of information on this subject, such as Leland on the Advantage and Necessity of the Christian Revelation, Horne's Introduction, Clarke's Evidences of Natural and Revealed Religion, and the like, we would earnestly recommend, as containing the most ample proof on the state of modern pagan nations, the Lecture of the Rev. J. G. Lorimer of Glasgow, being the first of a course on the Evidences of Revealed Religion by ministers of Glasgow.

But notwithstanding all this mass of evidences in favour of the necessity of a divine revelation, it has been asserted by modern deists, that the book of nature is the only book to be studied, and that philosophy and right reason are sufficient to instruct and to preserve men in their duty. They cannot deny that great ignorance and corruption prevailed in the whole heathen world, but they contend that the ignorance and corruption of former ages have always been owing, not to any absolute insufficiency of the light of nature itself, but to the fault of the several particular persons in not sufficiently improving that light; and that deists now, in places where learning and right reason are cultivated, are well able to discover and explain all the obligations and motives of morality, without the aid of a revelation.

'But granting it to be true that all the obligations and notions of morality could possibly be discovered and explained clearly by the mere light of nature alone, yet even this would not at all prove that there is no need of revelation. For whatever the bare natural possibility was, it is certain that the wisest philosophers of old never were able to discover and explain those obligations and duties to any effectual purpose, but always willingly acknowledged that they still wanted some higher assistance. And as to the great pretences of modern deists, it is to be observed that the clearness of moral reasonings was much improved, and the regard to a future state very much increased even among heathen writers after the coming of Christ, and almost all the things that have been said wisely and truly by modern deists, are plainly borrowed from that revelation which they refuse to embrace, and without which they could never have been able to say the same things. They have thus been guided by a torch snatched from the temple of God, while both they and their followers idly imagine their path is illuminated by light of their own creating. Even the possibility of discovering and explaining all the necessary obligations and motives of morality, by the mere light of reason, we deny; for there are several truths of the highest importance to the happiness of men, such as the method in which God might be acceptably worshipped, the way in which he would be reconciled to returning sinners, and a future state of rewards and punishments, which could never have been discovered with any certainty by unassisted reason. Now, indeed, when our whole duty with its true motives is clearly revealed to us, its precepts appear plainly agreeable to reason, and conscience readily approves what is good, as it condemns what is evil. Nay, after our duty is thus made known to us, it is easy, not only to see its agreement with reason, but also to begin and deduce its obligations from reason; but if we had been destitute of all revealed light, the discovery of our duty in all points by the mere light of nature, would have been a work of extreme difficulty; it would have been like groping for an unknown path in the obscure twilight. And what ground have these modern worshippers of reason to imagine, that if they themselves had lived without the light of revelation, they should have been wiser than Socrates, and Plato, and Cicero? How are they certain they should have made such a proper use of their reason, as to have discovered the truth exactly, without being in any degree led aside by prejudice or neglect? If their lot had been among the vulgar, how are they sure they would not have been involved in idolatry and superstition? If they had joined themselves to the philosophers, which sect would they have chosen to follow? Or if they should have set up for themselves, how are they certain that they would have been skilful enough to have deduced the several branches of their duty, or to have applied them to the several cases of life by argumentation and force of reasoning? It is one thing to perceive that those rules of life, which are beforehand plainly laid before us, are perfectly agreeable to reason, and another thing to discover such rules merely by the light of nature. But suppose that these idolizers of reason could by strength of reason alone demonstrate to themselves all the necessary truths of religion, with the utmost clearness and distinctness, yet all men are not equally capable of being philosophers, though all men are equally obliged to be religious. At least this much is certain, that the rewards and punishments of another world cannot be so powerfully enforced, in order to influence the lives and practices of all sorts of men, by one who shall undertake to demonstrate the reality of them from abstract reasoning, as by one who shall assure mankind of the truth and certainty of these things, by showing sufficient credentials of his having been commissioned by God for that purpose.'[1]

Besides, the contradictory and discordant speculations of the modern opposers of revelation, who boast that reason is their God, are so great, and so glaring, and the precepts delivered by them for a rule of life are so utterly subversive of every principle of morality, as to demonstrate the absolute necessity of a divine revelation now (supposing one never had been given), in order to lead men to the knowledge and worship of the true God, and also to impart to them the knowledge of their duties to him and towards one another. If we consult the writings of those, who, in the last century, claimed to be received as the masters of reason, and the opposers of revelation, we shall find ample confirmation of the truth of this remark.[2]

ON THE GENUINENESS AND AUTHENTICITY OF THE SCRIPTURES.

The advantage and necessity of a divine revelation being proved, there arises an antecedent probability from the character of God as a Being of infinite wisdom, goodness, and mercy, viewed in connection with the character and condition of man, that such a revelation would be given. A question then of great importance occurs as to the fact whether such a revelation has been made. To the determining of this question there is a preliminary one whose solution is indispensably necessary, viz. whether the series of books in which this revelation is communicated were in reality written by the authors whose names they bear, or whether they are not the spurious invention of a later age. In other words, we are called to ascertain the genuineness and authenticity of the sacred writings. In doing this we shall avail ourselves of a condensed summary of the argument to be found in the second of the Lectures already recommended. It is ably drawn up by the Rev. Patrick Fairbairn:—

'The expressions "genuineness and authenticity" have not been uniformly applied to the Scriptures in precisely the same sense; but, to prevent all ambiguity, what we mean by their being genuine is, that they are true and veritable productions—not forged or falsified documents, but written substantially as they now appear, at the time and by the persons they profess to be; and by their being authentic, we mean that the affirmations they make and the facts they record are not feigned, but real; and that they are to be depended on as sound and competent sources of information, so that the inquiry before us divides itself into two distinct parts: in the first of which we are to prove that the books of Scripture, to use the words of another, "were written in the age to which they are usually assigned, and by the authors to whom they are commonly attributed, and that, in the course of their transmission to us, they have suffered no material corruption;" and in the second, that the authors of those books "wrote what they believed to be true, and possessed authentic information on the subjects of which they wrote."

'I. The first thing to be proved is, that the books of Scripture were written in the age to which they are usually assigned, and by the authors to whom they are commonly attributed; and that, in the course of their transmission to us, they have suffered no material corruption.

'Had the art of printing been as ancient as the books of Scripture, this proposition would scarcely have been thought, even by the most sceptical, to require any special proof. That fruitful invention has rendered impracticable a systematic forgery or extensive corruption of published writings; but as it is an invention that was unknown no farther back than four centuries ago, and as, previous to that period, all works, whether sacred or profane, were preserved in manuscripts, and these entirely withdrawn from the scrutiny of public opinion, in the hands of a few learned men who lived chiefly in the silent shade of cloisters and monasteries, it is conceived more than likely that many unwarrantable liberties may have been taken with the remains of ancient authors, and that, especially when the ends of an interested priesthood were to be advanced by the fraud, many old writings may have been falsified, and many new ones composed under feigned pretensions to antiquity—much in the same manner as the Indian priests are known more recently to have deceived Europeans with corrupted and spurious documents to support their incredible claims to antiquity in science and history.

'But though this suspicion has gained much credit with some opponents of Revelation, and has even been raised into a mighty argument sufficient to shake the credit, if not completely to undermine the authority, of the whole of Scripture; it is one that owes all the weight it may possess to ignorance, and utterly disappears before the light of candid and serious inquiry. It is a suspicion not only destitute of any proper foundation, but borne down by a mass of evidence so complete and overwhelming, that it might safely be left unnoticed as the wildest absurdity, were it not for the opportunity which the investigation of the subject affords of placing in full relief the soundness and integrity of the sacred writings.

'1st, For even supposing we had nothing of an external nature to vindicate the genuineness of these writings; supposing they had survived the ignorance and barbarity of the dark ages only in one single copy, of the precise age and correctness of which we had no historical information, we are met, first of all, by the absolute impossibility of accounting for such a number and variety of writings, all carrying such an air of genuineness as to satisfy the most careful readers, nay, the most experienced critics, otherwise than by supposing them to be the offspring of sincerity and truth. If they had been feigned, or essentially incorrect, the utmost skill or learning, combined with the most patient elaboration, could never have produced them as they are. There is something in the style, the manner, the allusions, the whole texture, we may say, of genuine productions, which irresistibly commends itself to the taste and discernment of a judicious reader; and something also of an opposite nature in much corrupted or entirely spurious productions, which unavoidably leaves the impression of forgery and deceit. Many imitations were attempted of the ancient classics, by persons who had much leisure for the work, and at periods when none were interested, and comparatively few able to detect the imposture; and yet in every instance the attempt has signally failed; the genuine has been discriminated from the false, and for the most part with so much ease as neither to have produced any disputation, nor to have left any difference of opinion among the learned. There have also been handed down to us from the dark ages that produced them, various imitations both of the Old and the New Testament Scriptures, claiming the authority sometimes of an apostle, sometimes of a prophet, sometimes even of Christ himself, but so palpably inferior to the received Scriptures in simplicity, in propriety of matter and expression, and in the general appearance of truthfulness, as to require no proof of their spurious character. And to look only to the New Testament writings, which consist of twenty-seven separate productions, and bear to have proceeded from the pens of eight different writers—composed too in a style peculiar to the age and country in which they profess to have appeared, but to no other either before or since—abounding, moreover, with the most frequent and familiar allusions to circumstances of time and place, to public characters and current events, and breathing in every page the unconstrained freedom, the artless simplicity, and fervent pathos, which characterize the productions of sincere and honest men:—If so much as one or two of these productions had been the lying fabrication of a later age, it would have been a miracle of art, such as has not certainly been achieved in any other department of ancient learning; but that the whole or any considerable portion of the New Testament writings should have been the counterfeit of other writers and another age, were a miracle fit only for the credulity of fools or of madmen.

'2d, We say this of the books of Scripture on the lowest possible supposition, on the supposition that we were destitute of all external evidence in their support, and had received them only in a single manuscript, (which is literally the case with more than one ancient production, of the genuineness of which there is yet no doubt entertained by any person of sound judgment or of accurate learning); but we remark, secondly, That there is no need of making such a supposition, there is such an immense number of manuscript copies of the sacred writings, and some of these of such high antiquity, as to afford an abundant proof of their genuineness. There is not by any means so great a difference as might at first thought be imagined between the certainty and correctness with which a writing may be preserved and ascertained to be genuine, through means of manuscripts, and that with which it is now done through means of printed books. If we not only possess manuscript copies in considerable numbers, but know besides that they were written and preserved with care, and that through a long succession of ages, reaching back to a period not far distant from the time when the book in question was originally composed, we possess nearly as good a warrant for its safe transmission as if it had been conveyed to us through the "immortal custody of the press." Now we know, from many independent sources of information, that before the invention of printing, and during the long period of what are called the dark ages, an immense trade was carried on in the copying of manuscripts, and that it led to the existence of a distinct profession, in which, as in every other profession, persons could only expect to find employment by the fidelity and skill with which they performed their work. But besides these professional scribes, there were many others who engaged in the work of transcribing manuscripts, especially in transcribing the books of Scripture and other religious works—men of rank and distinction, to fill up their leisure hours with what they deemed at once an honourable and a profitable employment—men of piety, to increase the communications of divine truth; and great multitudes belonging to the monastic orders, who considered themselves bound to have a regular portion of their time spent in this work of transcription. Nor are we without means of ascertaining to what particular age the manuscripts produced by these manifold labourers respectively belong. For numbers of them, like our modern books, have expressed upon them the date of the year when they were finished; others have the name of the emperor then reigning, or a notice of some remarkable events which had lately occurred; and in many others, where these notes of time are awanting, marks abundantly determinate are to be found, both in the style of writing and embellishment, which differed materially at the distance of every century or two, and in the substance of which the manuscripts themselves were composed; for nearly all the manuscripts that now exist of the first five centuries were written on parchment, prepared from sheep and goat skins—after which, for a few centuries more, they are found chiefly of Egyptian paper, until, about the middle of the ninth or the beginning of the tenth century, a paper manufactured from cotton came into general use, and continued to hold its ground till the invention of printing, and the general revival of learning.

'Now what is the fruit of all this labour of former generations, and our knowledge concerning it, as touching the subject of our present inquiry? The fruit is, that at the revival of learning in the fifteenth century, when copies of the Jewish and Christian Scriptures, as well as of other ancient writings, were diligently sought for to be committed to the press, they were found diffused through almost every part of the known world, in point of number far surpassing the copies that existed of any classic author; and that of these manuscripts, containing the whole or a portion of the Scriptures, some have ascertained, from the marks already noticed, to have been written as early as the second or third century; some in the third or fourth; and not a few undoubtedly before the eighth, that is, before the dark ages, properly so called, began to exist. In this great antiquity and immense variety of manuscript copies of the sacred Scriptures, we are furnished with the most satisfactory proof of their genuineness, as opposed, on the one hand, to the supposition of their being the spurious inventions of a later age, and on the other, to their having been debased by any extensive or material corruptions. That considerable errors might have crept into the text, had it been preserved to us only in a very few copies, is more than probable, but that such vast numbers should have agreed together in any errors of importance is not to be conceived. The more especially, if we take into account the high estimation and profound reverence in which the books of Scripture were ever held both by the copyists who transcribed and the Christians who read them. Both alike made them the object of a regard so sacred that it often degenerated into superstitious veneration, and must always have been accompanied with an anxious desire to have the text given in its purity; and in regard to the Jewish Scriptures in particular, with such scrupulous care and exactness were they transcribed, that the very letters of each book were numbered, and the central letter marked—so that corruption to any extent, whether from design or oversight, became utterly impracticable.

3d, We go on to adduce, as a third argument for the genuineness of the inspired Scriptures, the early versions, which were made of them into various languages, and which have been handed down to us along with the original Scriptures. Of the Jewish Scriptures, there was, first of all, the Septuagint Greek version, executed between two and three centuries before Christ, most extensively circulated, read both in the Jewish synagogues and in the Christian churches, and occasionally referred to even by heathen authors; then, about or shortly after the coming of Christ, appeared some of the Chaldee paraphrases, for the use of those Jews who did not understand either pure Hebrew or Greek; after which no fewer than three versions in Greek (those of Aquila, Theodotion, and Symmachus) were executed of the Jewish Scriptures, all between the middle of the second and beginning of the third century after the Christian era; of which many fragments have come down to us, though as a whole they have perished. Besides these versions of the Jewish Scriptures, there were many versions successively executed of the whole Bible, and some of them at a very early period: the old Latin or Italic, which was used throughout all the western parts of the Roman empire, and appears to have been in general use near the commencement of the second century; the Syriac, which was executed about the same period, and is used to this day among many churches in the East; the Latin version of Jerome, commonly called the Vulgate, finished by that learned man about the close of the fourth century, and shortly after that time used almost exclusively in the Western or Latin church; and at later periods versions into the Arabic, Armenian, Gothic, Ethiopian, Coptic, and Persian languages.

'Now that a book should have existed in so many separate and independent languages, commencing nearly with the earliest and reaching down through all the subsequent periods of its existence, is a proof of genuineness which can be produced in favour of no other ancient writing, and is sufficient of itself to put the question before us entirely to rest. These versions afford at once an indisputable proof of the antiquity of the original Scriptures, and an attestation of their purity; for executed as they were at such different periods, by so many different hands, and into such a variety of languages, and of these not a few long since ceased to be living, there was manifestly no room for collusion, while yet these several versions have all the agreement that could be expected, and are indeed substantially the same with our present Bibles. It is in the last degree incredible that, when countries so widely apart and languages so numerous were concerned, forgery and corruption could have accomplished such a result.

'4th, But to render this impossibility still more manifest, and as another incontestable proof of the genuineness of the books of Scripture, we must take into account the divided and hostile state of those through whom, whether as originals or as versions, they have been preserved and handed down to modern times. These books, since the first period almost of their existence, have been in the keeping, not of one party, but of several parties who were opposed to each other in matters of faith, and exercised over each other a watchful jealousy in regard to what they mutually respected as the only rule of faith. At a very early period, while the Jews were the sole depositaries of the word of God, they were parted asunder into two rival kingdoms, and after the return from Babylon, when one nation alone survived, not only did that one itself split into two hostile sects, those of the Pharisees and the Sadducees, who differed widely from each other in their views of Scripture, but the neighbouring nation of the Samaritans, in regard at least to the books of Moses, stood entirely apart from the Jews as keepers of these sacred books, and have preserved them with so much fidelity and care, that though for nearly 3000 years they have had no friendly intercourse with the Jews, and had their Scriptures written all along in a different character, yet the copies that have been preserved of these are substantially the same with the Jewish Scriptures. Then after Christianity began, the animosity that subsisted between Jews and Christians, and the spirit of controversy which they mutually cherished, caused each party to act as a vigilant guardian toward the other respecting the safe and incorrupt preservation of the Scriptures, on which they alike depended for the justification of their views. And within the bosom of the Christian church itself, since less than half a century from its first establishment, there have never been awanting sects and divisions, all forming so many separate communities, and keeping upon each other a jealous eye, lest any change should be introduced into the sacred text to suit the views of their opponents. So that what has ever been the reproach of the Church, has at the same time ever proved the safeguard of Scripture; and, by an extraordinary coincidence, the worst as well as the best feelings, the perversity as well as the piety of human nature, have been alike serviceable in preventing the possibility of fraud or forgery in the word of God, and throwing a fence of triple security around the sacredness of its contents.

'5th, Another, and the only remaining proof we shall allege of the genuineness of the books of Scripture, is taken from the references and allusions made to them by authors who lived near and subsequent to the time of their publication, the quotations expressly made from them by these authors, and the works written upon them. This argument of itself contains far more than enough to place beyond all reasonable doubt the genuineness of Scripture, though it is obviously of a kind that requires to be exhibited in detail to be duly appreciated, and can be but very faintly represented in a brief outline like the present. In regard to the Jewish Scriptures, no references indeed are to be found in other authors till a comparatively late period, partly from the great antiquity of the books themselves and partly from the singular and isolated character of the nation to which they belonged. By Tacitus and other heathen writers, who lived near or shortly after the time of our Lord's appearance, we find mention made of the fact of their existence, and of the great veneration in which they were held by the Jewish people. And in two Jewish authors, who lived much about the same period, Josephus the historian, and Philo the Alexandrian Jew, we are furnished, in their surviving works, with a vast body of references to the books of the Old Testament. But what should be still more satisfactory, the New Testament Scriptures abound not only with general allusions to those of the Old Testament, but with plain and direct notices of almost every individual book, and ample quotations from them. By which means the Scriptures of the Old Testament became in a manner incorporated with those of the New—were thus stamped as genuine and authentic records at the commencement of the Christian era, and so partake in the evidence which is yielded by the testimonies of subsequent writers to the books of the New Testament. And the want of any external testimonies of this description to the Old Testament Scriptures themselves, prior to the Christian era, was well nigh if not wholly compensated by the character of those Scriptures themselves, as connected with the Jewish people, in whose keeping they were placed; inasmuch as they contain such severe censures upon the conduct of the Jews, and laid upon them such heavy burdens, and were in all respects so little adapted to gratify the natural pride and corruption of their hearts, that they could have had no possible motive to preserve and hand down such books to posterity apart from the veneration they had for them as the word of God.

'But to come to the New Testament Scriptures, which, if received as genuine and authentic, may be said to carry along with them the genuineness and authenticity of those of the Old Testament—to these there is a twofold series of references, both of the most complete and satisfactory kind. There are first the testimonies of heathen authors; not merely the passing allusions of such authors as Tacitus and Suetonius, to the facts of gospel history, referred to by them incidentally in their histories of Roman transactions; but the testimonies of such men as Celsus, who wrote a book against Christianity, only about 100 years after the Gospels and most of the books of the New Testament were written, who there refers to these Gospels, and acknowledges them to have been written by the first disciples of Jesus—makes such quotations from them, and particularizes so minutely the facts recorded in them, as to put it beyond a doubt that the Gospels then in use were the very same with those we now possess; and Porphyry, who in the third century endeavoured to do what Celsus had attempted in the second—like him also in the course of his work against Christianity, of which a few fragments only remain, referring familiarly to the names, and quoting the very words of the Evangelists as we still have them; and, in the next century, the emperor Julian, who in like manner notices, in the surviving fragments of his work, our present Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles as writings well known and of authority with the Christians. These confessions, from the pens of acute and learned adversaries, are of the highest importance in determining the genuineness of a portion, at least, of the New Testament Scriptures; proving, as they incontestably do, that the same gospels, which are current now in the Christian Church, were current then; and that no doubt even then was entertained or could be thrown upon their soundness and integrity as genuine productions.

'The other series of testimonies consists of the writings of Christian authors, in which are to be found innumerable references to the books of Scripture, and from which may be drawn an unbroken chain of evidence, from the apostles downwards, in support of their genuineness. We are able to produce, of this class, the epistles of Barnabas and Clement, both of them the fellow-labourers of the apostle Paul, in which they once and again refer to the Gospels as acknowledged Scripture, and quote from them in the very words which we still find in them; the epistles of Ignatius, who flourished while some of the apostles were still living, and the epistle of Polycarp, who had been taught by the apostles and conversed with many who had seen Christ; in the former of which are various quotations from the Gospels, while in the latter, short as it is, there occur no fewer than forty clear allusions to the Gospels and the epistles of Paul; the writings of Justin Martyr, who was converted to Christianity before the middle of the second century, which are filled with references to most of the books of the New Testament;—then, to omit others of inferior note, we have, still in the second century, the five books of Irenæus against heresies, in which all the historical books and fourteen of the epistles are expressly named and referred to as authorities; and the voluminous works of Tertullian, of which it has been said by a most competent witness, that they contain "perhaps more and longer quotations of the small volume of the New Testament, than are to be found of all the works of Cicero, though of such uncommon excellence for thought and style, in the writers of all characters for several ages."

'In the third century we have a whole host of authors, quoting, illustrating, and commenting upon the books of Scripture, which increase to a still greater number in the fourth century, before the close of which catalogues of the entire number of those books, corresponding exactly to our own, were published, translations made of them, harmonies, discourses, commentaries, and histories published, controversies handled, and decrees of councils issued concerning them. Nor did the work stay, but continued onwards from age to age, till the whole world was in a manner filled with its fruits. So that we have here a mighty flood of evidence to attest the genuine origin and continued purity of Scripture, great even at the outset, and constantly swelling, as it proceeds, with the researches and inquiries of every succeeding age. It is not that we have a scattered reference or two in a variety of independent and successive writers to the books of Scripture, (which is more however than can be said of many of our most esteemed classics,) but that there is an entire body of literature of vast extent, all growing out of these books as its common root, and directed toward their elucidation as its common end—a literature which received its contributions from every region of the civilized world, and overspread all lands with its multifarious productions. There is nothing in the whole history of ancient learning that can once be compared to this; and, in the face of such overwhelming proof, to doubt the genuineness of the books of Scripture, were not only to resist the soundest conclusions of history, but to deny the sufficiency of all historical evidence, and regard whatsoever is past as impossible to be ascertained.

'This argument alone, if rightly weighed, must be sufficient to produce conviction in every mind of candour and intelligence. And yet we have produced other four, which carry every one apart a most conclusive proof of the point we are seeking to establish. But, when we put them all together, and assert that in the books of Scripture there is every internal evidence, from the style, the allusions, and the manner, that could be desired of their having been written at the time and by the persons they profess to be (the first);—that they have been preserved to us in an immense multitude of manuscripts, some of them of very high antiquity, and in number immeasurably surpassing the copies we possess of any other ancient writing (the second);—that from the earliest periods versions were made of them into many other languages, which versions also have been preserved, though several of them in languages that have long since ceased to be spoken, and all substantially agreeing with our present Scriptures (the third);—that both these versions and the original Scriptures have been, nearly from the very first, in the hands of parties opposed to each other on points of doctrine, yet equally seeking the justification of their views in the plain letter of Scripture, and consequently exercising over each other in this respect a careful and jealous oversight (the fourth);—finally, that they were not only referred to at an early period, and allowed to be genuine by heathen and infidel writers, but gave birth to a new and most extensive range of literature, of which they were themselves all along the groundwork and the kernel;—when we can advance all this in support of the Scriptures not being the spurious aftergrowth of fraud and corruption, but the true and genuine productions of the apostolic age, we bring forward such a superabundance of proof as can leave no shadow of doubt in the mind of any one who will calmly apply himself to meditate the subject, if indeed he be not underlying such a moral impotence as unfits him for appreciating the force of evidence. But even this does not reach to the whole of the argument which we are warranted to press in behalf of the Scriptures. For, in addition to all the evidence adduced, there is the clearest ground to believe, that through all ages they have been publicly read and expounded in the churches, wheresoever planted, so that every member of these churches, through successive generations, may be appealed to as a witness of their early existence and acknowledged verity. They led, through the glorious facts they revealed and the lofty principles they advocated, to the overthrow of heathenish idolatry, throughout the wide domain of the Roman world, so that every ruined temple and every relic of deserted Paganism is another testimony to the same. Through the feelings which they produced and the changes they originated, they were the occasion of many of the most violent contests and bloody persecutions which desolated, age after age, the civilized world, so that every record of these bygone events affords another testimony to the same. Through the higher views which they opened up, and the new relations which they established, and the better spirit which they diffused, they led to the introduction of another style of society, and gave birth to new institutions, new customs, new buildings; so that in the laws, the manners, the establishments, the very architecture, of modern kingdoms, we have additional testimonies and enduring monuments of the same. These gradual and mighty changes were all the offspring of the progressive spread of divine truth taught in the Bible and from the Bible, and the renovating influence which accompanied the diffusion of its sublime doctrines. Without it we want the only key that can explain either the present condition or the past history of the largest portion of Christendom; and after all this, we may surely ask, what more could reason demand, or the most suspecting faith require, to assure itself of the proper origin and essential uncorruptness of the books of Scripture?

'II. We come now to the second branch of our subject, in which we were to prove that the authors of these books wrote what they believed to be true, and possessed authentic information on the subjects of which they wrote.

'This follows as a necessary conclusion from the genuineness of Scripture, which being admitted, no lengthened proof is required to establish the other. But before we draw this conclusion, let the remark be borne in mind, as to the nature of the religion taught in Scripture, which in substance has been often made, and is thus well expressed by the author formerly quoted, that "Judaism first, and Christianity not less, were religions of historical facts: the doctrines and the laws were only inferences arising naturally from the belief of certain memorable events, and from the expectation of other events yet to take place; the record of the past was at once the rule of duty and the charter of hope." It is evident, therefore, that in an inquiry like the present, by far the highest importance attaches to those parts of Scripture which contain the record of the facts whereon the religion was founded and out of which it grew; that is, in the case of the Jewish religion, the four last books of Moses—in the case of the Christian, the four Gospels, and perhaps also the first part of the Acts of the Apostles. What in the former case the priests and prophets taught, so far as it concerned the ancient worshippers, was not any thing different from what was to be found in the books of Moses, but only the reinforcement of the same principles and duties, of which the obligation was then established; and what in the latter case was taught by the apostles, whether by word of mouth or by epistle, was in like manner nothing more than the reassertion of the facts of Gospel history, or the explanation of those facts in their reference to God's government and man's condition, or finally, the inculcation of those principles and duties to which the belief of the same facts directly and inevitably led. So that when we speak of the authenticity of the books of Scripture, we refer pre-eminently to those parts which narrate the all-important facts that form the groundwork and marrow of the whole, and we assert that the testimonies therein recorded of them were the testimonies of men who at once knew and believed the truth of what they testified.

'Now, that such is the character justly claimed for these testimonies—that the record contained in the books of Scripture, of the facts which constitute the foundation of divine truth as there revealed, is the record of truth and faithfulness, follows by a direct and necessary inference from the genuineness of the books in question. Admit that these books were the productions of the men to whom they are ascribed, and put forth at the time to which they are commonly attributed, and we are bound to admit the correctness and veracity of their statements. That such books, containing an account of the birth, life, death, and resurrection of Christ, (to confine our attention to the Christian Scriptures) followed up by a series of epistles explaining, applying, and enforcing the many solemn considerations which naturally flowed from these singular events, all written by persons who were either eye-witnesses of the events, or intimately conversant with them, and committed to the people who lived in the same generation and neighbourhood in which the events were transacted; that that generation and the next should have received these writings uncontradicted, unchallenged—received them by thousands to the fullest credit and confidence—while innumerable witnesses and memorials were at hand to expose the falsehood, if there had been no reality in the things asserted; that the same writings should pass down to the next and coming generations with this high authority, incidentally referred to by other writings, and the statements they contain assumed as unquestionable verities; admitting all this, which is simply admitting the genuineness of the chief part of the New Testament Scriptures, there is no possible way of accounting for it but by allowing the truth of the statements. The question is not, whether the authors of these books may not have been themselves deceived, or intended to deceive others, in the story which they published, but how a story made up of so many particulars, touching on so many incidents, exposed on every side to detection if untrue, should have passed the ordeal of so many inquirers, at once interested to know and with ample opportunities to ascertain the truth, and have been from them transmitted to posterity with the unqualified seal of their belief and acceptance. If it might be possible that the apostles were willing to deceive, it could never be either the inclination or the interest of such multitudes to be deceived, and their widespread reception of the testimony is tantamount to a confession from so many competent witnesses, that it could not be gainsayed. To admit this, and yet to disbelieve, argues not so much a defect of faith, as an imperfection of reason; it betrays an incompetency to estimate such a weight of evidence as should ever be held sufficient to establish the facts of history.

'In resting the authenticity of Scripture, or its truthfulness in the relation of those facts which constitute the basis of revealed truth, upon the genuineness of the books of Scripture, we only place these facts upon the same footing that we do all other facts of bygone history; we rest their claim to our belief on that historical evidence, which in every other case commands our unhesitating assent to the transactions of former times. Nor can the nature of the evidence or its legitimate force be at all affected by the character of the transactions themselves. It is the completeness of the evidence which attests, not the probability or improbability of the events attested, which should sway our judgment and determine our belief. These events might appear beforehand ever so strange or unlikely, and the consequences growing out of them might be ever so disagreeable to our minds, but we are not the less satisfied of their existence, if the evidence which reports them to us be of the conclusive nature we now speak of. That Julius Cæsar conquered Britain for the Romans, we firmly believe—we feel we cannot doubt; because, whatever reasons may prevail to the contrary, we know that his narrative of the event was published soon after the event took place, and passed down to posterity uncontradicted—confirmed by contemporary witnesses and subsequent historians, who would certainly have expressed their dissent from it if it had been false. And why should it be thought allowable to deal otherwise with the facts of gospel history, seeing that these have been reported to us on evidence exactly the same in kind, but immeasurably stronger in degree—seeing that the accounts of them were published by a number of persons thoroughly conversant with what had happened, believed by thousands of contemporary witnesses, and confirmed by a series of subsequent writers, in a chain of evidence which, for unbroken continuity and conclusive force, is without all parallel in the history of ancient times. It is nothing to the purpose if the facts are strange to our apprehension, or the religion growing out of them is distasteful to our feelings. As facts in history, we have only to do with the evidence by which they have come recommended to our notice; and this is such, that to resist its testimony is to act against reason and refuse conviction under the clearest proof.

'This is the link that connects the genuineness with the authenticity of Scripture, and the direct proof which we have of the truth and certainty of the things which are there recorded. But there are various concurring circumstances which we generally expect to find in true narratives of facts, and which form so many additional considerations to strengthen and confirm the evidences adduced. These circumstances are all connected with the manner in which the original writers either gave their testimony or afterwards supported it, and are to be found most conspicuously displayed in the books of Scripture, especially those of the New Testament, to which, for brevity sake and because of their paramount importance, we chiefly direct our attention.

'As, first, that there is every appearance of honesty and simple-minded integrity in the testimony which they delivered. It is just as difficult to conceal a dishonest intention or a perverted aim in writing, as it is in the ordinary intercourse of life; and with all the artifice that may be employed to prevent detection, there will never fail to be apparent something which betrays the latent evil. But in the sacred writings there is the perfect absence of every thing like this—there is the felt presence of every mark of truthfulness and sincerity. The writers discover no solicitude but to disclose the truths which they have heard, and report the things which they have witnessed. They tell an unvarnished tale, without the least appearance of surprise or attempt at parade or symptom of deceit. They speak like men whose minds are only alive to the reality and importance of what they spake—who had nothing to fear from the fullest inquiry, and nothing to gain by the most implicit credit.

'Again, they deliver their testimony in the most explicit and circumstantial manner, as if anxious to provide as many materials as possible to verify their story. They do not write like men afraid to commit themselves, by condescending on too many particulars, but enter into the most minute details, specifying with the utmost freedom the time, the place, the names of persons concerned—all, in short, that we would expect to find in a history of real transactions. And even though, as it has been well remarked, "we had it not in our power to verify the truth of a single circumstance, yet the mere property of a story being circumstantial is always felt to carry an evidence in its favour. It imparts a more familiar air of life and reality to the narrative. It is easy to believe that the groundwork of a story may be a fabrication; but it requires a more refined species of imposture than we can well conceive, to construct a harmonious and well-sustained narrative, abounding in minute and circumstantial details, which support one another, and where, with all our experience of real life, we can detect nothing misplaced or inconsistent or improbable." So far, however, from not being able to verify the truth of a single circumstance noticed in the narratives of Scripture, an immense number have been verified by the institution of a rigid comparison between those narratives and the remaining works of Jewish and heathen historians; insomuch that out of a great variety of circumstances, and many of them strikingly peculiar to that particular time, mentioned in Scripture concerning the persons then existing, the events occurring, the manners and customs prevailing, not one has been contradicted, while a large proportion of them have been fully substantiated from these independent writers.

'But the circumstance which above all others adds weight and importance to the testimony which the sacred writers gave, was the sacrifices with which it was accompanied; the risks, the injuries, the loss of property and of life, which they voluntarily incurred by giving it, and to which those were alike exposed who received it at their hands. That they had thus to lay their account to all manner of wrongs and insults, not excepting death itself, we learn, not only from the accounts of Scripture, but from the notices contained even in profane historians, from the decrees of emperors, from the allusions of heathen poets, and from the whole history of that and subsequent times, of which the persecution of Christians unto death formed an essential and prominent part. We look simply at the fact, and do not stop to offer any explanation of it, though in that respect there is no particular difficulty to encounter. It is as certain as any thing in history can be, that both those who gave and those who received the gospel testimony were ready, rather than renounce that testimony, to endure the loss of all things and brave the agonies of death; and not only were ready to do this, but in great numbers actually did it. This puts beyond a doubt the question of their sincerity; for no conceivable motive could have induced them, both teachers and taught, leaders and followers together, to make such sacrifices for what they knew to be a lie; as in that case, to use the emphatic expression of Paley, "They would have been villains for no end but to teach honesty, and martyrs without the least prospect of honour or advantage." But if the circumstances forbid us to consider them as deceivers, may they not possibly have been mistaken or deceived? Doubtless they might have been had the matter of their testimony been a mere opinion—had it been either a doctrine or system of doctrines, which they, as many others have done, might have held in sincerity and endured martyrdom rather than recant, though their understandings might have been misinformed and their convictions ungrounded. But what the first teachers and disciples of Christianity avouched was not the truth of an opinion, or the soundness of a doctrine, but the reality of facts which their own eyes had seen, and the certainty of transactions in which they had personally borne a part. Here there was no room for deception or mistake; and as their readiness to sacrifice every thing naturally dear to them in support of their testimony proves beyond a doubt the sincerity of their belief, so must it be held not less convincingly to prove the truth and solidity of the ground on which their belief was founded.

'Such are the leading arguments that can be adduced to prove that the books of Scripture are genuine, and that the statements which they present to our belief are entitled to the fullest credit and confidence. Much of what has been said applies equally to the Jewish and the Christian Scriptures; to the latter, however, more fully and expressly, because with their truth we are more directly concerned, and because that truth, when properly established, draws after it, by many conclusive inferences, the truth of Old Testament Scripture. Imperfect as the sketch now presented necessarily is, it yet contains a body of evidence for the integrity and credibility of Scripture, which may indeed be slighted, but cannot fairly be impugned—a body of evidence which, we are persuaded, would be reckoned quite redundant were it produced in behalf of any ordinary book, or in support of any common fact of ancient history. And why should it be thought less so, when that book is the word of God, and that fact the truth of Christianity? Why, but because the truth, to which we are thereby shut up, is an unwelcome one, and men would fain get rid of their obligation to receive it, by discovering insufficiency in the evidence on which it is founded? But why is it forgotten, that the claim of any particular truth to our reception bears no respect to the relation it may have to our feelings, and that an unwelcome truth requires precisely the same, but no more evidence to establish it than if it were the most profitable and fascinating? And who does not see, that the very unwelcomeness in the case before us gives redoubled strength to the evidence we have been considering, and is our best security against fraud or imposture? From the tone of expression sometimes employed, one might suppose, that religion had only of late become so remote from nature's apprehensions, so hard and repulsive to nature's feelings, and that when originally propounded, men were so eager about it, that they leapt at once into the belief of its facts and the discharge of its obligations;—as if human nature had been essentially different from what it is now, or the religion of the Bible had meanwhile changed its character. But when Christianity first made its appearance, and the remark is equally applicable to Judaism, it had to encounter the most violent opposition, and did not prevail till the human will had made the most desperate struggles at resistance. It had to make head against the strongest desires, the most inveterate prejudices, the most perverse and rooted corruptions; and not only so, but required sacrifices from those who first embraced it, so much more painful than now, as insults, persecutions, and death are more forbidding to nature than a life of respectability and ease. No: it was not because men were predisposed to receive without inquiry, much less to hail with ready and enthusiastic delight, the truth of a crucified and risen Redeemer, that it made its way so triumphantly in the world; but because they could not resist the demonstration with which it came down upon their consciences—because the one part could not but speak what they knew concerning it, and the other part could not but receive their testimony. And the truth is not less certain, nor is the testimony which confirmed it less valid now than when first delivered to the world. It is imperishably engraved in the records of the world's history. And though it may seem more dim and shadowy, when viewed through the long vista of so many past generations, yet it is as much as ever the undoubted verity of God, and to reject or slight it to-day is as foolish and unreasonable as it would have been if received from the very lips of those who had stood beside the cross of Calvary, and had seen and handled the risen body of Jesus.

'We repeat, that not only is the truth of Christianity as certain, but the evidence on which it rests is as valid now as at first. It is the merest fallacy to say, that the whole claim which that evidence could originally have upon our belief is such only as belongs to a probability, but a probability waxing continually less at every remove from the original witnesses, and at no great distance vanishing into utter weakness and insufficiency. The evidence of history, if sufficiently distinct and full, does not lose by distance of time, but rather increases in strength, as the progress of discovery and research in the various departments of learning is ever bringing in fresh attestations to the facts recorded, which serve like new and independent witnesses to confirm the testimony of the old. We know many of the transactions of ancient times better now than they were known two centuries, and better still than they were six or eight centuries ago. So that we may boldly say concerning the Scriptures, that, having great realities for the things of which they testify, they have no need to fear the fullest investigation or the most careful scrutiny. What alone they have to fear and deprecate, is the thoughtless levity which will not inquire, or the prejudiced judgment which will not calmly and impartially weigh the evidence produced. They have not only lost nothing by former investigations, but have grown more impregnable—have come off even more than conquerors, like the believer in his trials, rising higher by every threatening of defeat. The extended inquiries, which renewed assaults have caused from time to time to be made, have only served to render their evidence more clear and irresistible; just as every renewed meditation of their contents brings fresh discoveries to the soul, of their incomparable worth, their divine purity, and manifold wisdom, which so highly raise them above the best productions of human wit and learning. Wherefore, as "the Scriptures cannot be broken," but stand based, whether as regards the doctrines they unfold, or the evidence which commends them to our reception on the solid rock of eternal truth, we ought to prize them as containing the true and faithful sayings of God, yea, to search the Scriptures with increasing faith and diligence, for in them alone ye have eternal life.'

ON THE INSPIRATION OF THE SCRIPTURES.

Having proved the necessity of a divine revelation, and the genuineness and authenticity of the books that profess to contain it, we now come to examine the nature and extent of the claim to be a divine revelation which these books advance, and the proofs by which it is supported. The former of these involves what is called the inspiration of the books of Scripture, the latter the evidences by which the claim to be divinely inspired is supported. In discussing this subject, the ordinary method is to furnish the proofs that the Scriptures are divinely inspired, and then to explain the nature and extent of that inspiration. We however conceive it more judicious to state, in the first instance, the doctrine of inspiration itself, and then give a short summary of the proofs that the Scriptures are divinely inspired. This we are compelled to do in a sentence or two, without attempting either proof or illustration.

The doctrine of the inspiration of the Scriptures is entirely a matter of divine revelation. It is from the sacred writers themselves that we are to learn to what extent they require us to receive their statements as the oracles of the living God. In saying that the Bible is given by the inspiration of God, we do not mean merely that it contains matter which has been revealed from heaven, but that it is itself a divine revelation. We do not mean merely that there was a special, and, in some instances, even a verbal communication made to the penmen; but we mean, that what they wrote is the communication of God to men. We do not mean merely that the penmen, in writing, were not permitted to use any word but that which was appropriate to the occasion, so that we have a perfect Bible; but we mean, that they wrote as the Spirit gave them utterance, so that the Bible is the word of God. We do not enter into any question, as to the way in which the Spirit may have influenced the minds of these men in the accomplishment of this work—that is not a question which it is competent for us to consider—but we hold that it is unscriptural, and therefore unwarrantable, to say of any portion of the Scriptures, whether we refer to the substance of the record or to the language in which it is given, that the Spirit merely permitted it to be written. We say the Bible is perfect, not merely because it has been permitted and sanctioned, but because it has been dictated by the Spirit—it is the breathing, the inspiration of God.

The arguments in confirmation of this view are,

1st, That this is the inspiration which the sacred writers ascribe to their spoken addresses. 2d, This is the inspiration which they ascribe to their writings. 3d, This inspiration is claimed for every part of their writings. There are certain objections brought to this view, for the statement and refutation of which we must refer the reader to approved works on the subject. An admirable summary will be found in Lecture III. by the Rev. Andrew King, in the volume of the Evidences, by ministers of Glasgow, already quoted. We come now to the evidences in support of a divine revelation, and would present to our readers the following summary:—

'I. Great numbers of wise and good men, through many generations, and in distant countries, have agreed in receiving the Bible as a divine revelation. Many of them have been distinguished and generally approved, for seriousness, erudition, penetration, and impartiality in judging of men and things. With much labour and patient investigation, they detected impostures, by which their contemporaries were duped: yet the same assiduous examination confirmed them in believing the Bible to be "THE WORD OF GOD;" and induced them, living and dying, to recommend it to all others, as the source of all true wisdom, hope, and consolation. In this view, even "the tradition of the church" has great weight; for, whatever abuse has been made of the term, by such as generally were no part of the true church, yet it must be allowed to be a consideration of vast importance, that the whole company of those who have "worshipped the living God in spirit and truth," (including those who ventured and laid down their lives for conscience sake, and who were the most pious, holy, and useful men in every age,) have unanimously concurred in handing down to us the Scriptures as a divine revelation, and have very little differed about the books which form that sacred deposit. And I cannot but suppose, that if a being, of entire impartiality and of sound mind, should be shown the two companies, of those who have received, and of those who have rejected the Scriptures; and should compare the seriousness, learning, patient investigation of truth, solid judgment, holy lives, and composure in a dying hour, without unmanly terror, or indecent levity, of the one company, with the character and conduct of the other; he would be induced to take up the Bible with profound veneration, and strong prepossession in its favour.

'The agreement of the sacred writers among themselves is another cogent argument of their divine inspiration. Should an equal number of contemporaries, of the same country, education, habits, profession, natural disposition, and rank in life, and associating together as a distinct company, concur in writing a book on religious subjects as large as the Bible, each furnishing his proportion, without comparing notes together; an attentive reader, long inured to such studies, would be able to discover some diversity of opinion among them. But the writers of the Scriptures succeeded each other during 1500 years; some were princes or priests, others shepherds or fishermen; their natural abilities, education, habits, and employments, exceedingly dissimilar; they wrote laws, history, prophecy, odes, devotional exercises, proverbs, parables, doctrines, and controversy; and each man had his distinct department; yet they coincide in their exhibition of the perfections, works, truths, and will of God; of the nature, situation, and obligations of man; of sin and salvation; of this world and of the next; and, in short, of all things connected with [the purposes of our creation] our duty, safety, interest, and comfort, and in the whole of the religion inculcated by them. They all were evidently of the same judgment, aimed to establish the same principles, and applied them to the same practical purpose. Apparent inconsistencies may indeed perplex the superficial reader; but they vanish after a more accurate and persevering investigation; nor has any charge of disagreement, among the sacred writers, ever been substantiated; for it can only be said, that they related the same facts with different circumstances, which are perfectly reconcileable; and that they gave instructions suited to the persons whom they addressed, without systematically showing the harmony of them with other parts of divine truth. They did not write by concert, and bestowed no pains to avoid the appearance of inconsistency: yet the exact coincidence perceived among them by the diligent student, is most astonishing, and cannot be accounted for on any rational principles, without admitting that they wrote "as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

'The scriptural history, too, accords, in a wonderful manner, with the most authentic records which remain, of the events, customs, and manners of the countries and ages to which it stands related. The rise and fall of empires; revolutions in the world; and the grand outlines of chronology, as mentioned or referred to in the Scriptures, coincide with those stated by the most approved ancient writers: whilst the palpable errors in these respects, detected in the apocryphal books, constitute one decisive reason for rejecting them as spurious. But the history of the Bible is of far greater antiquity than any other [undisputed] record extant: and it is remarkable, that, in numerous instances, it shows the real origin of those absurd fables which disgrace and obscure all other histories of remote times; no feeble proof that it was derived from some surer source of information than human tradition.

'III. The miracles, by which the writers of the Scriptures confirmed their divine mission to their contemporaries, afford us also a most convincing proof in this matter. The narratives of these miracles may be clearly shown to have been published, very soon after the time, and at the places, in which they were said to have been wrought in the most conspicuous manner, and before very great multitudes, enemies as well as friends. This constituted a public challenge to every man to contradict or disprove them if he could: yet this public challenge never called forth an individual to deny that they were really performed; nor was an attempt of this kind ever made till long afterwards. Can a man of common sense think, that Moses and Aaron could persuade the whole nation of Israel, that they had witnessed all the plagues of Egypt, passed through the Red sea with waters on each side of them, gathered the manna every morning for forty years together, and seen all the wonders recorded in their history, had no such events taken place? If then, that generation could not be thus imposed on, when could the belief of these extraordinary transactions be palmed upon the nation? The same might be shown concerning the other miracles recorded in Scripture, especially those of Christ and his apostles; and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in remembrance of his death, and the observance of the Lord's day on the first day of the week, in commemoration of his resurrection, in all ages to this present time. If not instituted at the time immediately succeeding the events on which they are grounded, at what subsequent period could they have been introduced, so as to persuade multitudes in very many nations, that they and their fathers, and fathers' fathers had always observed them? Evidently, the man who denies that the miracles were actually performed, must believe more wonderful things, without any evidence than those he rejects, though established by unanswerable proof. To evince this, as to one most important instance, namely, the resurrection of Christ, which, being once proved, undeniably establishes the divine original and authority of Christianity, let the reader consult the latter part of the Note on John 20. 27—30. When could the belief of the resurrection of Christ, and the miracles wrought by his apostles and disciples in proof of it, have been obtruded on mankind, if they had never happened? Surely not in the age when they were said to have been witnessed by hundreds of thousands, who were publicly challenged to deny them if they could! Certainly not in any subsequent age; for the origin of Christianity was expressly ascribed to them, and millions must have been persuaded, that they had always believed those things, of which they had never to that time so much as heard. We may indeed venture to assert, that no past event was ever so fully proved as our Lord's resurrection; and that it would not be half so preposterous to doubt whether such a man as Julius Cæsar ever existed, as it would be to question whether Jesus actually rose from the dead.

'IV. The Scripture prophecies in fulfilling to this day, fully demonstrate divine inspiration. These form a species of perpetual miracles, which challenge the investigation of men in every age; and which, though overlooked by the careless and prejudiced, cannot fail of producing conviction proportioned to the humble and reverential attention paid to them. The prophecies of the Messiah, found in almost all the books of the Old Testament, when compared with their exact accomplishment as recorded in the Evangelists, abundantly prove them to have been written under the guidance of the Holy Spirit: while the existence of the Jews as a people differing from all others, and their regard to these writings, as the sacred oracles handed down from their progenitors, sufficiently vouch for their antiquity: though that admits of full and clear proof of another kind. According to the predictions of these books, Nineveh has been desolated; Babylon swept with the besom of destruction; Tyre become a place to dry nets in; Egypt the basest of the kingdoms, which has never since been able "to exalt itself above the nations." These, and many other events, fulfilling ancient prophecies, ages after they were delivered, can never be accounted for, except by allowing that He, who sees the end from the beginning, thus revealed his secret purposes, that their accomplishment might prove the Scriptures to be his word.

'In like manner, there are evident predictions interwoven with the writings of almost every writer of the New Testament, as a divine attestation of the doctrine contained in them. The destruction of Jerusalem, with all the circumstances predicted in the Evangelists (the narrative of which may be seen in Josephus' History of the Jewish Wars); the series of ages during which that city has been "trodden down of the Gentiles;" the long-continued dispersion of the Jews, and the conversion of the nations to Christianity, the many antichristian corruptions of the gospel; the superstition, uncommanded austerities, idolatry, spiritual tyranny, and persecutions of the Roman hierarchy; the division of the empire into ten kingdoms; the concurrence of those who ruled those kingdoms, during many ages, to support the usurpations of the church of Rome; and the existence of Christianity to this day amidst so many enemies who have used every possible method to destroy it:—all these occurrences, when diligently compared with the predictions of the New Testament, do not come short of the fullest demonstration, of which the case admits, that the books containing those predictions are the unerring Word of God. Two further observations seem of great importance:

'1. The predictions of Scripture, if carefully examined, will be found to contain a prophetical history of the world, as to all the grand outlines. Who can deny that the history of Abraham's posterity; of Israel especially; of Judah and Joseph, the most renowned sons of Jacob; of the Jews in their present dispersions; and their preservation as a distinct people, "dwelling alone, and not reckoned among the nations," might be clearly and particularly stated in the very words of prophecy? Does not almost the whole of ancient profane history, as distinguished from that contained in the sacred Scriptures, and also a large proportion of modern history, consist principally of the records of the four great empires, the Chaldean, the Medo-Persian, the Grecian or Macedonian, and the Roman? And are not these predicted in the book of Daniel so exactly and particularly, as to give some plausibility to the objection, which is demonstrated to be unfounded, that they were written after the event? But especially, "the testimony of Jesus is the Spirit of prophecy." The changes which have taken place in the state of the world, in consequence of the birth of Jesus at Bethlehem, and of his claim to be the Messiah, the Son of God, which has by some been virulently opposed, by others zealously supported, have been great, extensive, and durable beyond comparison with all other revolutions: but is there one particular in the history of Jesus, and of the subsequent establishment of Christianity, with the opposition made to it, and the corruptions afterwards introduced, which is not predicted in Scripture? And might not a narrative of our Lord, from his birth to his death, in many instances very circumstantial, be drawn up in the words of prophecy?

'2. Another consideration is inseparably connected with this. The prophecies of Scripture are not detached or isolated predictions, but constitute a grand system of previous information as to the secret designs of Providence, extending from the earliest ages even to the consummation of all things; and accompanied by such distinct notations of order, place, and time, as may well be called the geography and the chronology of prophecy: insomuch that any one, in any age, if he well understood the prophecies extant in his day, might have known what to expect, at the specified times, and in the specified countries. As one prediction received its accomplishment, others were given, connecting prophecy with history; till the Revelation of John concluded the whole. Events have hitherto, in every age and nation, corresponded with these predictions. This is well known to each individual, in exact proportion to the degree in which he becomes acquainted with Scripture, and with historical records, and to the care and impartiality with which he compares the prophecies with those records. Could so many, and so extraordinary, and improbable events, through so many ages and nations, have occurred, in so undeniable a manner, as foretold in the Scriptures, had not the omniscient God himself inspired the Scriptures? Can a reasonable man conceive that a design of this kind could ever have entered the thoughts of an uninspired writer; that he could form the astonishing idea into a regular plan; and that during more than 1500 years he should have successors, who entered fully into his views, and assisted in carrying them into effect?

'V. The Bible alone, and such books as make it their basis, introduce the infinite God speaking in a manner worthy of himself, with simplicity, majesty, and authority. His character, as there delineated, comprises all possible excellence without any intermixture; his laws and ordinances accord to his perfections; his works and dispensations exhibit them; and all his dealings with his creatures bear the stamp of infinite wisdom, power, justice, purity, truth, goodness, and mercy harmoniously displayed. As to the description of the state of the world, and of human nature, facts, on full investigation, unanswerably prove it exactly true. All who form a different estimate of human nature, find their principles inapplicable to facts; their theories incapable of being reduced to practice; and their expectations strangely disappointed. The Bible, well understood, enables us to account for those events which have appeared inexplicable to men in every age: and the more carefully any one watches and scrutinizes all the motives, imaginations, and desires of his own heart, during a length of time, the more manifest will it appear to him that the Scriptures give a far more just account of his disposition and character than he himself could have done. In short, man is such a being, and the world is in such a state, as the Scriptures have described: yet multiplied facts, constant observation, and reiterated experience, are insufficient to convince us of it, till we first learn it from the Bible; and then comparing all which passes within us, and around us, with what we there read, we become more and more acquainted with our own hearts, and established in the belief of the divine original of this most wonderful book. To this add, that the Bible is exactly suited to our real state, character, and wants; and proposes an adequate remedy, or supply, to all of them; which, in proportion as self-knowledge increases, we see more and more. The mysteries too, in Scripture, rather confirm than invalidate this conclusion. Incomprehensibility is inseparable from God, and from all his works, even the growth of a blade of grass. The mysteries of the Scriptures are sublime, interesting, and useful; they display the divine perfections, lay a foundation for our hope, and inculcate humility, reverence, love and gratitude.

'VI. The tendency of the Scriptures constitutes another unanswerable proof. Did all men believe and obey the Bible as a divine revelation, they would then habitually and uniformly do justice, speak truth, show mercy, exercise mutual forgiveness, follow after peace, bridle their appetites and passions, and lead sober, righteous, and godly lives. Murders, wars, slavery, cruel oppressions, rapine and fraud, and unrestrained licentiousness, would no more desolate the world, or fill it with misery; and bitter contentions would no more destroy domestic comfort: but righteousness, goodness, and truth, would bless the earth with a felicity exceeding all our present conceptions.

'The conduct of ungodly men, as related in the Bible, entirely accords to the abstract account given of human nature: and it appears, that believers conducted themselves exactly in that manner which the principles of the Bible might have led us to expect. They had naturally like passions with other men; but these were habitually restrained and regulated by the fear and love of God, and by other holy affections. Their general behaviour was good, but not perfect; and sometimes their natural proneness to evil broke out, and made way for bitter repentance and deeper humiliation: so that they appear constantly to have perceived their need of forgiveness and divine assistance; to have expected felicity from the rich mercy of God; and, instead of making a bad use of that consideration, to have deduced from it motives for gratitude, zeal, patience, meekness, and love to mankind.

'But one character is exhibited, in the simplest and most unaffected manner, which is perfection itself. Philosophers, orators, and poets have bestowed immense pains to delineate a faultless character; and have given us complete models of their own estimate of excellence, and sufficient proof that they had laboured the point to the utmost of their ability. But the four Evangelists (whose divine inspiration is now frequently doubted on the most frivolous pretences), without seeming to think of it, have done that in which all other writers have failed. They have set before us a perfect human character, by recording facts, without making any comment on them, or showing the least ingenuity in the arrangement of them. "They have given the history of one, whose spirit, words, and actions were, in every particular, what they ought to have been; who always did the very thing which was proper, and in the best manner imaginable; who never once deviated from the most consummate wisdom, purity, benevolence, compassion, meekness, humility, fortitude, patience, piety, zeal, or any other excellency; and who in no instance let one virtue [or native desire] entrench on another, but exercised them all in entire harmony, and exact proportion.—This subject challenges investigation, and sets infidelity at defiance;" and, joined to their entire consistency in this respect with one another, demonstrates that the Evangelists wrote under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

'VII. The actual effects produced by the Scriptures evince their divine original. These are, indeed, far from being equal to its tendency; because, through human depravity, the Gospel is not generally or fully believed and obeyed: yet they are very considerable; and we may assert, that, even at present, there are many thousands who have been reclaimed from a profane and immoral course of conduct, to sobriety, equity, truth, and piety, and to good behaviour in relative life, simply by attending to the sacred oracles. What a different people would this become, if all were rendered as upright, sincere, peaceable, beneficent, and active in doing good to mankind, as a remnant of them are on scriptural principles!

'VIII. Brevity is so connected with fulness in the Scriptures, that they are a treasure of divine knowledge which can never be exhausted. The things that are absolutely necessary to salvation are few, simple, and obvious to the meanest capacity, provided it be attended by a humble, teachable disposition: but the most learned, acute, and diligent student cannot, in the longest life, obtain an entire knowledge of this one volume; and will at last leave the world confessing, that the more he studied the Scriptures, the fuller conviction he had of his own ignorance, and of their inestimable value.

'IX. Lastly, "He that believeth hath the witness in himself," 1 John 5. 9, 10. His discoveries by the light of the Scriptures, the experience he has had that the Lord fulfils its promises to those who trust in them, the abiding effects produced by attending to it, on his judgment, dispositions, and affections, and the earnests of heaven enjoyed by him in communion with God, put the matter beyond all doubt: and though many believers are not qualified to dispute against infidels, they are enabled, through this inward testimony, to obey the gospel and to suffer for it; and can no more be convinced, by reasonings and objections, that uninspired men invented the Bible, than that man created the sun.

'If an objector could fully invalidate more than half these arguments (to which [very] many more might easily be added), the remainder would be abundantly sufficient.—Nay, perhaps, any one of them so far decides the question, that, were there no other proof of the Bible's being the word of God, a man could not reject it, without acting in direct opposition to those dictates of common sense, which direct his conduct in his secular affairs. But, in reality, I have,' says Dr Scott in conclusion, 'a confidence that not one of these proofs can be fairly answered; at least it has never yet been done: and the combined force of the whole is so great, that the objections by which men cavil against the truth, only resemble the foaming waves dashing against the deep-rooted rock which has for ages defied their unavailing fury. Still, though these can effect nothing more, they may beat off the poor shipwrecked mariner, who was about to ascend it in hope of deliverance from impending destruction.'

OF THE JEWISH LAWS AND TYPES.

For many ages mankind seem to have had no other form of government, either civil or sacred, but that of the patriarchal kind. Fathers were at once kings and priests to their numerous descendants. When God thought proper to form a nation for himself, and separated them from the rest of the world, they appear, for the first four hundred years, to have had no other government of their own. While they were in Egypt they had elders; but these appear to have been nothing more than the wisest and gravest among them, or the heads of their tribes, who had no power or civil judicature, Exod. 3. 16; with 18. 13, 18. Their officers were nothing but overseers of their tasks, Exod. 5. 14.

When they came out of Egypt, God, who formerly stood related to them as their Creator and covenant God, became a kind of national King to them. In correspondence to this threefold character, he gave them laws, moral, ceremonial, and civil. As their King, he gave them laws concerning servants, retaliations, damages, inheritances, marriages, borrowing of money, wars, punishments, admission into places of power and trust, or even into the camp or congregation, &c. Exod. xxi.—xxiii.; Lev. xviii.—xx. xxv.; Num. 5. 1, 2; xxvii. xxxiv.—xxxvi.; Deut. xix.—xxv. As their King, he directed the form of their encampment and marching in the wilderness, Exod. xiii. xiv.; Num. i.—iv. ix. x.; directed their wars with the Amalekites, Midianites, and Canaanites; Exod. xviii.; 1 Sam. xv.; Num. xxxi.; Deut. xx.; Jos. vi. viii.; and appointed their officers; Exod. iii. iv.; Num. i. xi. Many things, which in another view were religious ceremonies, seem, in some respect, to have pertained to the form of the Jewish theocracy. The tabernacle, or temple, was the palace of their king; the oblations were his revenues or civil list; the priests and Levites, his courtiers and officers. Nor do I know but many of them were civil judges as well as ecclesiastical officers; even as our ruling elders in the church may lawfully be magistrates in the state.

To maintain the true religion constantly among them, and to prevent idolatry, which is at once so dishonourable to God and so destructive to the morals of mankind, and for securing their internal peace and happiness, he formed them into a nation uncommonly separated from the nations around. He even prohibited them to imitate their neighbours in the customs which they had observed in their false worship; as planting trees near altars; boiling kids in their mothers' milk; and perhaps sundry others: the unreasonableness of which we cannot now so clearly perceive. Idolatry and witchcraft, being at once the most presumptuous rebellion against the God of nature, and high treason against him as the King of Israel, were justly declared punishable by death in every Israelite or sojourning proselyte.—To render their constitution firm, and to prevent their oppressing one another, he appointed the country which he gave them to be divided into 601,730 shares; to each warrior a share of about twelve acres of ground; and by the return of the inheritance, once every fifty years, at the jubilee, he fixed these shares in their respective families. This secured a numerous body of freeholders, always ready to defend their country against every invader.—And, while the Levites were dispersed through the nation for its religious instruction, their forty-eight cities and suburbs, which they held by divine right, at once accommodated them, and secured their persons and families as hostages for their good behaviour. Every tribe being independent in itself, their princes were captains in war, and magistrates in time of peace.

After their settlement in Canaan, every city had its particular judges, who held their courts, at least some of them, in the gates; Deut. 16. 19; Judg. 11. 5, 6; Zec. 8. 16. Every tribe had its supreme and subordinate rulers, according to the plan of Jethro the Midianite, Exod. xviii.; Deut. i. The chief rulers were called princes, or heads of thousands, Num. 32. 2; Jos. 9. 15; 17. 4; Num. 10. 4. Perhaps the seventy elders, mentioned Num. xi. were the sixty rulers of ten thousands, together with the twelve princes of the tribes, Num. i. vii. Of these, some think the Jewish sanhedrim or parliament was first constituted, and afterwards continued. But the utter silence of the Old Testament about any such court, when there was no king nor judge to govern the people, Judg. xvii.—xxi.; and when the people generally followed their kings, either in idolatry or reformation, makes the existence of any such court in those times extremely doubtful. Whether most of their fifteen judges, after effecting the several national deliverances for which God raised them up, retired to a private life, as before, is not altogether evident.

The Hebrews' request of a king is represented as a rejection of their theocratical form of government, 1 Sam. 8. 7; 12. 17, 19; under their kings, especially after the division of the kingdom, we find but small vestiges of it. Nay, except by David and Solomon, who were also prophets, we find scarcely any thing good done by any of them, in which any sovereign on earth may not imitate them on proper occasions. Even when they were appointed by God to the government, they were called to their office by the people, as much as our British kings. They were installed in it by unction, at least where their title seemed dubious, 1 Sam. 10. 1; 16. 1; 1 Kings 1. 30; 2 Kings 11. 12; 23. 3. They were crowned with a crown, somewhat like the high priest's mitre, 2 Sam. 1. 10; 2 Kings 11. 12; Psalm 21. 3. The principal subjects tendered them a kiss, importing allegiance, Psalm 2. 12; and the people by loud acclamations testified their subjection, 1 Sam. 10. 24; 1 Kings 1. 39. According to law none but a native Israelite could be king. Every king was to transcribe, for his own use, a copy of the Mosaic laws. He was to govern with equity and lenity. He was not to multiply to himself wives, horses, silver, or gold, but to depend on the assistance and protection of God in all his undertakings, Deut. 16. 18—20; 17. 14—20. Their great council, in which the supreme magistrate or his representative presided, had only power to enact regulations for executing the laws prescribed by God himself: nor, according to these rules, do they seem to have had any power of levying taxes. Till the reign of Saul, the Hebrews had never any standing troops; but the 601,730 freeholders were obliged, on a proper call, to bear arms against the enemy at their own expense, Judg. iii. vi. xx.; 1 Sam. xi. Saul had but a few thousand standing forces, 1 Sam. 13. 2; 26. 2; but David increased their number to 288,000, 1 Chron. 27. 1—15; Jehoshaphat increased those of Judah to 1,160,000, 2 Chron. 17. 14—19.

It only remains to take notice of some of the CLASSES or SECTS mentioned in the Scripture history of the Jewish nation. As (1.) The SCRIBES. The most honourable of these were the secretaries of state and war, 2 Sam. 8. 17; 2 Kings 18. 18; 22. 3; 25. 19. The inferior scribes were much like our writers to the signet, &c. 1 Chron. 2. 55. Many of the Simeonites, it is said, being scattered amongst the other tribes, kept public schools, and were scribes of the lowest form, Gen. 49. 7. There appears to have been another kind of ecclesiastical scribes, who were preaching clergy, and expounded the law of Moses in their own way, Luke 5. 17, 21; 11. 44. (2.) RABBINS. The title of RABBI, in the earlier ages, only denoted such as were of superior rank and station, Job 32. 9; Esth. 1. 8; Jer. 39. 3; 41. 1. But some ages before our Saviour's incarnation, the self-conceited doctors of learning began to assume it as a badge of literary honour, Mat. 23. 7, 8. (3.) The PHARISEES were a very numerous sect. They pretended that the traditions of the elders were of, at least, equal authority with the written word of God. They affected to discover an uncommon sanctity in many painful austerities and trifling shows of devotion. They enlarged the fringes on the corners of their garments, and marked their foreheads with scrolls of parchment, called phylacteries, on which were inscribed some noted sentences of the law, Mat. vi. xxiii. (4.) The SADDUCEES. They seem to have acknowledged the divine authority of, at least, the books of Moses; but denied the existence of separate spirits, and the resurrection of the dead. They denied the decrees of God, and pretended that men were absolute masters of their own actions, without any supernatural influence. Many of the rich and powerful were of this sect, Acts 23. 8; 5. 17; but we never hear of one of them converted to the Christian faith. (5.) The SAMARITANS were the offspring of those heathens whom the kings of Assyria brought from the east, and planted in the country of the ten tribes. Their religion was a motley mixture of the heathen and the Jewish. They and the Jews generally hated one another to an uncommon degree; and in the days of our Saviour the Jews thought them all possessed by the devil, 1 Kings 17. 24—34; Ezra iv. v.; Neh. ii.—iv. vi.; Luke 9. 52, 53; John iv.; 8. 48. (6.) The GALILEANS were a party headed by one Judas, who refused to submit to the Romans, or to pay them any tribute, Luke 13. 1; Acts 5. 37. (7.) The HERODIANS were the flatterers of Herod the tetrarch of Galilee, who were ready to comply with whatever heathenish customs he introduced, in order to please his Roman friends, Mat. 22. 16; Mark 8. 15.

The knowledge of the TYPICAL REPRESENTATIONS under the Old Testament dispensation is of much more importance; the whole of it being intended by God as a proper mean of ushering his Son into our world, and into his subsequent glory: every religious rite, every noted person and event, observable therein, may justly be considered as an emblem of what is spiritual, and as a TYPE, a FIGURE, a SUBSTANTIAL PREDICTION, of good things to come. This idea is strongly supported by the apostle's calling the Jewish ordinances shadows of good things to come, the body of which is Christ, Col. 2. 17; and by most of his Epistle to the Hebrews. To view the noted PERSONS, EVENTS, and RITUAL INSTITUTIONS, in relation to Jesus Christ and his New Testament and heavenly church, is indeed to apprehend them in a most amiable and engaging point of light. In this view we discern all the prophets bearing witness to our glorious and worthy Redeemer. Among these shadows of good things to come we may rank,

I. TYPICAL PERSONS, who, in their distinguished origin, their amiable qualities, their honourable stations, their peculiar work or call to it, their wise and faithful performance thereof, and remarkable success therein, represent Jesus, the Mediator of the New Testament and Saviour of men. In this light we may consider (1.) ADAM, in his immediate formation by God, his perfect likeness to God, his distinguished form, in which the spiritual and material substances of creation were connected; in his lordship over this sublunary world, his divine marriage, and in his parental and federal relation to mankind, Gen. i.—v., Rom. 5. 12—19; 1 Cor. 15. 21, 22. (2.) ABEL, in the debasement of his name, the righteousness of his life, the excellency and acceptableness of his sacrifice; in his brother's hatred and murder of him, and the fearful punishment which ensued, Gen. 4. 1—16; Heb. 11. 4; 12. 24; 1 John 3. 12. (3.) ENOCH, in his self-dedication to God, upright walking with him, clear prediction of the last judgment and embodied translation to heaven, Gen. 5. 22—24; Heb. 11. 5; Jude 14. 15. (4.) NOAH, as the comforter of his friends, the upright favourite of his God, the erector of the ark, the saviour of his family and animals, the acceptable sacrificer to God, the covenant head of those who repeopled the new world, and the predictor of their different fates, Gen. v.—x.; Heb. 11. 6; 1 Pet. 3. 19, 20. (5.) MELCHIZEDEK, in the secrecy of his genealogy; in his immediately divine instalment in the priesthood; in his relation to an accursed people as their priest and king; in his having no official successor; in his superiority to and blessing of Abraham; and in his generous refreshment of the victorious but weary troops, Gen. 14. 18—20; Psalm 110. 4; Heb. 7. 1—11. (6.) ABRAHAM, in his divine call to leave his native country; in his firm trust in, ready obedience to, and high favour with God: in his meekness, his kindness, and his boldness, in favour of Lot, his injured friend; in his perfect equity and extensive usefulness to his neighbours; in his covenant headship over his long-promised and marvellously-produced seed; and in the extraordinary oblations whereby he confirmed it; and in the distinguished tempers and fate of those born in his house; Gen. xii.—xxv.; Psalm 105. 6—15; Acts 7. 2—8; Rom. iv.; Gal. 3. 6—18; 4. 22—31; Heb. 11. 8—19. (7.) ISAAC, in his long-predicted, much-desired, and marvellous birth; in his early enduring of persecution; in his voluntary oblation of himself to God, a source of great blessings to himself and his seed; in his happy marriage to his Gentile kinswoman; and in the long-desired birth, different tempers, and states of his children, Gen. xxi.—xxvii.; Gal. 4. 26—29. (8.) JACOB, in his noted uprightness; his acquirement of the birthright and blessing; his manifold troubles, and divine support and comfort under the same; his prevalent wrestling and powerful prayers; his numerous offspring, and the extensive blessings he left them, Gen. xxv.—xxxv.; xlvi.—l.; Hos. 12. 3; 4. 12. (9.) JOSEPH, as a darling son, marked with princely apparel; a hated, but prudent and affectionate brother; a trusty, wise, and successful servant; an inspired interpreter and prophet; a resolute resister of temptation; a patient sufferer of trials unnumbered, and through them highly exalted and singularly blessed; and, in fine, as the preserver of nations, the advancer of his master's kingdom and nourisher of his father's family, Gen. 30. 22—24; xxxvii. xxxix.—l.; Psalm 105. 16—22; Acts 7. 9—18. (10.) JOB, in his remarkable piety, integrity, humility, and usefulness; in his original happiness and wealth; in his sudden and sovereign reduction to depths of misery and woe; in his manifold and grievous sufferings from every quarter, hell, earth, and heaven; his remarkable patience under them, and his restoration at last to redoubled glory and wealth, Job i.—xlii. Eze. 14. 14; James 5. 11. (11.) MOSES, in his honourable but hazardous birth, his marvellous preservation, his manifold trials and patience under them; in his solemn call to his extensive office of deliverer, mediator, extraordinary priest, unparalleled prophet, honoured lawgiver, and king in Jeshurun, in his incomparable intimacy with God; and in his meekness, disinterestedness, fidelity, and zeal, in the discharge of his work, Exod. ii. to Deut. xxxiv.; Psalm 105. 26, 27; 77. 20; Acts 7. 20—40; Heb. 11. 23—29. (12.) AARON, as a renowned saint, an eloquent orator, a holy prophet, a great high-priest, a covenant head and common parent of priests unnumbered; in his solemn call to and investiture in his office of priesthood, and the confirmation thereof by miracles of mercy and wrath; in his laborious, faithful, and affectionate discharge thereof; and at last, in his voluntary death on mount Hor, leaving his sacred vestments to his son, Exod. 4. 14—16; viii.—x. xxviii. xxix.; Lev. viii.—x.; Num. xvi. xvii. xx. (13, 14.) BEZALEEL and AHOLIAB, as the divinely-called, singularly-qualified, faithful, laborious, and successful framers of a tabernacle for the symbolic residence of God, Exod. xxxi. xxxvi.—xl. (15.) PHINEHAS, in his divinely-directed, though uncommon zeal for God, and his nation; in his honourable reward of victory, peace, and everlasting priesthood; and in his covenant headship over his priestly posterity, Num. xxv. xxxi.; Psalm 106. 30, 31. (16.) JOSHUA, in his name pregnant with salvation; his education under Moses the lawgiver; his solemn call and repeated encouragement from God to his work, and his diligence therein; his miraculous assistance, diversified exploits, marvellous conquests, and wise distribution of the promised Canaan to God's chosen people; and in his zeal and care to establish among them the true worship and service of God, Exod. 17. 10, 13; Num. 13. 13, 16; 14. 6—10, 30; 27. 15—23; Deut. 31. 1—8; Jos. i.—xxiv.; Acts 7. 45; Heb. 4. 8. (17.) GIDEON, in his original meanness, his lovely humility and meekness; his clearly divine, solemn, and miraculously attested call to deliver Israel; his amazing success by unlikely instruments; his care to reform his nation, maintain peace with his friends, and punish his contemners, Judg vi.—viii.; 1 Sam. 12. 11; Heb. 11. 32—34. (18.) SAMSON, in his preternatural birth, his solemn separation to the service of God, his marvellous exploits; the men of Judah's betrayment of him into the hand of his enemies; and, in fine, his voluntary death for the ruin of his people's destroyers, Judg. xiii.—xvi.; Heb. 11. 32—34. (19.) BOAZ the Bethlehemite, in his abundant wealth, his humble and affectionate mind, his divinely-directed and honourable marriage to a destitute Gentile widow, and the happy issue thereof, Ruth i.—iv. (20.) SAMUEL, in his marvellous birth, his early dedication to God, his solemn call to and faithful service of God, as the prophet and deliverer of Israel, and in the remarkable vengeance which overtook the nation for rejecting him, 1 Sam. i.—xxxi.; Heb.

11. 32—34. (21.) DAVID, in his fidelity, patience, meekness, zeal, eminent devotion, firm faith in, and high favour and familiarity with God, and in his triple unction and call to this office; in which he was at once the psalmist, prophet, and monarch of Israel, and a head to the heathen around; in his covenant headship over his royal posterity; in his unnumbered and grievous afflictions from every side, and his holy resignation thereto; in his marvellous exploits, and almost ever-successful wars with the enemies of his nation; in his astonishing care to order the church, and his expensive preparations for building the temple of God, 1 Sam. xvi.—xxx.; 2 Sam. i.—xxiv.; 1 Kings i. ii.; 1 Chron. iii. xi.—xxix.; Psalm ii.—cl.; Acts 13. 22. (22.) SOLOMON, in his dearness to God; in his early and solemn enthronement; his charge from and benediction by his father; in his astonishing wisdom, wealth, and renown; in the extent, order, peace, and happiness of his kingdom; in his expensive, skilful, and laborious erection of a magnificent temple for God, and in his solemn dedication thereof by sacrifices and prayer, 2 Sam. 12. 25; 7. 12—16; 1 Chron. 17. 11—15; xxii. xxviii.; 2 Chron. i.—x.; 1 Kings i.—x.; Psalm lxxii. cxxxii. (23.) ELIJAH, in his debased appearances, fervent zeal, effectual prayers, discriminating sacrifice, miracles of mercy and judgment, power over the nations, embodied translation to heaven, and the fearful vengeance which overtook his opposers of the family of Ahab, according to his prediction, 2 Chron. 21. 12—15; 1 Kings xvii.—xix. xxi.; 2 Kings i. ii.; Luke 4. 25, 26; James 5. 17, 18. (24.) ELISHA, in his solemn call to his prophetical function, and ready compliance therewith; his plentiful endowment with the Spirit of God, numerous miracles of mercy and judgment, usefulness to his nation, the manifold injuries he received, and the fearful resentments thereof by his God, 1 Kings 19. 19—21; 2 Kings ii.—ix.; 13. 14—21; Luke 4. 27. (25.) JONAH, in his exposure to the raging storm and billows, his burial alive in the whale's belly, and resurrection therefrom on the third day; and in the success which attended his subsequent ministration among the Gentiles, 2 Kings 14. 25; Jonah i.—iv.; Mat. 12. 39—41. (26.) ELIAKIM, in his succession to a traitor in office; his distinguished authority and faithful exercise thereof, for the honour of his master and advantage of his nation, Isa. 22. 20—24. (27.) DANIEL, in his renowned piety and uprightness; his high favour with God; his distinguished wisdom, and uncommon revelations of God's purposes; his powerful prayers; his advancement to high honours, through exile, debasement, and trouble; and in the terrible vengeance which overtook his malicious persecutors, Dan. i.—xii.; Eze. 14. 14; 28. 3. (28.) ZERUBBABEL, in his dearness to God; his leading his people from Babylon to Canaan; and in his rebuilding the temple by weak means, and notwithstanding much opposition, Ezra i.—vi.; Zec. 4. 6—10; Hag. 1. 14; 2. 23. (29.) JOSHUA the high priest, in the resistance he received from Satan; the divine changing of his apparel; in the contempt which he and his fellows endured; and in their subsequent crowns of honour and fellowship with angels, Zec. iii. vi.; Ezra 5. 2. (30.) JOHN BAPTIST, in his divinely-predicted, preternatural, and gladdening birth; his early and eminent sanctity of nature and life; and in his solemn call to his work of reformation; his zeal, fidelity, and success therein; and in his martyrdom in the cause of truth, Mat. iii. xiv.; Luke i. iii.; John i. iii. These did all prefigure Jesus Christ in every thing, in his person, state, or conduct, correspondent with these things.

II. TYPICAL CLASSES OR ORDERS of men, which prefigured Jesus Christ, and his gospel ministers or people, in their stations, endowments, work, and reward. Thus (1.) The ISRAELITES IN GENERAL were figures of the saints, particularly in the gospel church, Heb. 11. 11, 12; Exod. i. ii. xiii. xiv. xvi. xvii. xix.; Num. i.—xxxvi.; Deut. iv.—ix.; 26. 5—9; Rom. 9. 4, 5, &c. (2.) The FIRST BORN HEBREW MALES prefigured Jesus Christ, and were emblems of his chosen saints, Exod. 13. 2, 11—16; 22. 29; 34. 19; Num. 3, 45—51; 8. 16; De. 21. 16, 17. (3.) The KINSMEN-REDEEMERS prefigured Christ in our nature, purchasing our happiness avenging our blood upon Satan and our lusts, redeeming our persons, and, by union and communion with them, rendering us fruitful in good works, Lev. 25. 25; Num. 35. 19—28; Ruth 4. 1—10. (4.) The YOUNGER UNMARRIED BROTHERS of a Hebrew who died childless, represent ministers and professors of the Christian church, who, by communion with the church, must either raise up a spiritual seed to Jesus their departed Brother, or expose themselves to everlasting shame and contempt, Deut. 25. 5—10. (5.) The VOLUNTARY BOND-SERVANTS figured out Jesus Christ, as, from love to God and his people, voluntarily engaging himself in the perpetual work of our salvation,—and his people, as constrained by his love to perpetual obedience, Exod. 21. 5, 6; Deut. 15. 16, 17. (6.) The SOJOURNING STRANGERS, not Canaanites, in the tender care taken of them; in their free access to the oracles and ordinances of God, and to the cities of refuge, represented the free and abundant access of the Gentiles to the gospel church, and their high privileges therein, Exod. 22. 21; 12. 48, 49; Lev. 19. 10; Num. 15. 4; 19. 10; 35. 15, &c. The HANGED MALEFACTORS of Israel, in their accursed death and speedy burial, figured out our Redeemer as clothed with our guilt and curse; crucified for the expiation of our crimes; and decently interred, without delay, to mark that the law was satisfied for our sin, Deut. 21. 22, 23. (8.) The HEBREW JUDGES, in their solemn call to deliver their people from that misery which their sins had procured; in their divine qualification for their work, and success therein, prefigured Jesus, our necessary, divinely-called, well-qualified, and successful deliverer, Judg. ii.—xvi.; 1 Sam. i.—vii.; 12. 11; Neh. 9. 27. (9.) The HEBREW KINGS of David's family, as introduced by the Israelites' rejection of God's immediate government; as taken from among their brethren; as divinely called to, and secured in, power by a perpetual covenant; as installed by unction, coronation, kisses, and shouts of subjection; as copying out the law of God for themselves, and constantly attending to it as the rule of their administrations; as charged not to trust on carnal supports, nor wallow in fleshly pleasures; as sitting on the Lord's throne, and ruling the Lord's people, but never exalting their heart above them; and as fighting the Lord's battles, and extirpating his accursed enemies, represented Jesus Christ as the mediatorial King of his church, and his saints as made kings unto God, 1 Sam. viii. xiii. xv.; 16. 1—13; 2 Chron. xi. xii.; 1 Kings 1. 39; 2 Kings 11. 12; 23. 30. (10.) The HOLY PROPHETS represented Jesus Christ and his gospel ministers and saints, Isa. vi.; Jer. i.; Ezek. ii.—xi.; Heb. i. Isa. i. to Mal. iv.; 2 Chron. 36. 15—17; Mat. 23. 34, 35. (11.) The NAZARITES figured out Jesus, his ministers, and his people, as solemnly, and yet voluntarily set apart to their sacred work; as constant and increasing in their manifest subjection to God; making known their moderation to all men; and as, amidst debasement and troubles, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord; and at last finishing their course in a manner thankful, solemn, and highly honourable to God, Num. vi.; Judg. xiii. (12.) The NETHINIMS, i. e. given ones, which consisted of the Gibeonites, and such others as were devoted to the lower services of the tabernacle or temple, in drawing water to wash the sacrifices, or hewing wood to burn them; in their voluntary subjection, their mean employment, and yet distinguished nearness to God; represented our devoted, condescending, and debased Redeemer, approaching to and enjoying remarkable fellowship with God in the service of his church, and his ministers and saints, Jos. 9. 22—27; 1 Chron. 9. 2; Ezra 2. 58. (13.) The LEVITES prefigured Jesus, as the solemnly-installed, the once-debased, but faithful Servant of his Father in all the concerns of his church; and were emblems of his ministers and saints in their labours of love and their ample reward, Exod. 32. 27—29; Deut. 33. 8—11; Mal. 2. 5, 6; Num. iii. iv. viii. xviii.; 35. 1—8; Deut. 12. 11—19; 14. 27—29; 18. 6—8; 2 Chron. 17. 8, 9; 19. 8; xxix.—xxxi.; Neh. viii. (14.) The AARONIC PRIESTS prefigured Jesus in his honourable pedigree, perfect purity, absolute fitness for his work, solemn call to it, and instalment therein; and his faithful and complete discharge thereof, issuing in a glorious, abundant, and everlasting reward; and they were also emblems of his ministers and saints, Heb. 5. 1; Ezra 2. 62, 63; Lev. xxi.; 22. 1— 3; 24. 5—9; i.—x. xii.—xv.; Exod. xxix.; 28. 40—43; 2 Chron. 13. 10, 12; Num. 4. 5—16; 6. 23—26; 8. 2, 3; 10. 1—10; xv. xviii. xxviii. xxix.; Deut. 17. 8—13; 18. 1—5; xx. 1—4. (15.) The HIGH PRIEST prefigured Jesus, the sole High Priest of our profession, in his unparalleled excellency, dignity, and purity; his Headship over his people; his robes of manhood, mediatorial office, and righteousness; his divine call to, and full preparation for his work, by the abundant influences of the Holy Ghost; his perfect attachment to, and attendance on that work; his communion with chosen and sanctified persons and pure churches; his making a full atonement for our sins, and bringing in an everlasting righteousness; and his entering into heaven by his own blood, that he might thence return to bless men in the gospel dispensation and last judgment, Exod. 28. 1—39; 29. 6; Lev. 21. 10—12; viii. ix. xvi.

III. TYPICAL EVENTS, or transient things, which prefigured Jesus, and the great events of our redemption by him. (1.) NOAH'S ARK represented Jesus in his diversified offices and states, as the sole means of saving an elect world committed to him by God from the overflowing deluge of infinite wrath; and is a figure of his body the church, without the limits of which none can be saved, Gen. vi.—viii.; Heb. 11. 7; 1 Pet. 3. 20, 21. (2.) JACOB'S LADDER, erected in the wilderness, and reaching from Jacob on earth to a promising Jehovah in heaven, and occupied by angels ascending and descending thereon; represented Jesus, as the Son of Jacob, in his manhood, and, of Jehovah in his divine person; in his different states of debasement and exaltation as the Mediator between God and men, ministered to by angels himself, and in whom they minister to us, Gen. 27. 11—15; John 1. 51. (3.) MOSES' BUSH, low, earthy, and combustible; burning, but not consumed; represented Jesus' manhood, low and weak in itself, inhabited by his fulness of Godhead, and exposed to the fierceness of his Father's wrath, but not consumed;—and his church, under fiery tribulations, but not destroyed, because inhabited by a promising God, Exod. 3. 2—10; Acts 7. 30—34. (4.) The PILLAR OF CLOUD AND FIRE which conducted the Hebrews in the wilderness, in its form; its seasonable origin; its hovering over the erected tabernacle; in its bedewing, enlightening, protecting, and directing influence; and in the many oracular instructions received from thence; marked out Jesus Christ and his gospel ordinances, Exod. 13. 20—22; 14. 20; 40. 34—38; Num. 9. 15—23; 10. 33, 34; Neh. 9. 14, 19; Psalm 105. 39; 1 Cor. 10. 2. (5.) The TREE discovered by God, and cast by Moses into the bitter waters of Marah for sweetening them, represented Jesus, found out by God, made under the law, and crucified for us, sweetening every thing awful, bitter, and troublesome, Exod. 15. 22—25. (6.) The MANNA represented Jesus as the bread of life, given to sinners of mankind in the gospel, and gathered and eaten by a true faith; and of which there is a plentiful memorial contained in gospel ordinances, Exod. xvi.; Num. 11. 4—9, 31—33; 21. 5, 6; Neh. 9. 15, 20; John 6. 32—57; (7.) The ROCKS of Rephidim and Kadesh, as smitten by Moses' rod, and emitting streams of water sufficient for all the Hebrew millions, and following them in in their way through the wilderness, represented Jesus, as obeying and suffering under Moses' law, that thence might issue forth streams of redeeming love, blood, spirit, and truth, for the life and comfort of sinners of mankind, Exod. 17. 1—7; Num. 20. 1—11; Neh. 9. 15, 20; Psalm 78. 15, 16; 105. 41; 114. 8; 1 Cor. 10. 4. (8.) The WELL DUG by the nobles of Israel on the border of Moab, at Moses' direction, represented Christ as the fountain opened in the gospel, by the prophets and apostles, for the purification and comfort of his people in this world, Num. 21. 16—18. (9.) The CLUSTER OF GRAPES, brought by Caleb and Joshua from Eshcol, might figure out his unnumbered excellences, blessings, promises, gifts, and graces, brought near in the gospel, and exhibited to men as evidences of the plenty which is to be enjoyed in the Canaan above, Num. 13. 23, 24. (10.) While AARON'S BUDDING ROD, laid up in the foreside of the ark, marked the divine appointment, the constant succession, and ever-useful labours of the Aaronic priests, it represented Jesus the ever-flourishing and fruitful branch of the Lord; and the gospel rod of his strength, as the demonstrative evidence of his call to his high priesthood, Num. xvii.; Psalm 110. 2. (11.) The BRAZEN SERPENT, appointed by God, framed by Moses, and lifted up on a pole, that the serpent-bitten Israelites might be healed by looking to it, represented the Almighty Jesus, in the likeness of sinful flesh, fulfilling Moses' law, and lifted up on the cross and in the gospel, as the divinely-appointed, the easy, the accessible, the universal, and infallible Saviour and medicine of sinful men, who look to him by faith, Num. 21. 4—9; John 3. 14—17. (12, 13.) The POOLS OF BETHESDA and SILOAM, occasionally noted for their healing virtue, might figure him out as the miraculous healer of maimed, withered, lame, diseased, and blind sinners, John 5. 1—4; 9. 6, 7; Zec. 13. 1; Isa. 8. 6. (14, 15.) The DELIVERANCE of the Hebrews from Egypt and Babylon, in the time and manner fixed by God's promise, and notwithstanding much opposition, prefigured Jesus' promised, seasonable, marvellous, all-powerful deliverance of the nations from their misery under heathenism or popery, through his erection or re-establishment of his gospel church; and are emblems of men's deliverance from an unregenerate state, Exod. xiv.; Psalm lxxviii. cv.; Ezra i. ii. (16.) The TRAVELS of the Hebrews in the wilderness, amidst sins, judgments, trials, mercies, and revelations unnumbered, and their marvellous ENTRANCE into Canaan, were typical of the diversified fates of the gospel church, and her marvellous entrance into her millennial and eternal rest, Exod. xv. to Deut. xxxiv.; Neh. 9. 15—23; Psalm 78. 14—54; 105. 39—43; 106. 14—33; Jos. i.—v. (17.) Their divinely directed and wonderfully successful WARS, in the conquest or preservation of Canaan, were typical of the manifold struggles of the gospel church to extend her boundaries or maintain her privileges; and emblematical of the saints' spiritual warfare on earth, Exod. 17. 8—16; Num. 21. 1—3, 21—35; Jos. vi.—xii.; Judg. i.—xvi.; 2 Sam. v. viii. x. &c.

IV. MISCELLANEOUS ORDINANCES, many, if not most of which, pertained to their civil as well as to their ceremonial system. These, in general, directed them to live as a people separated to the Lord, and who in all things, even the most minute, were zealous for his honour. (1.) To mark them Abraham's seed, distinguished from all others; to seal them with the covenant of grace, and their peculiar relation to God; to prefigure Jesus Christ, as shedding his blood for his people; and to represent our spiritual regeneration and mortification; every man-child was, under pain of death, to be CIRCUMCISED on the eighth day, Gen. xvii. (2.) To mark that nothing should be rashly, or in an improper condition, given to the Lord, no animal, however clean, was to be offered till it was at least seven days old, Exod. 22. 30. The fruit of trees was held polluted for the first three years, and only on the fourth year given to the Lord, after which it was the lawful property of its owner, Lev. 19. 23—25. The price of a dog, or the hire of an harlot, or any thing else unlawfully gotten, was never to be offered to the Lord, Deut. 23. 18; Isa. 61. 8. A bond-woman defiled, having nothing of her own, was to bring no trespass-offering, but to be scourged for her fault, Lev. 19. 20—22. (3.) To mark a regard to the Lord's oblations, and to Jesus' death, thereby represented, none might eat of any blood, or of the fat of any cattle, sheep, or goats, Lev. 17. 6; 7. 23—27. (4.) To excite the Jews to the utmost purity in all manner of conversation, none might eat of clean beasts which had been torn, or had died of themselves, Lev. 17. 15; Deut. 14. 21; and every one was to ease nature at a proper distance, and cover the excrements, Deut. 23. 12—14. (5.) To prevent symbolizing with heathenish and inhuman superstition, and to animate the most tender compassion, none might cut his flesh, or make himself bald, in mourning for deceased friends, Lev. 19. 27, 28; Deut. 14. 1. None might boil an animal in its mother's milk, or slay the dam along with her young, Exod. 23. 19; 34. 26; Deut. 14. 21; 22. 6, 7; Lev. 22. 28. Nor was the mouth of an ox, while treading out the corn, to be muzzled, Deut. 25. 4. (6.) To teach them the hurtfulness of improper mixtures of persons in societies; or of works and grace; or of ordinances of God and inventions of men; no eunuchs, bastards, Ammonites, or Moabites, were to be admitted into any share of the Hebrew government, Deut. 23. 1—8. No Israelite might wear a garment proper to the other sex, Deut. 22. 5. None might wear a garment of woollen and linen, Deut. 22. 11. None might sow his field with a mixture of divers seeds, Deut. 22. 9. None might plough with an ox and an ass yoked together, Deut. 22. 10; nor gender his cattle with divers kinds, Lev. 19. 19. (7.) To mark the most disinterested love and tender compassion towards mankind, and to figure out the rich abundance of Jesus' redeeming grace, no servant who had fled from a hard master was to be delivered back to him, Deut. 23. 15. No captive maid was to be married till she had remained a month to prepare herself and bewail the loss of her parents, Deut. 21. 10—14. No man betrothed or newly married, or who had newly built a house or planted a vineyard, was required to attend in war, Deut. 20. 5—7; 24. 5. None might lend money upon usury to a poor Hebrew, if to any Hebrew at all; or render him a bond-servant, Lev. 25. 36, 37; Deut. 23. 19. None might reap the corners of his field; nor glean those of his vineyard; nor shake his fruit trees a second time; nor bring home a sheaf which he had once forgotten in the field; but all was to be left to the poor, to the stranger, to the fatherless and the widow, Lev. 19. 9, 10. (8.) Not only to deter from every indulgence of fleshly lust, but to mark the fearful end of those who hypocritically join themselves to the church, or who dishonour Jesus by their scandalous and continued outbreakings, the woman who falsely imposed herself upon an husband as a virgin, was to be publicly stoned, Deut. 22. 21; and a priest's daughter who played the harlot was to be burnt, Lev. 21. 9. (9.) To animate them to a constant gratitude for mercies received, and a regard to the commandments of God, every Hebrew's upper garment was marked with a blue fringe, commemorative of the redemption from Egypt, and of his obligation to obey the law of Moses, Num. 15. 37—41.

V. TYPICAL PLACES, which were ceremonially holy, but in different degrees. Canaan was holy in the lowest degree, the cities of refuge in the second, Jerusalem in the third, Mount Zion in the fourth, and the tabernacle and temple in the highest. In the more sacred places God symbolically dwelt: thither his offerings were brought, there his festivals were kept, and thence his oracles were to be sought, Deut. 12. 5—7; Psalm lxxxvii. cxxii. cxxxii. (1.) CANAAN, as the wonted residence of ejected sinners; as a land divinely chosen for God's favourites; long promised, freely bestowed, and graciously inspected by the eye of God; a land orderly allotted to God's chosen people, brought thither by miracles unnumbered; a land singularly nourished by the influence of heaven, and fruitful in every thing necessary for subsistence and delight; and, to crown all, the sacred residence of Jehovah, and of the ordinances of his grace (but how despised and come short of through unbelief!)—prefigured the state of the New Testament church, and of the celestial happiness; and was an emblem of our new covenant state of union to, and fellowship with Jesus Christ, Gen. 15. 18—21; Exod. 3. 8, 17; 6. 8; Num. 14. 7, 8; Deut. 6. 10, 11; 8. 7—10; 11. 9—12; Neh. 9. 25, 35; Ezek. 20. 6, 15; Psalm 106. 24; Heb. 3. 19. (2.) The CITIES OF REFUGE, in their names; and as being near to the borders of the heathen, and easily accessible to every man-slayer; as Levitical cities of instruction; as perpetually having their gates open, with excellent roads leading to them; and in the protection and peace which they secured for the refugees who remained in them till the death of the high priest; represented Jesus Christ, as the all-renowned, near, accessible, completely furnished, and everlasting refuge of sinful men, Jews and Gentiles, in which they receive spiritual light, life, liberty, peace, and safety, Num. 35. 6—34; Deut. 4. 41—43; Jos. xx. xxi. (3.) JERUSALEM, in its name marking peace and perfection discerned and possessed; in its stable foundation, compact form, beautiful appearance, and strong fortifications; and as a city chosen of God, holy, healthy, rich, renowned, royal, populous, and privileged, prefigured the gospel church below, and the heavenly Jerusalem above, Psalm 48. 1—4; 76. 2; 122. 2—9; 125. 2; Jos. 15. 63. (4.) MOUNT ZION, in its beautiful situation; its extensive and pleasant prospect; its unshaken stability; its joyous dwellings; its protection by and dearness to God, as the peculiar residence of himself and his chosen kings of David's family, was also an emblem of our fixed and glorious new covenant state, and a figure of the gospel church, and of the heavenly glory, 2 Sam. v.; Psalm 48. 2—4; 76. 1; 78. 68, 69; 125. 1. (5.) The TABERNACLE, appointed for God's peculiar residence, represented Jesus Christ, the free, but altogether pure and precious gift of God, in his marvellous form, but much unseen excellencies; in the order and connection of his offices, states, and every thing else; as having in himself all fulness of atoning, purifying, enlightening, interceding, nourishing, law-magnifying virtue; as well pleasing to God; and as being the sole Mediator, in whom God and his people have fellowship one with another. It also represented the church in her divine plan, her pure and precious materials, connected by the wisdom of God; in her different states, filled with all the fulness of Christ, consecrated by his blood and Spirit, and formed for his service; and, at last, in all her true members and important concerns, fixed in the heavenly temple, Exod. xxv.—xxvii.; 30. 26—29; xxxvi.—xl.; Num. iii. iv.; Jos. 18. 1. (6.) The TEMPLE stood on mount Moriah, towards the south-east of Jerusalem, in a large court, surrounded by a high wall, and divided into two parts; the INNER for the priests and Levites, and the OUTER for the clean Israelites. It prefigured Jesus Christ and his church in their more glorious and exalted state. It typified his manhood, as the divinely-planned, curious, pure, and glorious residence of his Godhead;—typified his person, as the glorious, fixed, and lasting means of our fellowship with God;—typified the church, as formed by manifold oracles, ordinances, and members, to be the residence of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost;—and typified heaven itself, in its glorious fulness of redemption, and as the honoured mansion of complete and immediate fellowship with God;—and it was an emblem of every particular saint, whose soul and body are, by Jesus, built up and consecrated as temples of God, 1 Kings vi.—viii.; 1 Chron. xxii.—xxvi.; 29. 1—9; 2 Chron. iii.—vi.

VI. The TYPICAL or SACRED UTENSILS were (1.) The ARK. It represented Jesus Christ God-man, to the astonishment of angels and men, fulfilling all righteousness, glorifying and delighting his Father to the highest, and containing in him every memorial of Jehovah's kindness; every thing necessary for the instruction, confirmation, and nourishment of his people; and who, being consecrated to his work, and carried about in the gospel, directs their journeys, blesses those who sincerely receive him, overcomes their enemies, opens their passage into their promised rest, and punishes such as profanely abuse him, Exod. 25. 10—22; 37. 1—9; 40. 9, 35; 16. 33, 34; Num. 17. 10; Deut. 10. 3—5; Lev. 16. 2; Jos. 3. 11—17; 6. 14—20; 1 Sam. v.; 6. 19; 2 Sam. 6. 11; 1 Kings 8. 4—12. (2.) The TABLE OF SHOW-BREAD was formed of shittim-wood overlaid with gold. This table and its furniture prefigured Jesus Christ presenting all his chosen tribes, in every generation, before God in his intercession; or the gospel, as presenting him and his fulness to his people, chiefly on the weekly sabbath, Exod. 25. 23—30; 29. 31; 30. 27; 37. 10—16; 40. 22; Lev. 24. 5—9; 8. 31; 1 Kings 7. 45; 2 Chron. 4. 8; Mat. 12. 4; Heb. 9. 2, 21. (3.) The ALTAR OF INCENSE, so called, because frankincense was daily burnt thereon, while the burnt-offerings were consumed by sacred fire on the brazen altar, was formed of shittim-wood overlaid with gold. It represented Jesus Christ appearing before God in our nature in his intercession, and presenting our services to him, Exod. 30. 1—10, 27, 34—38; 37. 25—29; 1 Kings 6. 20; Rev. 8. 3, 4. (4.) The GOLDEN CANDLESTICK consisted of almost 114 pounds weight of gold, beaten out into seven branches adorned with knops and flowers. It stood on the south side of the golden altar; and, being daily supplied with sacred oil, and its lamps lighted and trimmed by the priests, was the sole illuminator of the sanctuary. Solomon made ten golden candlesticks, and placed five of them on each side of the sanctuary. It represented Jesus Christ, who hath the seven spirits of God, as the sole enlightener of his church; and his church as the enlightener of this dark world, Exod. 25. 31—40; 40. 22—25; Lev. 24. 1—4; Num. 8. 1—4; 1 Sam. 3. 3; 1 Kings 7. 49; 2 Chron. 4. 7. (5.) The BRAZEN LAVER was a large vessel, holding water for the priests to wash their hands or feet, or the sacrifices, while they were occupied in their work at the tabernacle or temple. It stood near to the entrance of the sanctuary. Solomon formed ten new lavers, each capable of containing about 307 gallons, 5 pints, English wine measure; five of which he placed on each side of the entrance to the sanctuary upon bases of curious workmanship. He also formed a still larger vessel, called the BRAZEN SEA, which, upon occasion, could hold 23,029 gallons, 5 pints, which he placed upon twelve brazen oxen, three looking towards each quarter. This represented Jesus Christ, as the fountain opened for the purification of his people, exhibited in the gospel by the twelve patient, pure, and laborious apostles, and other ministers, Exod. 30. 17—21; 38. 8; Lev. 8. 10, 11; 1 Kings 7. 23—40; 2 Chron. 4. 2—6, 14, 15; Heb. 9. 21. (6.) The ALTAR, upon which the Lord's part of the sacrifices and meat-offerings was burned. Before the flood we read of no altars at all. Before the erection of the tabernacle the altars appear to have been formed of earth, or unhewn stones; and such were afterwards used on some particular occasions. They represented Jesus in his debased state, but capable of enduring the flames of his Father's wrath. That which Moses formed consisted of shittim-wood overlaid with brass. It was about 9 feet square, and 5½ feet high. Its top was a brazen grate, through which the ashes of the oblations fell into a pan below. At each corner it had a brazen spire, or horn, which protected man-slayers. It was carried about, when necessary, on staves of shittim-wood overlaid with brass. The new altar which Solomon built for the temple, was 36½ feet square, and its height 18¼ feet. It had an easy access on the east side. After the captivity, a large pile of stones appear to have supplied the place of it. This altar was consecrated by an unction of blood and oil. It represented Jesus Christ, in his debased state, as our infinitely-valuable Mediator, all-sufficient atonement, and never-failing refuge from God's wrath; through whom we have access to, and nourishment from God; and our persons and services are rendered acceptable in his sight, Exod. 27. 1—9; 29. 36, 37; 38. 1—7; 1 Kings 7. 50; 2 Chron. 4. 1; Ezra 3. 3; with Gen. 8. 20; 12. 7; 35. 1, 3; Exod. 20. 24, 25; Num. 19. 3; Deut. 21. 4; Jos. 8. 30—35; Judg. 6. 24; 1 Sam. 7. 6; 2 Sam. 24. 25; 1 Kings 8. 63, 64; 18. 30, 32. (7.) For calling together the Hebrew assemblies, for announcing their journeys in the wilderness, for encouraging them in their battles, for proclaiming their festivals, or for triumphing on them by a solemn sound over the sacrifices, Moses made two SILVER TRUMPETS for the priests. Solomon increased the number to 120. These represented the gospel, by the preaching of which sinners are gathered to Jesus, animated to their spiritual pilgrimage, encouraged in their Christian warfare, and have their liberties and spiritual feasts announced:—and of which the great subject is Christ and him crucified, Num. 10. 1—10; 2 Chron. 5. 12; Psalm 81. 1, 2; 89. 15. (8.) The STANDARDS of weight and measure, kept in the sanctuary, might represent Christ's word and his perfect pattern; Ezek. 45. 9—12; Exod. 30. 13.

VII. TYPICAL OBLATIONS. Immediately after the fall, God appears to have instituted sacrifices. With the skins of sacrificed animals our first parents were clothed by him, Gen. 3. 21. Abel's offering of a sheep, Noah's oblations of animals and fowls, Abraham's oblation of a ram instead of Isaac, Gen. 4. 4; 8. 20; 22. 13; Job's offerings for his children, and his friends' oblations for themselves, Job 1. 5; 42. 8; are the most noted sacrifices we read of during the first 2513 years of the world. Never till in the federal transaction between God and Israel, Exod. xxiv. do we read of any sacrifices besides burnt-offerings. (1.) God having separated the Hebrews for a people to himself, exceedingly extended, and expressly inculcated the law of typical oblations; including SACRIFICES, in which there was a destruction of the animal life to the honour of God; and GIFTS, in which no life was destroyed; as in meat-offerings, drink-offerings, soul ransom-money, tithes, &c. While these oblations were intended as an acknowledgment that the Hebrews held all their property from God, they were typical of Jesus Christ, offered to God, and useful to men; and generally represented the moral duties of ministers and people. The animals, as living, eatable, clean, tame, social, valuable, male, and in the prime of life, &c. and the fine flour, marked out the necessary excellency in Jesus Christ and his people, and their services. The voluntary manner in which they were offered represented the willing and cheerful obedience of Christ and his people. The presentation thereof, at the door of the tabernacle, imported dedication to God, and acceptableness, through Christ's person and mediation. The laying on of the offerer's hands imported the transferring of guilt on the sacrifice, and the devoting it to God. The slaughter of the animals represented the death of Christ, that the offerer ought thus to have suffered, and our surrender of our life to his service. The sprinkling of the blood round about the altar, or towards the mercy-seat, &c. marked the divine virtue of Christ's blood to satisfy an offended God, and purify the whole church. The washing of the sacrifice, or any part of it, marked the perfect purity of Christ—in which his people ought to imitate him. The burning of the whole or part of the oblation represented the sufferings of Christ and his people. The holy fire denoted the wrath of God preying upon Christ, and holy love flaming in Christ and in his people. The parting of the oblations between God and the priests, or, in some cases, also the people, imported that the obedience and suffering of Christ, and even of his people, at once glorify God, and bring advantage to men.

These oblations were (1.) BURNT-OFFERINGS, so called, because the flesh was wholly burnt. They represented Jesus Christ, by the complete sacrifice of himself, honouring all his Father's perfections, that his people might obtain spiritual clothing, nourishment, and comfort, Lev. 1. 2, 13; 6. 8—13; 7. 8; 22. 19—27; Num. 15. 1—16; xxviii. xxix. (2.) The SIN and TRESPASS-OFFERINGS were never merely voluntary. They represented Jesus Christ, divinely charged with our sins, and dying in our stead for the satisfaction of God's justice, and for advancing his own and his people's happiness, Lev. iv. v.; 6. 1—7, 24—30; 7. 1—11; xvi.; Num. 15. 22—31. (3.) PEACE-OFFERINGS thanked God for mercies received, and obtained mercies desired, or paid vows. These offerings represented Jesus Christ as purchasing for us everlasting peace and prosperity, to the honour of his Father, the joy of ministers, and the speedy comfort of saved men, Lev. iii.; 7. 11—21, 28, 34; Deut. 18. 3. (4.) The MEAT-OFFERINGS, whether offered separately by themselves, or as appendages to burnt-offerings, peace-offerings, trespass-offerings, or to the kid and lamb sin-offerings, consisted of fine flour, frankincense, oil, and salt. Whether they were baked or fried, or not, a part thereof was burnt on the altar to the Lord, and the rest belonged to the priests. They represented Jesus Christ, the most excellent fruit of the earth, prepared by dolorous sufferings to be the everlasting joy of Jehovah, and delightful nourishment of his chosen people, Lev. ii.; 6. 14—23; 7. 9, 10; Num. 15. 1—16; 18. 9, 10. (5.) The DRINK-OFFERINGS of wine were scarcely ever used alone, but attended the meat-offerings. Part of the wine was poured out to the Lord on the altar, and the rest was given to the priests. They represented that fulness of consolation which flows from Jesus' offering of himself for us, and our feeding on him by faith, Exod. 29. 40; Num. 15. 1—16; xxviii. xxix. (6.) The HOLY ANOINTING OIL was formed by pounding together myrrh, cinnamon, cassia, calamus, and olive oil. By an unction of it the priests and holy utensils were consecrated to their sacred work; and on nothing else might it be put, or any ointment made like unto it under pain of death. It represented the Holy Ghost in his manifold precious virtues, by whom Jesus Christ, his ministers, people, and ordinances, are consecrated to, and fitted for their respective uses, Exod. 30. 22—33. (7.) The SOUL-RANSOM MONEY, of which every man, poor or rich, was to give half a shekel when the congregation was numbered, if not once every year, that there might be no plague among them, represented Jesus Christ as a ransom, equally given for both poor and rich, to prevent the infliction of God's wrath on his people, Exod. 30. 11—16; 38. 25, 26. (8.) The FIRST-FRUITS of animals, vegetables, dough, wool, &c. which were partly assigned to the Lord, and partly to the priests, represented Jesus Christ as the great honourer of God, and the sanctifying head of his people; and represented his people as the glory and preservers of nations and churches, Exod. 13. 12—16; 22. 29, 30; Lev. 22, 27; Num. 18. 12—18; 15. 17—21. (9.) To commemorate the Israelites' living in the wilderness on tenth deals of manna, their limited meat-offerings were all proportioned by tenth deals, Num. 15. 1—16; for the same reason the share, which the Lord demanded of their crop, was measured by TENTHS or TITHES. One tenth of their whole income from their fields, &c. was assigned to the Levites in general, who gave a TENTH part thereof to the priests. A second TENTH of their incomes was appointed to be spent in feasting the poor, &c. at the sacred festivals. At least every third year, ANOTHER TENTH, or perhaps the SECOND TENTH, was to be given to the Levites and the poor at their homes. These TITHES figured out Jesus Christ as the abundant provision of his people; and his people as the abundant means of his satisfaction and delight. They represented the duty of our devoting a considerable part of our incomes to the Lord, and of maintaining his faithful ministers in a decent manner, Num. 18. 20—32; Deut. 14. 22—29. (10.) DEVOTED things or persons assigned to the Lord by voluntary vow, more or less solemn. Nothing belonging to the Lord by an antecedent claim, as first-fruits, tithes, &c. might be devoted. Nothing devoted might be redeemed back, without paying a fifth part more than the priest's estimation of its worth. And nothing devoted under a curse could be redeemed at all. These gifts represented Jesus Christ and his saints voluntarily, deliberately, and irrevocably devoted to the service of God, Lev. xxvii.

The WAVE and HEAVE-OFFERINGS were not different from what we have mentioned, but were either less sacred oblations, or but a part of the more sacred. Thus the right shoulder and breast, fat, kidneys, &c. of the priest's ram of consecration, with the loaf, the cake of oiled bread, and wafer of unleavened bread, which attended it, Exod. 29. 22—26; Lev. 8. 25—29; the right shoulder and breast, and perhaps the fat, of all peace-offerings, with the leavened loaf of the thank-offering, Lev. 7. 30; 10. 15; the lepers' trespass-offering with its attendant log of oil, Lev. 14. 12, 24; the jealousy-offering, Num. 5. 25; the sheaf or omer of ripe ears at the feast of unleavened bread, Lev. 23. 15; the two loaves at Pentecost, and their attendant peace-offering, Lev. 23. 19, 20; the first of the dough, Num. 15. 19, 21; the tithes, Num. 18. 24—30; the Lord's tribute of the spoil of Midian, Num. 31. 29, 41; were heaved up towards heaven, or waved towards the four winds, in acknowledgment of their coming from God, and in token of devoting them to his service, who is the Most High, and every where present Jehovah.

More abundantly to represent Jesus Christ in his person, his righteousness and the virtue of them, two or more of the simple sacrifices were often joined together. Thus, for the consecration of the Levites, for the purification of a defiled Nazarite, for the purification of a woman polluted by child-birth, for the purification of one cured of a running issue, and for a congregational sin of ignorance or bird-expiation, a burnt-offering and a sin-offering were connected, Lev. 5. 7; 12. 6, 8; 15. 14, 30; Num. 8. 12; 6. 11; 15. 24. For the consecration of priests, a sin-offering, a burnt-offering, and ram of consecration, i. e a kind of peace-offering, Exod. xxix.; Lev. viii. ix. For a Nazarite after finishing his vow, a sin-offering, burnt-offering, and peace-offering, Num. 6. 14. For the purification of a healed leper, a bird-offering, a burnt-offering, a sin-offering, and a trespass-offering, Lev. 14. 6—20. For dedicating the Mosaic altar, burnt-offerings, sin-offerings, peace-offerings, twelve days repeated, Num. vii. For dedicating Solomon's temple, large burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, 1 Kings 8. 63, 64. For dedicating Zerubbabel's temple, burnt-offerings, sin-offerings, and peace-offerings, Ezra 6. 16. At Pentecost, a burnt-offering, sin-offering, and peace-offering, Lev. 23. 15—21; Num. 28. 26—31. At the other monthly and annual festivals, a burnt-offering and sin-offering, Lev. xxiii.; Num. xxviii. xxix.

VIII. TYPICAL OR SACRED SEASONS. (1.) To be a constant mean of Israel's fellowship with God, and to represent Jesus Christ as predestinated before the foundation of the world, and in these last times offered for all the elect, to be the constant nourishment of their souls, and daily mean of their access to God and familiar intimacy with him, a lamb, bought with the public money, and charged with the guilt of all the tribes, by the laying on of the hands of the stationary men who represented them, was offered for the nation every morning about nine o'clock, while the incense was burnt on the golden altar, and the people prayed in the court; and another in the afternoon; with their respective meat-offerings and drink-offerings, Exod. 29. 38—45; Lev. 6. 9, 12; Num. 28. 1—8, &c. (2.) To prefigure the evangelical and celestial rest, and more abundant manifestation of Jesus Christ therein, not only was every SABBATH to be observed as a day of rest from all manner of work, and used in the exercises of devotion, but thereon the morning and evening sacrifices were doubled, Exod. 31. 12—17; 35. 2, 3; Num. 15. 32, 35; 28. 9, 10. (3.) To thank God for the merciful alterations of the moon, and changing of the seasons; to expiate the sins, and make grateful acknowledgment of the mercies of the finished month, and to supplicate the continuance of these favours, and to represent the renovation of all things to infinite advantage by Jesus' incarnation and mediation, and the happy and extensive discovery and virtue of himself and his work in the evangelical and eternal state; the DAY OF THE NEW MOON'S APPEARANCE was celebrated by abstinence from the servile labours of ploughing, sowing, &c. and a large burnt-offering of two bullocks, one ram, and seven lambs—and a sin-offering of one kid was offered for the congregation; over which sacrifice the priests blew with the silver trumpets, Amos 8. 5; 2 Kings 4. 22; Num. 28. 11—15; 10. 10; Psalm 81. 1, 2. (4.) To commemorate the Hebrews' deliverance from Egypt; to seal the covenant of grace with the genuine seed of Abraham; to prefigure our redemption through the slaughter of Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, in the end of the world, by the rulers and people of Judah at this very season of the year; and to represent our safe and delightful feeding on him by faith and with godly sorrow; the PASSOVER was yearly observed on the 14th day of that month in which they came out of Egypt; which for commemoration of that deliverance, was appointed to begin their sacred year, and answered nearly to our month of March. A male lamb or kid of a year old, was taken, sacrificed, or at least slain; its blood sprinkled on the door-posts and upper lintel, as a means of preservation from the angel who destroyed the first-born of the Egyptians: and the flesh of it being roasted, without breaking a bone thereof, was eaten that same night by about twelve or twenty in company, with unleavened bread, bitter herbs, and pious conference. Such as could not observe it that very day, did it on that same day in the following month, Exod. xii.; Lev. 23. 5; Jos. 5. 10; Deut. 16. 1—7; Num. 9. 9—14; 28. 16; 2 Chron. 30. 1—20; 35. 1—18. (5.) To commemorate the Israelites' affliction and coarse fare in Egypt, and their sudden deliverance therefrom; to commemorate their seven days' travels before they got through the Red Sea; to prefigure the low and afflicted, but devout life of our Redeemer and of his saints on earth; and to prefigure the fate of his gospel church; the FEAST OF UNLEAVENED BREAD was observed on the seven days which followed the passover; on the first and last of which no servile work of ploughing, sowing, or the like, was transacted. No bread but unleavened was eaten upon any of the seven. On each of them two bullocks, one ram, and seven lambs, were offered for a burnt-offering, and a kid for a sin-offering for the congregation. The silver trumpets were blown over the burnt-offering, while it lay on the altar; Exod. 12. 17—20; 13. 4—10; 23. 14—17; 34. 18; Lev. 23. 6—8; Deut. 16. 8; Num. 28. 17—25. To sanctify the approaching harvest, and prefigure the resurrection of Jesus Clirist, our great sacrifice from the dead on that very day of the year, and the effectual spread of the gospel which followed it, a sheaf of barley was publicly reaped, thrashed, and winnowed: an omer of the meal or ears, being waved and heaved along with frankincense and oil, part of it was burnt on the altar along with a lamb for burnt-offering, and part of its double meat-offering, Lev. 23. 9—14. (6.) To give thanks for their quiet possession of Canaan, and for the mercies of the finished harvest; to commemorate the publication of the law from mount Sinai; to prefigure the effusion of the Holy Ghost after our Saviour's ascension, and the amazing spread and influence of the gospel by means thereof, was the festival of PENTECOST observed; i. e. of the fiftieth day after the passover, about our Whitsuntide. No servile work was done thereon. Besides the ordinary festival sacrifice of two bullocks, two rams, and seven lambs, for a burnt-offering, and a kid for a sin-offering, another sacrifice was offered of one bullock, two rams, and seven lambs, for a burnt-offering, a kid for a sin-offering, and two lambs for a peace-offering, along with two leavened loaves, each containing a tenth deal of fine flour, as the first-fruits of their finished wheat harvest. In presenting this oblation, they made a solemn acknowledgment of the original meanness of their nation, and of God's gracious fulfilment of his promises to them, Exod. 23. 14—17; 34. 22, 23; Lev. 23. 15—21; Num. 28. 26—31; Deut. 16. 9—12; 26. 1—11. (7.) To commemorate the creation of all things at this season; to thank God for the mercies of the finished civil year, and to obtain mercies for the year now commencing; to prepare the people for the great day of atonement; and especially to prefigure the joyful and efficacious spread of the gospel of our crucified Redeemer, was the FEAST OF TRUMPETS observed on the first day of the first civil, but seventh sacred month. No servile work was done thereon. To the new moon offering above mentioned was added another sacrifice of one bullock, one ram, and seven lambs for a burnt-offering, and a kid for a sin-offering. The silver trumpets, or others of rams' horns, were blown over the burning sacrifices from morning till night, Num. 29. 1—6; 10. 10. (8.) Perhaps to commemorate the fall of man on this day of the year, or to commemorate God's reconcilement to Israel after they had worshipped the golden calf, or contemned Canaan; but chiefly for expiating the sins of the preceding year, and to prefigure Jesus' debased and laborious course of obedience and suffering as the sole mean of atonement for a guilty world before God, the ANNUAL EXPIATION was observed on the 10th day of this month. No manner of work was to be done thereon more than on the Sabbath. All the Hebrews observed it in solemn fasting and affliction of their souls. After the daily sacrifice of a lamb, for a burnt-offering, and the festival sacrifice of one bullock, one ram, seven lambs, for a burnt-offering, and a kid for a sin-offering, were finished, the high priest, washed in water, and mostly dressed in his plain garments, performed the whole work of sacrificing peculiar to that day. For himself and his fellow priests he offered a bullock for a sin-offering. Having carried some incense into the Holy of Holies, and kindled it before, perhaps on the west side of the ark, he carried in part of the bullock's blood, and sprinkled it amidst the smoke of the incense, once towards the top, and seven times towards the foreside of the ark. Of the two goats for a sin-offering for the whole nation, one chosen by lot was offered: part of its blood was carried into the most holy place, and sprinkled once towards the top, and seven times towards the front of the mercy-seat, to make atonement for the oracle and sanctuary, which was ceremonially polluted by the sins of the worshippers who attended at it. The rest of the blood of the goat, mingled with part of the blood of the bullock, was sprinkled towards both sides of the sanctuary. The horns of the golden, and I suppose also of the brazen altar, were tipt therewith seven times. The other goat, after being charged with the guilt of the nation, confessed to God over his head, was dismissed by a fit person into the wilderness. Two rams, one for the priests, and another for the people, were then offered for burnt-offerings; along with the fat of the bullock and goat of the sin-offerings; the flesh of which was burnt without the camp. The high priest then solemnly blessed the people, Num. 29. 7—11; Lev. 23. 26—32; xvi. (9.) To commemorate the Israelites' safe dwelling in their tents for forty years in the Arabian wilderness; to show their thankfulness to God for their happy enjoyment of their fruitful country; to prefigure Jesus' tabernacling in our nature, and through his whole life solemnly offering up himself an infinitely valuable sacrifice to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of his people; to prefigure the state of the gospel church, the abundant manifestation and virtue of a crucified Redeemer therein, and the noted rest and joy of the apostolic and millennial periods; and to represent the believers' pilgrimage on earth, and at last happy entrance into heaven, was the FEAST OF TABERNACLES celebrated by all the Israelites, at the place where God's tabernacle or temple stood, on the 15th and seven following days of the seventh sacred and first civil month. The first and last days thereof were solemn convocations, on which no servile work was done: the people dwelt in booths formed of olive branches, &c. and sin-offerings, and large, but constantly decreasing burnt-sacrifices, were offered on each of the days for the Israelitish nation, Lev. 23. 33—43; Deut. 16. 13—15; 31. 10; Neh. 8. 13—18; Num. 29. 12—38. The law was read with peculiar solemnity at the feast of tabernacles, &c. and it was only at THIS FEAST, the PASSOVER or feast of unleavened bread, and PENTECOST, that all the males of Israel, capable of travelling, were obliged to attend, Exod. 23. 14—17; 34. 22, 23; Deut. 16. 16. (10.) For securing solemn instruction to the Hebrew nation; for relief of the poor, especially such as were in debt; and to mark Canaan the Lord's peculiar and rightful property; to manifest that not its fruitful soil, but God's providence was their security for a supply; and to prefigure our spiritual redemption, liberty, and rest, through Jesus Christ, particularly in the New Testament church and heavenly state, the SEVENTH YEAR, beginning with the seventh sacred month, when the fields were quite clear of the crop, was observed as a sabbath. The fields lay uncultivated; their spontaneous growth was common property, but chiefly belonged to the poor. And the debt which one Israelite owed to another was forborne if not remitted, Lev. 25. 2—7; Deut. 15. 1—18; 31. 10. (11.) To keep the property of their respective shares of Canaan fixed in the Hebrew families, and to keep their genealogies clear till Christ should come; to prevent perpetual oppression, poverty, and bondage, or even undue hastening to be rich; but chiefly to prefigure our redemption by Jesus Christ in the evangelical and celestial state of the church, that year, which, beginning on the 10th day of the seventh sacred month, i. e. the fast of expiation consisting partly of the 49th, and partly of the 50th year, was observed as a JUBILEE of rest. It was proclaimed by sound of trumpet through the whole country; perhaps most of the inhabitants joined in the solemn sound. The fields lay uncultivated. The spontaneous growth belonged chiefly to the poor. Every debt which one Israelite or proselyte of the covenant owed to another was absolutely and finally remitted. Slaves and prisoners were set free. Estates which had been sold, reverted to their original proprietors; and hence the nearer to the approaching jubilee a sale took place, the price of lands was so much the lower, Lev. 25. 8—55.

CHRONOLOGY.

CHRONOLOGY is the computation of time, and the adjustment and determination of the various epochs, eras, and periods, of which it is composed. The data for chronological reasoning are very defective, vague, and contradictory, especially when inquiry is directed to remote periods of profane history; and even in Sacred History, we do not find such satisfactory definitions of time, as will enable us to fix dates and eras with precision. The most that can be said for Chronology, anterior to the Christian era, is, that it is an approximation to truth. This approximation, however, is valuable, since it places before us the particular histories of mankind in contemporaneous periods, and enables us, with more or less exactness, according to the sufficiency of the data, to reduce the great points of universal history to chronological order. Whilst, therefore, Chronology is not to be too highly regarded in its determination of individual dates and obscure epochs, it is to be much esteemed for its general uses to history, which, without it, would be a confused chaos.

Time is divided naturally into days, weeks, months, and years; and artificially into hours and other subdivisions. The day is a measure of time suggested by the regular alternations of light and darkness; and it has immediate reference to the apparent revolution of the sun round the earth. A month is a division of time determined by the period of a lunation, or one revolution of the moon round the earth. A year is measured by the apparent course of the sun through the ecliptic; and it includes the time which elapses between his departure from, and return to, the same point in the heavens. A week is a division of time naturally arising out of the institution of the sabbath. Days, weeks, and months, form years; and by years we estimate the long intervals of time which lie between Creation and the present age. Days, months, and years, it is seen, have reference to the lunar and solar motions, which differ considerably from each other; hence, to keep an orderly and correct account of time, and to retain the various seasons of the year in constant connection with the same months and days, it was found necessary to contrive Cycles or Periods of years, in which the variations of astronomical motion were supposed to be exhausted, and on the completion of which the sun and moon were presumed to return again to the same points in the heavens.

CYCLES AND PERIODS.

THE CYCLE OF THE MOON.

This Cycle was invented by the astronomer Meton, B.C. 430, for the purpose of equating the lunar and solar motions, and determining the times for the Greeks to offer sacrifices. It is a period of 19 years, at the termination of which it was anciently thought that the new moon returned again to the same day of the month; 19 solar years being considered exactly equal to 235 lunations. It was discovered that this Cycle was not sufficiently extensive to equate the two motions, and Calippus instituted a period, named from him the Calippic period, which contained four lunar, or Metonic, Cycles. Hipparchus afterwards formed another period of 304 years, containing 16 lunar Cycles. Lastly, the Cycle of the moon was subjected to such corrections by Gregory XIII., when he reformed the calendar, that the lunar and solar motions are now, by the assistance of the epacts, sufficiently equated for all practical purposes. As the years of the lunar Cycle are sure indices to the epacts, or days which the moon is in advance of the sun, they are still regarded as a very useful element in the computation of time.

The vulgar era of the birth of Christ corresponds to the second year of the lunar Cycle; hence, the year of the Cycle for any year of our Lord, is found by adding 1 to the given year, and dividing by 19:—

A. D. 1844 + 1 = 1845 ÷ 19 = 97 and remainder 2 = year of the Cycle.

To understand the use of this Cycle, it must be explained, that the lunar year is completed 11 days earlier than the solar year; that is to say, if the sun and moon are in conjunction on the first of January, on the first of January following, the moon will have passed the conjunction eleven days, and when another solar year is completed, the moon will have passed her conjunction with the sun 22 days; thus the epact grows from year to year of the lunar Cycle; but whenever it reaches 30 days, or more, the complete lunation is thrown out of the account, and the remainder, after division by 30, is taken as the epact. Till the year 1900, the first year of the lunar Cycle has no epact, the second year has 11 days, the third year 22 days, the fourth year 33 days, and so on; if, therefore, at the commencement of any year till A.D. 1900, we multiply the character of the lunar Cycle for the previous year by 11, dividing by 30 when necessary, we obtain the yearly epact, or the age of the moon on the first of January of such year; and having discovered this, we can, on any day throughout that year, find the moon's age by adding to the epact the day of the month, and the growing monthly epact, and taking the remainder, after division by 30. The monthly epact is reckoned at a day each month from April.

THE CYCLE OF THE SUN.

This Cycle is a period of 28 years; and its use is, to point out in the calendar the Dominical, or Sunday, letter of the year. It has always been customary to place the first seven letters of the alphabet in the calendar, in their natural order, to indicate the seven days of the week; and since the number of days in a common year, when divided by 7, leaves a remainder of 1, it follows that the last day of the year appropriates the letter that stands in connection with the first of January in that year; and that, therefore, the first of January of the following year should take the succeeding letter. Now, as the letter A is placed in constant connection with the first of January in the calendar, and as it is obvious, that if the first of January fall in any year on a Sunday, it will in the year next following (unless it be bissextile) fall on Monday,—it is evident, that in such year following the Sunday letter will be G, which stands in the calendar opposite to the seventh January. Thus it is seen, that the Dominicals change in retrograde order from G to A. If all years were alike, the variations of the Sunday letter would be completed in seven years and the same Dominicals would then return to the same days of the month; but as every fourth year is bissextile, and takes an additional day, it has the effect of two common years in throwing back the letters; and hence it follows, that the regular order of the letters does not return till 4 times 7, or 28 years. The connection of the letters with the various years of the solar Cycle, is shown in the following table;—

Cyc.	Dom.	Cyc.	Dom.	Cyc.	Dom.	Cyc.	Dom.
1	ED	8	C	15	A	22	F
2	C	9	BA	16	G	23	E
3	B	10	G	17	FE	24	D
4	A	11	F	18	D	25	CB
5	GF	12	E	19	C	26	A
6	E	13	DC	20	B	27	G
7	D	14	B	21	AG	28	F

This table would have served for ever, had it not been for the necessary correction of the year by Gregory, whereby every hundredth year, except the fourth, is accounted common in place of bissextile. It will be at once evident, that if any of the bissextile years of the Cycle are accounted common years, and have one Dominical in place of two, a complete change of letters will take place throughout the Cycle. In a bissextile year, the first Dominical serves only till the 28th February.

To find the year of the solar Cycle for any given year of our Lord, till A.D. 1899 inclusive, we add 9 to the given year (A.D. 1 coinciding with the 10th year of the Cycle), and divide by 28; the remainder is the year of the Cycle.

A. D. 1844 + 9 = 1853 ÷ 28 = 66 and remainder 5 = year of the Cycle.

THE CYCLE OF INDICTION.

This Cycle is a period of 15 years; it has no reference to the lunar or solar motions, and it is of little value to us except as an element of the Julian Period, the use of which is still retained by modern chronologers. The Cycle of Indiction was framed by the Romans to point out the times of certain payments, imposts, and tributes.

The vulgar era of Christ corresponds with the fourth year of this Cycle; if, therefore to any year A.D., we add 3, and divide by 15, the remainder will show the year of Indiction.

A. D. 1844 + 3 = 1847 ÷ 15 = 123 and remainder 2 = year of Indiction.

THE JULIAN PERIOD.

This Period was invented by Scaliger to obviate many inconveniences in chronological inquiry, arising from the use of other epochs. It is produced by the multiplication of the Lunar, Solar, and Indiction Cycles into each other; that is, by 19 × 28 × 15 = 7980 years. The first year of this Cycle had 1 for the year of the Solar Cycle, and also of the Lunar and Indiction Cycles; and until the completion of the Period, this coincidence cannot occur again; every year of this Period has, therefore, its peculiar cyclic character. According to the common computation, the era of Creation falls within the Julian Period, whose termination lies in a distant future; hence this Period was valued as the general depository of time, in which all other epochs and periods were absorbed. It may be noticed, however, that there is much disagreement amongst chronologers regarding the beginning of things: the Alphonsine theory places the creation at the distance of 6485 years from the birth of Christ; whilst the Jewish vulgar computation reckons only 3760 years from Creation to the birth of the Nazarene. Dr Hales has recommended, by learned and laborious investigation, a new system of Chronology; which removes the time of Creation beyond the commencement of the Julian Period, and places it 5411 before Christ. This is at least taking the mean between two extremes.

The year 4004 before Christ corresponds with the year 710 of the Julian Period; and the vulgar era of the Incarnation falls in the year 4713 of this Period; and these being determined, we are able to refer all dates A.M. and A.D. to the Julian Cycle, and so discover with great facility the cyclic characters of any year. For if we divide any year of the Julian Period by 19, we obtain the year of the Lunar Cycle; if by 28, the year of the Solar Cycle; and if by 15, the year of Indiction.

A. D. 1844 + 4713 = 6557 year of the Julian Period.
6557 ÷ 19 = 345, and remainder 2 = Lunar Cycle.
6557 ÷ 28 = 234, and remainder 5 = Solar Cycle.
6557 ÷ 15 = 437, and remainder 2 = Year of Indiction.

We have now entered into sufficient explanation of the chronological characters introduced into this edition of the Sacred Writings; and we deem it unsuitable to extend our inquiries further.

TABLE

JEWISH AND OTHER MEASURES, WEIGHTS, AND COINS, MENTIONED IN SCRIPTURE.

I. The smaller Measures of length among the Hebrews, as well as among every other nation, have been borrowed from some of the proportions which take place in the human body, as digit, handbreadth or palm, span, foot, cubit; and the larger measures, as pace, furlong, and mile, are but multiples of the less. Hence, as there is not an exact uniformity in the parts of individuals, the standard measures established by various nations would not be entirely the same, though not much different; and, though we may know any measure nearly, we cannot know it accurately, till we are informed to what nation it belongs. The following are the measures of length mentioned in Scripture:—

1. The digit, or finger-breadth (Jer. lii. 21,) is said to contain the breadth of six barley corns, joined where they are thickest, and equal to 0.912 inch, or rather more than $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch.

2. The handbreadth, or palm, is the transverse measure of a man's four fingers laid flat, i. e. four digits, or rather more than $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

3. The span is the measure from the thumb to the little finger expanded, equal to three palms, or about 10 inches.

4. The cubit is the measure of a full-sized man's arm, from the elbow to the extremity of the middle finger, equal to two spans, or about 1 foot 8 inches; though some compute it at 1 foot 9 inches, and others at 1 foot 6 inches, or even less.

5. The fathom is properly the grasp of a man, or the distance between the two hands stretched out, including the breast, equal to four cubits, or about 6 feet 8 inches.

6. The reed was six cubits and a handbreadth (Ezek. xl. 5,) or about 10 feet 10 inches.

7. The stadium contained 400 cubits, or about 145 paces, nearly equal to a furlong, or the eighth part of an English mile.

8. A mile, so called from mille a thousand, because the Roman mile consisted mille passuum, of a thousand paces, contained in the East 10 stadia, or about one fifth more than an English mile.

II. Of Measures of capacity, some of which were for liquids, and some for things dry, the following are mentioned in Scripture:—

1. The log, the smallest measure for liquids, is said to have contained six eggs, and was $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cab, and $\frac{1}{72}$ of an ephah, equal to about $\frac{3}{4}$ of a pint.

2. The cab was $\frac{1}{6}$ of a seah, and $\frac{1}{18}$ of a bath or ephah, and contained 24 eggs, or $3\frac{1}{3}$ pints English.

3. The omer was a measure for things dry, and contained $\frac{1}{10}$ of an ephah (Exod. xvi. 36,) equal to about $6\frac{1}{4}$ pints English.

4. The hin was a measure of liquids (Exod. xxix. 40; xxx. 24, &c.); and according to Josephus (Ant. l. iii. c. 8. § 3. c. 9. § 4.), it was equal to two Attic choas, i. e. one gallon and a half English, and consequently was the sixth part of an ephah.

5. The seah, which our translators improperly render by the indefinite term measure, was a measure of things dry, containing 6 cabs, or $\frac{1}{3}$ of an ephah, and equal to about two gallons and a half English.

6. The ephah was a measure of dry things, containing three sæta, or seahs, as the Targumist renders, equal to about 7 gallons and a half, or nearly a bushel English.

7. The bath (Luke xvi. 6,) was a measure of liquids, of the same capacity as the ephah, 'the tenth part of an homer,' Ezek. xlv. 14.

8. The lethech was a measure of dry things, and contained half an homer, (as several of the Hexaplar versions, the Vulgate, and the English render, Hos. iii. 2,) or 15 seahs, as Epiphanius states, equal to 16 pecks English.

9. The homer, or chomer, a measure of dry things, contained 10 ephahs (Eze. xlv. 11,) equal to about 75 gallons, 5 pints, or 32 pecks, 1 pint, English.

10. The cor was a measure both for liquids and solids, of the same capacity as the homer, Ezek. 45. 14; Luke xvi. 7.

Besides these measures, which were peculiar to the Hebrews, there are three others mentioned in the New Testament, belonging to other nations.

1. The sextarius, rendered a pot, Mar. vii. 4, was a Roman measure of liquids, equal to about a pint and a half English.

2. The chœnix, rendered a measure, Rev. vi. 6, was a Grecian measure of capacity for things dry, usually reckoned equal to rather more than a pint and a half, or one quart, English corn-measure.

3. The metretes, rendered firkin, John ii. 6, is generally supposed to be equal to the Hebrew bath, i. e. about 7 gallons and a half; though that is uncertain.

III. As the Hebrew Coins were originally Weights, and as it is by their respective weight that their value is ascertained, it will be necessary to treat of both at once. Of these the following are mentioned in Scripture:—

1. The gerah, supposed to be the same as agorah, 1 Sam. ii. 36, rendered a piece of money, was $\frac{1}{20}$ of a shekel (Exod. xxx. 13,) weighing nearly 11 grains, and in value about $1\frac{1}{4}d.$

2. The beka was a half shekel (Gen. xxiv. 22; Exod. xxxviii. 26,) weighing about 4 pennyweights $13\frac{1}{2}$ grains, in value rather more than $1s.$ $1\frac{1}{2}d.$

3. The shekel, according to which all the other weights and coins are computed, has been variously estimated at from $218\frac{1}{2}$ grains to $273\frac{3}{4}$ grains; and consequently in value from $2s.$ $3d.$ to $3s.$ Bishop Cumberland, whom we have followed in the subjoined tables, on the testimony of the Rabbins and St Jerome, states that the weight of the shekel was half a Roman ounce, or 219 grains, Troy weight; according to which, supposing the value of silver to be $5s.$ an ounce, its value in English money must be $2s.$ $3\frac{3}{5}d.$, for which fraction, we may, for convenience in computation, use $\frac{3}{5}$, the difference being only $\frac{3}{250}$ of a penny, which is little more than $\frac{1}{3}$ of a farthing.

4. The maneh, or mina, which our translators have generally and improperly rendered pound, in gold was equal in weight to 100 shekels (compare 1 Kings x. 17 with 2 Chron. ix. 17,) or about 3lb. 9oz. 1dwt. 3 grs.; and consequently, reckoning gold at £4 an ounce, was in value rather more than £180. But, in silver, it weighed only 60 shekels, (Eze. xlv. 12,) or 2lb. 3oz. 7dwt. 12grs.; and as a coin it was only equal to 50 shekels, or about £5 $14s.$

5. The talent, as appears clearly from Exod. xxxviii. 25, 26, weighed 3000 shekels, or 114lb. 15dwt.; and was in value about £342 $3s.$ $9d.$

Besides these coins, which were proper to the Hebrew nation, the following coins of the Greeks and Romans are mentioned in the New Testament:—

1. The mite, called by the later Jews peruta, and by the Syriac translators shemoono, the eighth, i. e. of an assarium, was equal to half a quadrans, (Mar. xii. 42,) and consequently to about $\frac{3}{8}$ of a farthing.

2. The farthing, or quadrans, so called from quatuor, four, was a Roman brass coin, the fourth part of an as, and in value about $\frac{3}{4}$ of a farthing.

3. The assarium, or as, rendered a farthing, Mat. x. 29, and called by the Rabbins isor, who say that it contained eight mites, was equal to the tenth part of a denarius, about $3\frac{1}{10}$ farthings of our money.

4. The penny, or denarius, so called because in ancient times it consisted denis assibus, of ten asses, was a Roman silver coin, equal to about $7\frac{3}{4}d.$ of our money.

5. The drachma of Attica, was equal in value to the Roman denarius, Luke xv. 8.

6. The didrachma, or double drachm, rendered by our translators tribute money, Mat. xvii. 24, was consequently equal to $1s.$ $3\frac{1}{2}d.$

7. The stater, a Grecian coin, was, as appears from Mat. xvii. 27, equal in value to two didrachmas, or four Attic drachms, and consequently to $2s.$ $7d.$

JEWISH AND ROMAN MODE OF COMPUTING TIME, MENTIONED IN THE SCRIPTURES.

The Hebrews computed their Days from evening to evening, (Lev. xxiii. 32.) The evening, or natural night, precedes the morning, or natural day, in the account of the creation, (Gen. i. 5,) whence the prophet Daniel employs the compound term evening-morning (Dan. viii. 14, marg.), to denote a civil day in his prophecy of the 2,300 days.

The Romans had two different computations of days. The one they reckoned from midnight to midnight, and called the civil day; the other, from the rising to the setting sun, was called a natural day. The natural day of the Jews varied in length according to the seasons of the year, the longest being 14 hours 12 minutes, and the shortest 9 hours 48 minutes; varying in length as the day varied; but easily discerned from the position of the sun in the horizon. Afterwards the natural day was divided into 12 hours.

The earliest mention of Hours in the sacred writings occurs in Dan. iii. 6, 15; v. 5; and as the Chaldeans, according to Herodotus, were the inventors of this division of time, it is probable that the Jews derived their hours from them. The Jews computed their hours of the civil day from six in the morning to six in the evening: thus their first hour corresponded to our seven o'clock, their second to our eight, &c. The first three hours, from six to nine, were their morning. Before the captivity the night was divided into three parts or watches, (Ps. lxiii. 6; xc. 4.) The first, or beginning of watches; the middle-watch; and the morning-watch, or watch of day-break, see Lam. ii. 19; Judg. vii. 19; Exod. xiv. 24. During the time of our Saviour the night was divided into four watches, a fourth watch having been introduced among the Jews from the Romans, who derived it from the Greeks. These four are all distinctly mentioned in Mark xiii. 35. The first watch was at even, and continued from six till nine; the second, or midnight-watch, commenced at nine and ended at twelve; the third watch lasted from twelve till three; and the morning-watch closed at six. It may not be improper to remark that the word hour is frequently used with great latitude in the Scriptures, and sometimes implies the space of time occupied by a whole watch, (Mat. xxv. 13; xxvi. 40; Mark xiv. 37; Luke xxii. 59; Rev. iii. 3.) Perhaps the third hour mentioned in Acts xxiii. 23, was a military watch of the night. The Jews reckoned two evenings, the former began at the ninth hour of the natural day, or three o'clock in the afternoon; and the latter at the eleventh hour.

Seven nights and days constituted a Week, (Gen. ii. 3.) This division of time was universally observed by the descendants of Noah; and was enacted by Moses agreeably to the divine command, (Exod. xx.)

The Hebrews had their Months too, which, like those of all other ancient nations, were lunar ones, being measured by the revolutions of the moon, and consisting alternately of twenty-nine and thirty days. Persons were therefore appointed to watch on the tops of the mountains for the first appearance of the moon after the change. As, however, they had no months longer than thirty days, if they did not see the new moon the night following the thirtieth day, they concluded that the appearance was obstructed by the clouds; and, without watching any longer, made the next day the first day of the following month. Originally the Jews had no particular names for their months, but called them the first, second, &c. (Gen. vii. 11—24; viii. 4.) Afterwards they acquired distinct names, as Abib, Zif, &c.; and after the return from the Babylonish captivity, they introduced the names which they had found among the Chaldeans and Persians, as Nisan, Sivan, Elul, &c.

The Jews had four sorts of Years—one for plants; another for beasts; a third for sacred purposes; and the fourth was common to all the inhabitants of Palestine.

1. The Year of Plants was reckoned from the month corresponding to our January; because they paid tithe-fruits of the trees which budded at that time.

2. The second year was that of Beasts; for, when they tithed their lambs, the owner drove all the flock under a rod, and they marked the tenth, which was given to the Levites. They could, however, only take those which fell in the year, and this year began at the month Elul, or the beginning of our August. But the two years which are the most known are the Civil and Ecclesiastical Years.

3. The Civil Year commenced on the fifteenth of our September, because it was an old tradition that the world was created at that time. The annexed table exhibits the months of the Jewish civil year with the corresponding months of our computation:—

1. Tisri	corresponds with part of	September and October.
2. Marchesvan		October and November.
3. Chisleu or Kisleu		November and December.
4. Thebet		December and January.
5. Sebat		January and February.
6. Adar		February and March.
7. Nisan or Abib		March and April.
8. Jyar or Zif		April and May.
9. Sivan		May and June.
10. Thammuz		June and July.
11. Ab		July and August.
12. Elul		August and September.

Some of the preceding names are still in use in Persia.

4. The Ecclesiastical or Sacred Year began in March, or on the first day of the month Nisan, because at that time they departed out of Egypt. From that month they computed their feasts, and the prophets also occasionally dated their oracles and visions, (Zech. vii. 1.) The following table presents the months of the Jewish ecclesiastical year, compared with our months:—

1. Nisan or Abib (Neh. ii. 1; Esth. iii. 7.)	answers to part of	March and April.
2. Jyar or Zif		April and May.
3. Sivan (Esth. viii. 9.)		May and June.
4. Thammuz		June and July.
5. Ab		July and August.
6. Elul (Neh. vi. 15.)		August and September.
7. Tisri		September and October.
8. Marchesvan		October and November.
9. Kisleu or Chisleu (Zech. vii. 1; Neh. i. 1.)		November and December.
10. Thebet		December and January.
11. Sebat (Zech. i. 7.)		January and February.
12. Adar (Ezra vi. 15; Esth. iii. 7.)		February and March.

The Jewish months being regulated by the appearances of the moon, it not unfrequently happened that great confusion arose by this method of calculating, the spring month sometimes falling in the middle of winter. To remedy this, however, the Jews added a whole month to the year when necessary, and placed it at the end of the ecclesiastical year, after the month Adar, which was therefore called Ve-Adar, or the second Adar; but no vestiges of such intercalation are to be found in the Scriptures.

As agriculture constituted the principal employment of the Jews, they also divided their natural year into seasons with reference to their rural work, (Ezra x. 13; Jer. xxxvi. 22.)

The Jews farther divided their solar year into four parts, or quarters; as, the vernal equinox; the autumnal equinox; the winter solstice, and the summer solstice, which they distinguished by the names of the months with which they commenced.

THE FIRST BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

GENESIS.

THIS book of Genesis is so called from the Greek word, Γένεσις, signifying generation, origin, or production, from its distinguishing object, viz., its giving an account of the origin of all things; though in truth it does greatly more, as it leads the mind forth also to their progress and consummation in the Messiah. In the Hebrew it is designated Berashith, from its initiatory words, 'in the beginning,' as was common with the Jews, and as has been usual with other nations in designating important acts and documents, civil and ecclesiastical. It is one of the Pentateuch, or five books, of which Moses is so universally admitted to have been the author by Jews, Christians, and heathens, that Dr Adam Clark well says: 'As to those, who, in opposition to all these proofs, obstinately persist in their unbelief, they are worthy of little regard, as argument is lost on their invincible prejudices, and demonstration on their minds, because wilfully closed against the light.'

One of the strongest principles of the human mind is the desire of knowing the causes and origin of things. Scarcely second to it in strength, depraved as he is, is the religious principle in man. Both of these are deeply interested, and find most delightful gratification, in this portion of sacred scripture now before us. With, perhaps, the exception of the book of Job, it is the most ancient writing extant, and certainly the most ancient historical record in existence. Reason suggests that the world must have had a beginning. Here we understand by faith in the divine testimony, that the worlds were framed by 'the word of God;' and 'that things which are seen, were not made of things which do appear;' that is, not of pre-existing matter, but spoken into being by the Almighty power of God. We have also an account of the original state of man—created in the holy, intelligent and righteous image of God; his sin and fall; the introduction of death; the universal corruption of our race; and the destruction, by a deluge, of the earth and all its inhabitants, with the exception of Noah and his family, and the creatures preserved with him in the ark, which he was supernaturally instructed to build; the subsequent confusion of tongues; the dispersion of mankind; the calling of Abraham; the wonderful history of his descendants down to the death of Joseph, comprising a period of 2369 years; indeed, in its wonderful prophecies and promises of the Messiah, stretching down into all future time.

It is worse than futile—it is unscriptural and irrational—to attempt to show that by tradition, aided by the then protracted life of man, the accounts of the events narrated by Moses could have been easily preserved, (Job repudiates this idea, Job xxxviii. 4—7.) when in truth some of them, such as the creation of the world, could have been taught only by divine revelation. It is important, however, to observe, that its statements find ample corroboration in the traditions, writings, history, and monuments of ancient nations. But had there been no other authority than tradition for the things related by Moses, still they would be vastly more worthy of belief than the writings of the most ancient profane authors; inasmuch as they had been transmitted through very few hands, even seven persons; there being, from Adam to Noah, only one person necessary to transmit the history of a period of 1656 years. It is unnecessary, however, to have recourse to an opinion so unsatisfactory, when we may rest on the unerring authority of a divine revelation. 'All scripture is given by inspiration of God.' On that authority the account of Moses was received at the first, and many persons then living had the means of judging of its truth. We think it time enough to examine certain geological objections, hitherto refuted, brought against the mosaic account of the creation, when geologists themselves shall be agreed as to the matters of fact. 'The important religious instruction,' says Scott, 'contained in this book, concerning God our Creator, our fallen condition, the promise of a Saviour, and the redeemed sinner's walk with God, must more endear it to the pious Christian than all its immense and invaluable literary treasures can possibly recommend it to the learned antiquary or historian.' 'Without this history the world would be in total darkness, not knowing whence it came or whither it goeth. In the first page of this sacred book, a child may learn more in one hour, than all the philosophers in the world learned without it in thousands of years.'—Fuller. We have enjoyed great delight, comfort, instruction, and insight into the providence and grace of God, in the perusal and examination of this precious portion of Holy Writ, 'given by inspiration of God, and most profitable for doctrine, reproof, correction and instruction in righteousness.'

BEFORE CHRIST, 4004.—JULIAN PERIOD, 710.—CYCLE OF THE SUN, 10.—DOMINICAL LETTER, B.—CYCLE OF THE MOON, 7.—INDICTION, 5.—CREATION FROM TISRI, OR SEPTEMBER 1.

CHAPTER I.

All religion being founded in our relation to God, as the Maker of all things, we have here, (1) A general account of the divine persons making the heaven and earth out of nothing; and of the state of this lower world while the earth and water were joined in one confused mass, verses 1, 2. (2) A particular account of God's formation of light, of the firmament, and their use, 3—8. His separation of the earth from the water, and causing it to produce herbs, grass, and trees, 9—13. The upper firmament is furnished with sun, moon, and stars, for enlightening the earth, and distinguishing the seasons of day and night, summer and winter, &c. 14—19. The waters are furnished with fishes, and the air with fowls, 20—23. The earth is furnished with tame cattle, creeping things, and wild beasts, 24, 25. And, in fine, man is formed after the image of God, 26—30. (3) God's approbation of particular things as good, i. e. perfect in their kind, and suited to answer their particular ends; and of man, and all things as connected with him, and with one another, as very good, 4, 10, 12, 18, 21, 25, 31.

Before Christ 4004.

IN [a] the beginning God[1] created [b] the heaven and the earth.

2 And the earth was [c] without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the Spirit of God moved[2] upon the face of the waters.

3 ¶ And [d] God said, Let there be light: and there was light.[3]

4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.[4]

5 And God called the light [e] Day, and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day.[1]

6 ¶ And God said, [f] Let there be a firmament[2] in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

7 And God made the firmament, and [g] divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were[3] above the firmament: and it was so.

8 And God called the firmament Heaven. And the evening and the morning were the second day.

9 ¶ And God said, [h] Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.[4]

10 And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together[5] of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.

a Pr. 8. 22. 23; John 1. 1—3. He. 1. 10; 1 John 1. 1.
1 All things proceed from God. It is fit our remarks should begin with Him. The Hebrew name is plural. In a great variety of instances it is found with verbs, adjectives, and pronouns plural. It denotes a plurality of persons in the Godhead; and the verb 'created' being in the singular number, it is justly supposed to indicate the unity of the divine persons in the work of creation. Beginning. The commencement of time indicated by God's creating acts. Created, spake into being that which was not.
b Job 38. 4; Is. 40. 28; 51. 13; Je. 32. 17; 51. 15; He. 3. 4, 11. 3. c Je. 4. 23; Nah. 2. 10.
2 The Holy Spirit moved — 'hovered.'—Luther.
d Ps. 33. 9; Mat. 8. 3.
3 God spake the light into being by the word of his power, or by his substantial Word, his Son, 'by whom he made the worlds;' He. 1. 2; Eph. 3. 9. Himself the TRUE LIGHT that lighteth every man that cometh into the world.
4 Heb. between the light and between the darkness.
e Ps. 74. 16; 104. 20.
1 Heb. and the evening was, and the morning was, one day—equal to a day. 'Evening-morning,' used by Daniel to denote a civil day; also, many ancient nations began their day by the evening; tradition thus confirming the Mosaic account.
f Job 37. 18; Ps. 136. 5; Jer. 10. 12; 51. 15.
2 Heb. expansion, or spreading out, or expanse. Separation of the atmospheric from the terrestrial waters. Fr. etendue.
g Pr. 8. 28.
3 Rather, 'waters which are under,' 'waters which are above,' &c., for it cannot be conceived how the firmament should be the first means of dividing the waters, if a portion of them were already above, and a portion already below.
h Job 26. 10; 38. 8; Ps. 33. 7; 95. 5; 104. 9; 136. 6; Pr. 8. 29; Jer. 5. 22; 2 Pe. 3. 5.
4 Of the movements by which this mighty result was effected, no detail is given. The language of the Psalmist, Ps. 104. 6—9. would indicate, that the phenomena must have been awful beyond description.
5 Or, assemblage.

11 And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass,[1] the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

12 And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

13 And the evening and the morning were the third day.

14 ¶ And God said, [e] Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven, to divide the day from the night;[2] and [f] let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years:

15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven, to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

16 And God made two great lights;[3] the greater light to [g] rule the day,[4] and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

17 And God [h] set them in the firmament of the heaven, to give light upon the earth,

18 And to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

19 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

20 ¶ And God said, [i] Let the waters bring forth abundantly[5] the moving[6] creature that hath life,[7] and fowl that may fly[8] above the earth in the open firmament[9] of heaven.

21 And God created[10] great whales,[11] and every living creature that moveth, which the waters [k] brought forth abundantly, after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: and God saw that it was good.[12]

22 And God blessed them, saying, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

23 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

24 ¶ And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his [l] kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

2 Heb. between the day and between the night. How can lights divide the day from the night, seeing the night is the season of darkness? The sun is set for the rule of the day—the moon, with the stars, for the rule of the night: these lights are signs or tokens of the goodness of God; & moreover, mark out the successions of summer and winter, seed time and harvest, of day and of night. The word 'seasons,' in Heb. signifies also appointed times, or set feasts.

How inconceivably minute must each be, and yet each is a perfect animal. He was made in the image and likeness of God, invested with reason and speech, indued with the knowledge of his CREATOR, and made an heir of immortality, not 'like the beasts that perish.' 2. He was invested with dominion over all the animal tribes, the vegetables, and the earth itself. 3. Whereas all other animals were created 'after their kind,' the sex of the human species is particularized: 'male and female created he them'—and this by a distinct formation of the woman out of the man. 25 And God [m] made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

26 ¶ And God said, [n] Let us make[1] man [o] in our image,[2] after our likeness; and let them [p] have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

27 So God created man in his own image: in the image of God created he him; male [q] and female[3] created he them.

28 And God blessed [r] them: and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth[4] upon the earth.

29 ¶ And God said, Behold, [s] I have given you every herb bearing seed,[5] which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; [t] to you it shall be for meat.

30 And [u] to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life,[6] I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so.

God's institution and blessing of the Sabbath, which was made for man, to promote his holiness and comfort, 1, 2, 3. The extraordinary manner in which the first vegetables were produced, and Adam formed, 4—7. The garden of Eden, and of God's placing man in it under the form of a law and covenant, 8—17. Adam's dominion over the animals on earth, and their acknowledgment of it in coming to him for their respective names, 18, 19, 20. The need and the making of the woman, and the institution of marriage, 21—25.

THUS [a] the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the [b] host of them.[7]

2 And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made.

3 And God [c] blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it; because that in it he had rested[1] from all his work which God created and made.[2]

4 ¶ These are the [d]generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens,

5 And [e]every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew: for the LORD God had not caused [f]it to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man to till the ground.

6 But there went up a mist[3] from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground.

7 And the LORD God formed man[4] of the [g]dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and [h]man became a living soul.

8 ¶ And the LORD God planted a garden [i]eastward in Eden;[5] and there he put the man whom he had formed.

9 And [k]out of the ground made the LORD God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life[6] also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

10 And a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads.

11 The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold;

12 And the gold of that land is good: there is bdellium[7] and the onyx-stone.

13 And the name of the second river is Gihon: the same is it that compasseth the whole land of Ethiopia.[8]

14 And the name of the third river is Hiddekel: that is it which goeth toward the east of Assyria.[9] And the fourth river is Euphrates.

15 ¶ And the LORD God took the man,[10] and put him into the garden of Eden, to dress it, and to keep it.

16 And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat;[11]

17 But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it:[12] for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.[13]

1 Rather, ceased, as the word in Heb. is opposed not to weariness, but to work or action. Hence we see that the Sabbath is not to be considered so much a resting day from labour, because of weariness, but a ceasing from it for the purposes of holiness. The division of time into weeks by almost all nations, and the sacredness of the seventh day among the ancient heathen, point to this original institution of the Sabbath. SeeGen. vii. 8; viii. 10—12; xxix. 7. Hesiod says, 'The seventh day, a holy day.' Theophilus of Antioch says of the 7th day, 'Which all name, but most are ignorant of the reason why.' That this 3d verse contains the first appointment of the Sabbath,is evident—1. It is here in the orderof narration; 2. The reason of it applies equally to all men; 3. It is plainly referred to, Exod. xvi. 22—27, as a day then known; 4. The fourth commandment is therefore not a new, but a renewed enactment—a moral law, 4—5. It was originally given to Adam in innocence, the parent and representative of all—therefore binding upon all.

That the tempter was satan, the devil, the old serpent, 2 Cor. 11. 3, 14; Rev.12.9; 20. 2. A great multitude of conjectures have been formed on this topic,which darken counsel by words. 'It is observable, that no notice is taken of the largeness of the grant, but merely of its limitation.' —Scott. Such is still the spirit of discontent and ingratitude. 13 Satan seizes the advantage which the woman gave him by listening to him and giving an answer. He not only utters falsehood, but blasphemously dares to make God a witness of it. He is a liar and the father of it; alas, how many are his children!

18 ¶ And the LORD God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him.[1]

19 And [l]out of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air, and brought them [m]unto Adam,[2] to see what he would call them: and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof.

20 And Adam gave names[3] to all cattle,[4] and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field: but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him.[5]

21 ¶ And the LORD God caused a [n]deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept: and he took one of his ribs,[6] and closed up the flesh instead thereof.

22 And the rib, which the LORD God had taken from man, made[7] he a woman,[8] and brought her unto the man.

23 And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman;[9] because she was [o]taken out of man.[10]

24 Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall [p]cleave unto his wife; and they shall be [q]one flesh.

25 And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed.

NOW [a]the serpent was more subtile than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea,[11] [b]hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?[12]

2 And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden:

3 [c]But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye [d]touch it, lest ye die.

4 And the [e]serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die:[13]

5 For God doth know, that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened; and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

6 ¶ And when the woman [f]saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant[1] to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof,[g] and did eat; and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat.

7 And the eyes of them both were opened,[2] and [h]they knew that they were naked; and they sewed[3] fig-leaves together, and made themselves aprons.[4]

8 And they heard the voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the cool of the day:[5] and Adam and his wife [i]hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.

9 ¶ And the [k]LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden,[l] and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

11 And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?[6]

12 And the man said, The woman[m] whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

13 And the LORD God said unto the woman, [n]What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

14 ¶ And the LORD God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field: upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust[o] shalt thou eat all the days of thy life.

15 And I will put enmity[7] between thee and the woman, and between [p]thy seed and [q]her seed: it [r]shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his [s]heel.

16 ¶ Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception:[8] in [t]sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband,[9] and he shall rule over thee.[u]

17 And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life:

18 Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth[1] to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field.

19 In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground: for out of it wast thou taken: for [v]dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

20 And [w]Adam called his wife's name Eve;[2] because she was the mother of all living.

21 Unto Adam also, and to his wife, did the LORD God make [x]coats of skins,[3] and clothed them.

22 ¶ And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become [y]as one of us,[4] to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree [z]of life,[5] and eat, and live for ever;

23 Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, [a]to till the ground from whence he was taken.

24 So he drove out the man: and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming [b]sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.

4 And Abel, he also brought of [b]the firstlings of his flock,[11] and of the fat thereof. And the LORD had respect unto Abel, and to his offering:

7 Never was any prediction more completely fulfilled even in a literal sense. All men have a natural, even an instinctive dread and hatred of the serpent tribe. The enmity of the Old Serpent to our race is most deadly; he is a murderer from the beginning. On the other hand, man, even when he serves Satan, dreads and hates him, and in the very curse upon the serpent is involved the promise of blessing to the race of man.

5 But unto Cain, and to his offering, he had not respect.[1] And Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell.

6 And the LORD said unto Cain, Why[a] art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

7 If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted?[2] and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door.[3] And unto thee[4] shall be his desire,[5] and thou shalt rule over him.

8 ¶ And Cain [b]talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and [c]slew him.

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto Cain, Where[d] is Abel thy brother?[6] And he said, I [e]know not. Am I my brother's keeper?

10 And he said, [f]What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's blood[7] crieth unto me from the ground.

11 And now art thou [g]cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth[h] to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand.

12 When thou tillest the ground, it[i] shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength. [k]A fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.

13 And Cain said unto the LORD, My punishment is greater than I can bear.[8]

14 Behold, thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the earth; and from thy [l]face shall I be hid; and I shall be a [m]fugitive and a vagabond in the earth: and it shall come to pass, that every one that findeth me shall slay me.

15 And the LORD said unto him, Therefore,[n] whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold.[o] And the LORD set [p]a mark upon Cain,[9] lest any finding him should kill him.

16 ¶ And Cain went out [q]from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of Nod,[10] on the east of Eden.

17 ¶ And Cain knew his wife; and she conceived, and bare Enoch:[11] and he [r]builded a city, and [s]called the name of the city, after the name of his son, Enoch.

1 God regarded with favour the offering of Abel. It was offered in faith, Heb.11.4. It was not only more excellent, but more, or greater sacrifice. He brought his mincha also, as Cain—his offering of thanks, and his sacrifice of atonement also; through which alone he could be accepted; God testifying of his gifts. God thus accepted his person and his gifts; but neither in the case of Cain, who had no faith in the way of acceptance.

a Mat.20.15; Job 5.2.

2 Or, have the excellency.

3 God's dealing with Cain, seems throughout that of tenderness and mercy. As if to say, 'come now and let us reason together.' If thou dost well, wilt offer in faith, thou art accepted. If thou dost not well, sin lieth upon thee; rather a sin-offering lieth, Heb. coucheth, as a beast, at the door. Have recourse to the blood of atonement.

1 The attempts to account for the longevity of those who lived before the flood, on natural principles, like all attempts at being wise above what is written, are as weak as they are unsatisfactory. The Greek translation of the Bible, called the Septuagint, varies from our version (which was made from the Hebrew) both in this genealogy and in that which follows, (11.10-26). In particular, by the addition of a hundred years to the age of Adam, and of six of these patriarchs, before their sons here mentioned were born, and deducting them from the subsequent part of their lives, making the sum total the same. Thus, the space between the creation and the deluge, is made seven hundred years more than in our account; and by a similar addition, with other variations, the space between the deluge and the birth of Abraham, is made almost nine hundred years more. But the original Hebrew is best entitled to our confidence.—Scott.

3 It is curious to observe, that Shem, though not the oldest of Noah's sons, is constantly placed first, as the progenitor of Christ. The same thing is done in other cases, for the same reason. In this chapter we have nearly all the history of the world before the flood for 1656 years; scarcely any thing recorded but what relates to the Holy Seed and the life of God. On all the rest is written vanity—a vapour.

7 And the LORD said, I will destroy man, whom I have created, from the face of the earth; both man and beast,[1] and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air: for it repenteth[2] me that I have made them.

8 But Noah [i]found grace[3] in the eyes of the LORD.

9 ¶ These are the generations[4] of Noah: [k]Noah was a just man,[5] and perfect[6] in his generation, and Noah [l]walked with God.

10 And Noah begat three sons, [m]Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

11 The earth also was corrupt [n]before God; and the earth was filled [o]with violence.

12 And God [p]looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt: [q]for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.

13 ¶ And God said unto Noah, [r]The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them: and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth.[7]

14 ¶ Make thee an ark of gopher-wood: rooms[8] shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch.

15 And this is the fashion which thou shalt make it of; the length of the ark shall be three hundred cubits, the breadth of it fifty cubits, and the height of it thirty cubits.[9]

16 A window shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof; with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it.

17 And, behold, [s]I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven; and every thing that is in the earth [t]shall die.

18 But with thee will [u]I establish my covenant:[10] and thou shalt [v]come into the ark, thou, and thy sons,[11] and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee.

19 And of every living thing of all flesh, [w]two of every sort[12] shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee; they shall be male and female.

20 Of fowls [x]after their kind, and of cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the earth after his kind; two of every sort shall come unto thee, to keep them alive.

21 And [y]take thou unto thee of all food that is eaten, and thou shalt gather it to thee; and it shall be for food for thee, and for them.

22 [z]Thus did Noah: according to all that God commanded him, so did he.[1]

CHAPTER VII.

Noah, with his family, and the living creatures, enter into the ark, 1—16. The beginning, increase, and continuance of the flood, 17—24.

AND [a]the LORD said unto Noah, Come thou, and all thy house, into the ark: for thee have I [b]seen righteous[2] before me in this generation.

2 [c]Of every clean beast[3] thou shalt take to thee by sevens,[4] the male and his female: [d]and of beasts that are not clean by two, the male and his female.

3 Of fowls also of the air by sevens, the male and the female; to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth.

4 For yet seven days, and [e]I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights; and every living substance that I have made will I destroy[5] from off the face of the earth.

5 And Noah did [f]according unto all that the LORD commanded him.

6 And Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth.

7 ¶ And [g]Noah went in, and his sons, and his wife,[6] and his sons' wives with him, into the ark, because of the waters of the flood.

8 Of clean beasts, and of beasts that are not clean, and of fowls, and of every thing that creepeth upon the earth,

9 There [h]went in two and two unto Noah into the ark,[7] the male and the female, as God had commanded Noah.

10 ¶ And it came to pass after seven days,[8] that the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

11 In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month,[9] the same day were all [i]the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows[1] of heaven were opened.

12 And the rain was upon the earth forty [k]days and forty nights.[2]

13 [l]In the self-same day[3] entered Noah, and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark:

14 They, [m]and every beast after his kind, and all the cattle after their kind, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind, and every fowl after his kind, every bird of every sort.[4]

15 And they went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life.

16 And they that went in, went in male and female of all flesh, as God had commanded him: and the LORD shut[n] him in.[5]

17 ¶ And the [o]flood was forty days upon the earth;[6] and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth.[7]

18 And [p]the waters prevailed, and were increased greatly upon the earth; and the ark went upon the face of the waters.[8]

19 And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and all the high hills that were under the whole heaven were covered.

20 Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

21 ¶ And [q]all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man:

22 All in whose nostrils was the breath of life,[9] of all that was in the dry land, died.[10]

23 [r]And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth: and [s]Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark.

24 ¶ And the waters prevailed upon the earth [t]an hundred and fifty days.[11]

For, it is likely, he put in all other things first; & then went in himself, with his wife and children, and their wives; who were no sooner entered, but the waters brake in upon the earth from beneath, and came down pouring from above.—Patrick.

CHAPTER VIII.

The waters asswage, 1—3. The ark resteth on Ararat, 4—6. The raven and the dove, 7—14. Noah, being commanded, goeth forth of the ark, 15—19. He buildeth an altar, and offereth sacrifice, which God accepteth, and promiseth to curse the earth no more, 20—22.

AND [a]God remembered[1] Noah, and every living thing, and all the cattle that was with him in the ark: and God made [b]a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters asswaged:

2 The fountains also of the deep, and the windows of heaven, were stopped, [c]and the rain from heaven was restrained:

3 And the waters returned from off the earth continually:[2] and [d]after the end of the hundred and fifty days the waters were abated.

4 ¶ And the ark rested in the seventh month,[3] on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of [4]Ararat.

5 And the waters decreased continually[5] until the tenth month: in the tenth month, on the first day of the month, were the tops of the mountains seen.

6 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of forty days,[6] that Noah [e]opened the window of the ark which he had made:

7 And he sent forth a [f]raven, which went forth to and fro,[7] until the waters were dried up from off the earth.

8 Also he sent forth [g]a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground:

9 But the dove [h]found no rest for the sole of her foot, [i]and she returned unto him into the ark; for the waters were on the face of the whole [8]earth: then he put forth his hand, and took her, and pulled her[9] in unto him into the ark.

10 And he [k]stayed yet other seven days; and again he sent forth the dove out of the ark:

11 And the dove came in to him in the evening, and, lo, in her mouth was an [l]olive-leaf pluckt off. So Noah knew that the waters were abated from off the earth.

12 And he [m]stayed yet other seven days, and sent forth the dove, which returned not again unto him any more.

waters were dried up from off the earth; and Noah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and, behold, the face of the ground was dry.

14 And in the second month, [n]on the seven and twentieth day of the month, was the earth dried.[1]

15 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, saying,

16 [o]Go forth of the ark, thou, and thy wife, and thy sons, and thy sons' wives with thee.

17 Bring forth with thee every living thing that is with thee, of all flesh, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth; that [p]they may breed abundantly in the earth, and be fruitful, and multiply upon the earth.

18 And Noah went forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him:

19 Every beast, every creeping thing, and every fowl, and whatsoever creepeth upon the earth, after their kinds,[2] went forth out of the ark.

20 ¶ And [q]Noah builded an altar[3] unto the LORD, and took of every clean [r]beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt-offerings[4] on the altar.

21 And the LORD smelled a sweet savour;[5] and the LORD said in his heart,[6] I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake; for[7] the [s]imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth: neither will I again smite any more every thing living, [t]as I have done.

22 While the earth remaineth,[8] seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night, shall not cease.

CHAPTER IX.

God blesseth Noah, 1—3. Blood and murder are forbidden, 4—7. God's covenant, signified by the rainbow, 8—17. Noah replenisheth the world, planteth a vineyard, is drunken, and mocked of his son, curseth Canaan, blesseth Shem, prayeth for Japheth, and dieth, 18—29.

AND God [a]blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth.[9]

2 And [b]the fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea: into your hand are they delivered.[1]

3 Every moving thing that liveth shall be [c]meat for you; even as the [d]green herb have I given you [e]all things:

4 [f]But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat.[2]

5 And [g]surely your blood of your lives will I require: at the hand of every beast will I require it, and at the hand of man; at the hand of [h]every man's brother will I require the life of man.

6 Whoso sheddeth man's blood, [i]by man shall his blood be shed:[3] for [k]in the image of God made he man.

7 And you, [l]be ye fruitful, and multiply; bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein.

8 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying,

9 And I, behold, [m]I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you;

10 And with [n]every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you; from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth.[4]

11 And [o]I will establish my covenant with you: neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

These offerings had in them the nature of thank-offerings to God for deliverance from the general destruction, but were also, & chiefly, propitiatory and typical of Christ. Hence we are required, in 'whatsoever we do, to do it in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks unto the Father by Him.'

cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may [t]remember the everlasting covenant[1] between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth.

17 And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.

18 ¶ And the sons of Noah, that went forth of the ark, were [u]Shem, and Ham, and Japheth: [v]and Ham is the father of Canaan.[2]

19 These are the three sons of Noah; and[w] of them was the whole earth overspread.[3]

20 ¶ And Noah began to be an [x]husbandman, and he planted a vineyard:

21 And he drank of the wine, and was [y]drunken; and he was [z]uncovered within his tent.

22 And Ham, the father of Canaan, saw the nakedness of his father, and told [a]his two brethren without.

23 And [b]Shem and Japheth took a garment, and laid it upon both their shoulders, and went backward, and covered the nakedness of their father: and their faces were backward, and they saw not their father's nakedness.[4]

24 And Noah awoke from his wine, and knew what his younger son had done unto him.

25 And he said, [c]Cursed be Canaan; a [d]servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren.[5]

26 And he said, [e]Blessed be the LORD God of Shem;[6] and Canaan shall be his servant.[7]

27 God shall enlarge[8] Japheth,[9] and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.

28 ¶ And Noah lived after the flood three hundred and fifty years.

29 And all the days of Noah were nine[f] hundred and fifty years: and he died.

CHAPTER X.

The generations of Noah, 1. The sons of Japheth, 2—5. The sons of Ham, 6, 7. Nimrod the first monarch, 8—20. The sons of Shem, 21—32.

NOW these are the [a]generations of the sons of Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth: and unto them were sons born after the flood.

2 ¶ [b]The sons of Japheth;[10] Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Tiras.

3 And the sons of Gomer; Ashkenaz, and Riphath, and Togarmah.

4 And the sons of Javan; Elishah, and Tarshish, Kittim, and Dodanim.[1]

5 By these were the [c]isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands;[2] every one after his tongue, after their families, in their nations.

6 ¶ [d]And the sons of Ham;[3] Cush, and Mizraim, and Phut, and Canaan.

7 And the sons of Cush; Seba, and Havilah, and Sabtah, and Raamah, and Sabtecha: and the sons of Raamah; Sheba, and Dedan.

8 And Cush begat [e]Nimrod: he began to be a mighty one in the earth.

9 He was a [f]mighty hunter before the LORD: wherefore it is said, Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the LORD.[4]

10 And [g]the beginning of his kingdom was Babel,[5] and Erech, and Accad, and [h]Calneh, in the [i]land of Shinar.

11 Out of that land went forth Ashur,[6] and builded [k]Nineveh, and the city[7] Rehoboth, and Calah, 12 And Resen between Nineveh and Calah: the same is a great city.

13 And Mizraim[8] begat [l]Ludim, and Anamim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuhim, 14 And [m]Pathrusim, and Casluhim, (out of whom came [n]Philistim,) and Caphtorim.

15 ¶ And Canaan begat Sidon[9] his first-born, [o]and Heth,

16 And the Jebusite, and the Amorite, and the Girgasite,

17 And the Hivite, and the Arkite, and the Sinite,

18 [p]And the Arvadite, and the Zemarite, and the Hamathite: and afterward were the families of the Canaanites spread abroad.

19 And [q]the border of the Canaanites was from Sidon, as thou comest to Gerar, unto Gaza;[10] as thou goest unto [r]Sodom, and Gomorrah, and Admah, and Zeboim, even unto Lasha.[11]

20 These are the sons of Ham, after their families, after their tongues, in their countries, and in their nations.

21 ¶ Unto Shem also, the father of 6 The wisdom and goodness of God are particularly manifested in repeopling the earth by means of these persons, all of the same family, and who had witnessed that awful display of divine justice, in the destruction of the world by the flood, while themselves were preserved in the ark. By this very means, the true religion was propagated over the earth; for the sons of Noah would certainly teach their children, not only the precepts delivered to their father by God himself, but also how, in his justice, He had brought the flood on the world of the ungodly, & by his merciful providence, preserved them from the general ruin. —Clarke.

7 According to the Hebrew text, followed by our version, we may by computation find, that the original revelation made to Adam, might be transmitted to Abram, at above 2000 years' distance through only two intermediate persons. Adam lived till Methusaleh was 243 years old, and Methusaleh died when Shem was about 100, who lived almost as long as Abraham.

5 And the LORD [i]came down to see[1] the city and the tower, which the children of men[2] builded.

6 And the LORD said, [k]Behold, the people is one, [l]and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have [m]imagined to do.[3]

7 Go to, let [n]us go down,[4] and there [o]confound their language, that they may not understand [p]one another's speech.

8 So the LORD [q]scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city.

9 Therefore is the name of it called Babel;[5] because the LORD did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the LORD scatter them abroad upon the [r]face of all the earth.

10 ¶ [s]These are the generations of Shem:[6] Shem was an hundred years old, and begat Arphaxad two years after the flood.

11 And Shem lived, after he begat Arphaxad, five hundred years, and [t]begat sons and daughters.

12 And Arphaxad lived five and thirty years,[7] and begat Salah.

13 And Arphaxad lived, after he begat Salah, four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

14 And Salah lived thirty years, and begat Eber.

15 And Salah lived, after he begat Eber, four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

16 [u]And Eber lived four and thirty years, and begat Peleg.[8]

17 And Eber lived, after he begat Peleg, four hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters.

18 And Peleg lived thirty years, and begat Reu.[9]

19 And Peleg lived, after he begat Reu, two hundred and nine years, and begat sons and daughters.

20 And Reu lived two and thirty years, and begat Serug.[10]

21 And Reu lived, after he begat Serug, two hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters.

22 And Serug lived thirty years, and begat Nahor.

23 And Serug lived, after he begat Nahor, two hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

24 And Nahor lived nine and twenty years, and begat Terah.[1]

25 And Nahor lived, after he begat Terah, an hundred and nineteen years, and begat sons and daughters.

26 And Terah lived seventy years, and [z]begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran.[2]

27 ¶ Now these are the generations of Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran begat [y]Lot.

28 And Haran died before his father Terah in the land of his nativity, in [z]Ur of the Chaldees.[3]

29 And Abram and Nahor took them wives: the name of Abram's wife was [a]Sarai; and the name of Nahor's wife [b]Milcah, the daughter of Haran, the father of Milcah, and the father of Iscah.

30 But Sarai was [c]barren; she had no child.

31 ¶ And Terah took Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran, his son's son, and Sarai his daughter-in-law, his son Abram's wife; [d]and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan: and they came unto Haran,[4] and dwelt there.

32 And the days of Terah were two hundred and five years: and Terah died in Haran.[5]

CHAPTER XII.

God calleth Abram and blesseth him with a promise of Christ, 1—3. He departeth with Lot from Haran, 4, 5. He journeyeth through Canaan, which is promised him in a vision, 6—9. He is driven by a famine into Egypt, 10. Fear maketh him feign his wife to be his sister, 11—13. Pharaoh having taken her from him, by plagues is compelled to restore her, 14—20.

NOW the [a]LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee:

2 And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; [b]and thou shalt be a blessing:

3 [c]And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and[d] in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.[6]

4 ¶ So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him;[1] and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.

5 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and [e]the souls that they had gotten in [f]Haran;[2] and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; [g]and into the land of Canaan they came.

6 ¶ And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Sichem,[3] unto the plain[4] of [h]Moreh. And the [i]Canaanite was then in the land.

7 And the LORD appeared[5] unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an [k]altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.

8 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of [l]Beth-el,[6] and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Hai[7] on the east; and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, [m]and called upon the name of the LORD.

9 And Abram journeyed, going[8] on still toward the south.

10 ¶ And there was a [n]famine in the land: and Abram [o]went down into Egypt to sojourn there; for the famine was grievous in the land.

11 And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art [p]a fair woman to look upon:

12 Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife; and they [q]will kill me, but they will save thee alive.

13 [r]Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister:[9] that it may be well with me for thy sake; [s]and my soul shall live because of thee.

14 ¶ And it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians [t]beheld the woman, that she was very fair.

15 The [u]princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before [v]Pharaoh: and the woman was [w]taken into Pharaoh's house.[10]

10 Pharaoh was the common appellation of the Cuthite kings of Egypt, & continued so till the commencement of the Grecian monarchy, when they were called Ptolemies. It is probable, that formerly, as in the present day, in Persia, and other parts of the East, royal personages claimed, and obtained, the right of taking the sister or daughter of any of their subjects to their harem. Abraham, forgetting that he was under the protection of God, was afraid of his life, and to save it, he was sinfully willing to make this risk.

9 [k]Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: [l]if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.[1]

10 ¶ And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld [m]all the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered every where, before the LORD [n]destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as the garden [o]of the LORD, like the land of Egypt, as thou comest unto [p]Zoar.[2]

11 Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the one from the other.

12 Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelt in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom.

13 But the men of Sodom were [q]wicked, and sinners [r]before the LORD exceedingly.[3]

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, [s]Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, [t]northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward;

15 For all the land which thou seest, [u]to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever.

16 And I [v]will make thy seed as the dust of the earth; so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

17 Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it, and in the breadth of it: for I will give it unto thee.[4]

18 ¶ Then Abram removed his tent, and came and dwelt in the plain of Mamre,[5] which is in Hebron, and [w]built there an altar unto the LORD.

CHAPTER XIV.

The battle of four kings against five, 1—11. Lot is taken prisoner, 12, 13. Abram rescueth him, 14—17. Melchizedek blesseth Abram, 18, 19. Abram giveth him tithes, 20. The rest of the spoil, his partners having had their portions, he restoreth to the king of Sodom, 21—24.

AND it came to pass, in the days of Amraphel king of [a]Shinar, Arioch king of [b]Ellasar, Chedorlaomer king of [c]Elam, and Tidal king of nations;[6]

2 That these made war with Bera king of [d]Sodom, and with Birsha king of Gomorrah, Shinab king of [e]Admah, and Shemeber king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela, which is [f]Zoar.

3 All these were joined together in the [g]vale of Siddim, which is the salt sea.[1]

4 Twelve years they [h]served Chedorlaomer, and in the thirteenth year they rebelled.

5 And in the fourteenth year came Chedorlaomer, and the kings that were with him, and smote the [i]Rephaims in Ashteroth-Karnaim, and the Zuzims in Ham, [k]and the Emims[2] in Shaveh-Kiriathaim,[3]

6 And the [l]Horites in their mount Seir, unto El-paran,[4] which is by the wilderness.

7 And they returned and came to Enmishpat, which is [m]Kadesh, and smote all the country of the [n]Amalekites, and also the Amorites that dwelt in [o]Hazezon-tamar.

8 And there went out the king of Sodom, and the king of Gomorrah, and the king of Admah, and the king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela, (the same is Zoar,) and they joined battle with them in the vale of Siddim;

9 With Chedorlaomer the king of Elam, and with Tidal king of nations, and Amraphel king of Shinar, and Arioch king of Ellasar; four kings with five.

10 And the vale of Siddim was full of [p]slime pits;[5] and the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, and [q]fell there;[6] and they that remained fled to the [r]mountain.[7]

11 And they took all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their victuals,[s] and went their way.

12 And they took [t]Lot, Abram's brother's son, (who dwelt in Sodom,) and his goods, and departed.[8]

13 And there came one that had escaped,[u] and told [v]Abram the Hebrew;[9] for he dwelt in the plain of Mamre the Amorite,[w] brother of Eshcol, and brother of Aner: and these were confederate with Abram.

14 ¶ And when Abram heard that his [x]brother was taken captive, he armed[10] his trained[11] servants, [y]born in his own house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued them unto [z]Dan.[12]

16 And he [b]brought back all the goods, and also brought again his brother Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people.

17 ¶ And the [c]king of Sodom went out to meet him, (after his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer, and of the kings that were with him,) at the valley of Shaveh, which is the [d]king's dale.

18 And Melchizedek[2] king of [e]Salem brought forth bread and wine: and he was the [f]priest of the most high God.

19 And he [g]blessed him, and said, [h]Blessed be Abram of the most high God, [i]possessor of heaven and earth:

20 And [k]blessed be the most high God, which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him [l]tithes of all.

21 ¶ And the king of Sodom said unto Abram, Give me the persons,[3] and take the goods to thyself.

22 And Abram said to the king of Sodom, [m]I have lift up mine hand unto the LORD, [n]the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth,

23 That [o]I will not take from a thread even to a shoe-latchet, and that I will not take any thing that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich:

24 [p]Save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men which went with me, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre; let them take their portion.

CHAPTER XV.

God encourageth Abram, who complaineth for want of an heir, 1—3. God promiseth him a son, and a multiplying of his seed, 4, 5. Abram is justified by his faith, 6. Canaan is promised again, and confirmed to him by a sign and a vision, 7—21.

AFTER these things the word of the LORD[4] came unto Abram in a [a]vision,[5] saying, [b]Fear not, Abram: I am thy[c] shield, and thy exceeding great reward.[d]

2 And Abram said, Lord GOD, what wilt thou give me, [e]seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?

3 And Abram said, [d]Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, [e]one born in my house is mine heir.

4 ¶ And, behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but [f]he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

5 And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and [g]tell the stars, if thou be able to number them. And he said unto him, So[h] shall thy seed be.

6 ¶ And he [i]believed in the LORD; and he [k]counted it to him for righteousness.[1]

7 ¶ And he said unto him, I am the LORD [l]that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it.

8 And he said, Lord GOD,[2] [m]whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

9 And he said unto him, Take me an heifer of three years old, and a she-goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtle-dove, and a young pigeon.

10 And he took unto him all these, and divided them in the midst,[3] and laid each piece one against another; but the birds divided he not.

11 And when the fowls came down upon the carcases, Abram drove them away.

12 ¶ And when the sun was going down, a [n]deep sleep fell upon Abram; and, lo, an horror of great darkness fell upon him.

13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety [o]that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them [p]four hundred years:

14 And [q]also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge;[4] and afterward shall they come out with great[r] substance.

15 And thou [s]shalt go to thy fathers in peace;[5] thou shalt be buried in a good old age.

16 But in the [t]fourth generation[6] they shall come hither again: [u]for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full.[7]

17 And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, [v]behold a smoking furnace, and a burning lamp[1] that passed between those pieces.[2]

18 In that same day the LORD [w]made a covenant with Abram, saying, [x]Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt[3] unto the great river, the river Euphrates:[4]

19 The Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites,[5]

20 And the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephaims,

21 And the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Girgashites, and the Jebusites.

CHAPTER XVI.

Sarai, being barren, giveth Hagar to Abram, 1—3. Hagar being afflicted for despising her mistress, runneth away, 4—6. An angel sendeth her back to submit herself, and telleth her of her child, 7—14. Ishmael is born, 15, 16.

NOW Sarai, Abram's wife,[a] bare him no children: and she had an handmaid, [b]an Egyptian, whose name was Hagar.[6]

2 And Sarai said unto Abram, Behold now, the LORD hath [c]restrained me from bearing: I pray thee, go in unto my maid; it may be that I may obtain children by her.[7] And Abram [d]hearkened to the voice of Sarai.

3 And Sarai, Abram's wife, took Hagar her maid, the Egyptian, after Abram had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan, and gave her to her husband Abram to be his [e]wife.[8]

4 ¶ And he went in unto Hagar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was [f]despised in her eyes.

5 And Sarai said unto Abram, My wrong be upon thee: I have given my maid unto thy bosom; and when she saw that she had conceived, I was despised in her eyes: the LORD [g]judge between me and thee.[9]

6 But [h]Abram said unto Sarai, [i]Behold, thy maid is in thy hand: do to her as it pleaseth thee.[10] And when Sarai dealt[11] hardly with her, [k]she fled from her face.

7 ¶ And the angel of the LORD found her by a fountain of water [l]in the wilderness, by the fountain in the way to Shur.

8 And he said, [m]Hagar, Sarai's maid, Whence camest thou? and whither

8 Hagar, whose name denotes stranger, was probably an Egyptian slave given to Abram, by Pharaoh. The female slave belonged to her mistress, who, according to the usages of these times, had a right to dispose of her; and being eager to possess children, she fell upon the sinful and carnal policy narrated in the text. Abram fell into the snare, and both severely suffered.

9 Hagar was now probably insolent on the one hand, and Sarai envious and peevish on the other. She unreasonably blames Abram, as if he, and not herself, had been the immediate cause of her distress. Abram acted wisely in dismissing Hagar; but ought not to have left her entirely in the power of Sarai, who treated her with undue harshness. All the parties acted under the influence of passion and unbelief, and the consequences to all of them was bitter.

1 Hagar probably set out to return to Egypt. In her distress 'the angel of the Lord' addresses her as Sarah's servant, and commands her to return to her mistress; thus intimating to her, her former sin in leaving her proper station and duty.

2 Here we learn who is this Angel the Lord—this Angel Jehovah, for so the words are in the Heb. The Angel or Messenger of the Covenant—the Eternal WORD. None other might thus speak in his own name. This is plain from the 13th verse. On this interesting point, see ch. 22. 11; 32. 24-32; 48. 15, 16; Ju. 2. 1; 6. 11; 13. 3; Is. 63. 9; Ho. 12. 3-5; Zec. 1.12; 3. 5; Mal. 3. 1; in which passages the Angel is spoken of as a Man, as God, and an Angel or Messenger—clearly the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 This prophecy has been most wonderfully fulfilled, and is being verified to this day. The Arabs, Ishmael's descendants, continue a wild, lawless, and untamed race, separate from the rest of mankind, and at war with them to this day. The word, wild man, properly signifies wild ass-man, and that fierce, untamed, creature, is a most fit emblem of that fierce people; see Job 39. 5-8.

7 And [k]I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, [l]to be a God unto thee, [m]and to thy seed after thee.

8 [n]And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger,[2] all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting[3] possession; and [o]I will be their God.

9 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee, in their generations.

10 This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you, and thy seed after thee; [p]Every man-child among you shall be circumcised.

11 And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you.

12 And he that is eight days[4] old shall be circumcised among you,[5] every man-child in your generations; he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

13 He that is [q]born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

14 And the uncircumcised man-child, whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, [r]that soul shall be cut off from his people;[6] [s]he hath broken my covenant.[7]

19 And God said, [z]Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant[1] with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him.

21 But [b]my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year.

22 And he [c]left off talking with him, and God went up from Abraham.

23 ¶ And Abraham took Ishmael his son, and all that were born in his house, and all that were bought with his money, every male among the men of Abraham's house, and [d]circumcised the flesh of their foreskin in the self-same day, as God had said unto him.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Abraham entertaineth three angels, 1—8. Sarah is reproved for laughing at the strange promise, 9—16. The destruction of Sodom is revealed to Abraham, 17—22. Abraham maketh intercession for the men thereof, 23—33.

AND the LORD appeared[4] unto him in the [a]plains of Mamre: and he sat in the tent-door[5] in the heat of the day;

2 [b]And he lift up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him: and, when he saw them, he [c]ran to meet them from the tent-door, and bowed himself toward the ground,

3 And said, My Lord, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant.

4 Let a little water, I pray you, be fetched, [d]and wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree:

5 And [e]I will fetch a morsel of bread, and comfort[1] ye your hearts; after that ye shall pass on: for therefore are ye come[2] to your servant. And they said, So do as thou hast said.

6 And Abraham hastened into the tent unto Sarah, and said, Make[3] ready quickly [f]three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth.[4]

7 And Abraham ran unto the herd, and fetched a calf [g]tender and good, and gave it unto a young man; and he hasted to dress it.

8 And he took butter and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and [h]they did eat.

9 ¶ And they said unto him, Where is Sarah thy wife? And he said, Behold, [i]in the tent.

10 And he [k]said, I will certainly return unto thee [l]according to the time of life; and, lo, [m]Sarah thy wife shall have a son.[5] And Sarah heard it in the tent-door, which was behind him.

11 Now [n]Abraham and Sarah were old, and well stricken in age; and it ceased to be with Sarah [o]after the manner of women.

12 Therefore Sarah [p]laughed within herself, saying, After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, [q]my lord being old also?

13 And the LORD said unto Abraham, Wherefore did Sarah laugh, saying, Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old?

14 [r]Is any thing too hard for the LORD?[6] At the time appointed [s]I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son.

15 Then Sarah [t]denied, saying, I laughed not: for she was afraid. And he said, Nay; but thou didst laugh.

16 And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sodom: and Abraham went with them,[u] to bring them on the way.[7]

17 ¶ And the LORD said, [v]Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do;[8]

18 Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and [w]all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?

5 We have, in this narration, a very interesting example of the simplicity & hospitality of Eastern shepherd life. It was, as it still is, the duty of the chief, or head of a tribe, to entertain strangers; & he pitched his tent in the spot most likelyto meet them on their first approach. Abraham's running to meet them, marks the great respect in which he held them. He addressed himself to one of the guests, who seemed pre-eminent,though as yet hedid not probably know them. The forms of reverence and hospitality are still the same inthe East, as here described, from the 4th to the 9thverse, and such as the state of the countries and modes of travelling require. —See Pict. Bible.

AND there came [a]two angels to Sodom at even; and Lot[3] sat in the gate of Sodom:[4] and Lot, [b]seeing them, rose up to meet them; and he bowed himself with his face toward the ground:

2 And he said, Behold now, my lords, turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and [c]wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early, and go on your ways. And they said, [d]Nay; but we will abide in the street all night.

3 And he [e]pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house: [f]and he made them a feast, and did bake [g]unleavened bread, and they did eat.

4 ¶ But [h]before they lay down, the men of the city, even the men of Sodom, compassed the house round, both old and young, [i]all the people from every quarter.

5 And they called unto Lot, and said unto him, [k]Where are the men which came in to thee this night? bring them out unto us, that we may know them.[5]

6 And Lot went out at the door unto them, and shut the door after him,

7 And said, I pray you, [l]brethren, do not so wickedly.

8 Behold now, [m]I have two daughters which have not known man; let me, I pray you, bring them out unto you, and do ye to them as is good

1 God's promises to Abraham were entirely of grace, absolute and unconditional; yet the conduct of Abraham was part of the gracious plan; and it is observable, that while God chooses his people to salvation, it is through sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth.

4 A strong way of declaring affirmatively that God will not do so. The same form of expression is used in the 25th verse, to show that the Judge of all the earth is perfectly righteous. Abraham does not plead that the wicked may be spared for their own sakes, or because it would have been too severe to destroy them.

5 While Abraham thus nobly and benevolently pleads for the guilty cities, he remembers that it is only of the grace of God he is so permitted; that he himself is not only dust, but the remains of a wasted and consumed substance, guilty as a sinner before God. 1 His argument is very ingenious. He has obtained from the divine condescension an assurance that Sodom should be saved if fifty (nay even 20 righteous persons could be found in it; and would the merciful God destroy the whole city for the want of only five of that number?—Scott.

3 The sacred historian, tracing the history of Abraham, has for some time been silent as to Lot. Though he had ungenerously taken the preference over Abraham, and sinfully chosen the rich plain of Sodom; yet he is called in scripture a 'righteous man vexed with its wickedness,' & as such he must be delivered.

4 Gill says 'he sat there to observe strangers, and invite them into his house, that they might not fall into the hands of the wicked Sodomites.' This opinion is adopted by Patr. Poole, and A. Clarke.

5 The heart trembles in perusing this fearful narrative of human wickedness. The character of the heathen world, as narrated by Paul, and indicated in this passage, is too amply confirmed by heathen testimonies. We have often thought, in witnessing the remains of Pompeii, rescued from the ashes of the burning mountain, that they afford most painful proof that the wickedness of the cities of the plain, and their terrible punishment, have not been confined to them in the just judgments of a holy God.

in your eyes: only unto these men do nothing; for therefore came they under the shadow of my roof.[1]

9 And they said, [n]Stand back. And they said again, This [o]one fellow came in to sojourn, and he will needs be a judge: now will we deal worse with thee than with them. [p]And they pressed sore upon the man, even Lot, and came near to break the door.

10 But the men put forth their hand, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut to the door.

11 And they smote the men that were at the door of the house with blindness,[q] both small and great; so that they [r]wearied themselves to find the door.[2]

12 ¶ And the men said unto Lot, Hast[s] thou here any besides? son-in-law, and thy sons, and thy daughters, and whatsoever thou hast in the city, bring them out of this place:

13 For we will destroy this place, because[t] the cry of them is waxen great before the face of the LORD; [u]and the LORD hath sent us to destroy it.[3]

14 And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons-in-law, which married his daughters, and said, [v]Up, get you out of this place; for the LORD will destroy this city. But [w]he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law.

15 ¶ And when the morning arose, then the angels [x]hastened Lot, saying, Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which are here;[4] lest thou be consumed in the iniquity[5] of the city.

16 And [y]while he lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters,[6] the LORD [z]being merciful unto him: and they [a]brought him forth, and set him without the city.

17 And it came to pass, when they had brought them forth abroad, that he said, [b]Escape for thy life; [c]look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain: escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.[7]

18 And Lot said unto them, [d]Oh! not so, my Lord.

19 Behold now, thy servant hath found grace in thy sight, [e]and thou hast magnified thy mercy,[8] which thou hast shewed unto me in saving my life; and I cannot escape to the mountain, lest [f]some evil take me, and I die.

20 Behold now, this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one: Oh! let me escape thither, (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live.

21 And he said unto him, [g]See, I have accepted thee[1] concerning this thing also, that I will not overthrow this city, for the which thou hast spoken.

22 Haste thee, escape thither; for [h]I cannot do any thing till thou be come thither: therefore the name of the city was called [i]Zoar.[2]

23 The sun was risen[3] upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar.

24 ¶ Then [k]the LORD rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven:

25 And he overthrew those cities, and [l]all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground.[4]

26 ¶ But his wife [m]looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.[5]

27 ¶ And Abraham gat up early in the morning [n]to the place where he stood before the LORD:

28 And he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and, lo, the [o]smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

29 And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, [p]that God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

30 ¶ And Lot [q]went up out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; [r]for he feared to dwell in Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

31 ¶ And the first-born said unto the younger, Our father is old, and there is not a man in the earth [s]to come in unto us after the manner of all the earth:

1 Lot's proposal of giving his two daughters, seems to us strange & unwarrantable. But it was perfectly consonant with the usages of those times & countries; where the rights of hospitality were considered as the strongest of all laws; and a violation of them was accounted the greatest crime. The host was considered bound to defend his guest, even at the expense of his own life. Yet Lot should not have made such a proposal. It was doing evil that good might come. But part may be ascribed to the excessive perturbation of his mind.

6 It appears from ver. 8. that those called his sons-in-law, were only betrothed to his daughters. They seem to have perished in the ruin of the city, having received the solemn warning of Lot, ver. 14, as a ridiculous tale. Lot probably 'lingered,' to prevail upon them to leave the city. God, being merciful, laid hold upon him & his family, 'pulling them,' as God does, sometimes, in his mercy, the ungodly, as brands out of the fire.

The judgment came, however, as 'a destruction from the Almighty,' & we need not inquire how he effected it. But the cities and all the inhabitants were totally destroyed; and the whole plain was converted into a great lake, called the Salt sea, or Dead sea.—Scott.

6 Many conjectures have been formed concerning the motives which induced Lot's daughters to this most atrocious conduct; and many excuses have been attempted. It is not indeed improbable that the desire of having children, of which they seemed to have no other prospect, was one powerful inducement; but there is little reason to think that they had any expectation of being the ancestors of the promised Seed, for that distinction was expressly limited to the seed of Abraham. The truth seems to be, that though preserved from gross crimes, they had been accustomed in Sodom to hear and witness wickedness till their consciences were become unfeeling, and their sense of shame blunted. No sufficient excuse can be made either for them or for Lot.

CHAPTER XX.

Abraham sojourneth at Gerar, and denieth his wife, and loseth her, 1, 2. Abimelech taketh her, but is reproved of God in a dream, 3—8. He rebuketh Abraham; restoreth Sarah, and reproveth her, 9—16. He is healed at Abraham's prayer, 17, 18.

AND Abraham journeyed from [a]thence toward the south country, and dwelled between [b]Kadesh and Shur, and sojourned in [c]Gerar.[3]

2 And Abraham [d]said of Sarah his wife, she is my sister: and [e]Abimelech king of Gerar sent and took Sarah.[4]

3 But God came to Abimelech in a [f]dream by night,[5] and said to him, Behold, thou art but [g]a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for she is a man's wife. [6]

4 But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, LORD, wilt thou slay[h] also a righteous nation?

5 Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother. [i]In the integrity[7] of my heart, [k]and innocency of my hands, have I done this.

6 And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for I also [l]withheld thee from [m]sinning against me: therefore suffered I thee not [n]to touch her.

7 Now therefore restore the man his wife; for he is a [o]prophet,[1] and he shall [p]pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, [q]know thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, and all that are thine.

8 Therefore Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears:[2] and the men were sore afraid.

9 ¶ Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, [r]What hast thou done unto us? and what have I offended thee, that thou hast brought on me and on my kingdom [s]a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me that [t]ought not to be done.

10 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing?

11 And Abraham said, Because I thought, [u]Surely the fear of God is not in this place; and they will slay me for my wife's sake.

12 And yet indeed [v]she is my sister: she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife.

13 And it came to pass when [w]God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, [x]This is thy kindness which thou shalt show unto me; at every place whither we shall come, say of me, He is my brother.

14 And Abimelech [y]took sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and women-servants, and gave them unto Abraham, [z]and restored him Sarah his wife.

15 And Abimelech said, Behold, my land is [a]before thee: dwell where it pleaseth thee.[3]

16 And unto Sarah he said, Behold, I have given thy [b]brother a thousand pieces of silver: behold, he is to thee a covering of the eyes,[4] unto all that are with thee, and with all other. [c]Thus she was reproved.

17 ¶ So Abraham [d]prayed unto God: and God healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his maid-servants;[5] and they bare children.

2 Both Ammon and Moab were nations accursed. The Moabites soon fell from the faith of God, and became idolators, the people of Chemosh & of Baalpeor, Nu. 21. 29; 25. 1-3; & were enemies to the children of Abraham; see Nu. xxii. Ju. 3. 14, &c. And the Ammonites, who dwelt near to the Moabites, united with them in idolatry, and were also enemies to Israel; see De. 23. 3, 4; Ju. 11. 4-24.

4 The difficulty of this expression arises from the difficulty of determining whether the pronoun rendered 'he,' refers to Abraham or to the gift. In the former case it means Abraham being her avowed husband, would every where be her protection. In the latter, which seems to correspond with the Hebrew, and several of the ancient versions, the meaning is, this is a covering of the eyes; that is, this money shall purchase veils to thee and all that are with thee, such as married women usually wore.

Abimelech because of Sarah, Abraham's wife.

CHAPTER XXI.

Isaac is born, and circumcised, 1—5. Sarah's joy, 6—8. Hagar and Ishmael are cast forth, 9—14. Hagar in distress, 15, 16. The angel comforteth her, 17—21. Abimelech's covenant with Abraham at Beer-sheba, who calleth upon the Lord, 22—34.

AND the LORD [a]visited[1] Sarah as he had said, and the LORD did unto Sarah [b]as he had spoken.

2 For Sarah conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, [c]at the set time of which God had spoken to him.

3 And Abraham [d]called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, Isaac.[2]

4 And Abraham circumcised his son Isaac, [e]being eight days old, as God had commanded him.

5 And Abraham was an [f]hundred years old when his son Isaac was born unto him.

6 ¶ And Sarah said, [g]God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear [h]will laugh with me.[3]

7 And she said, [i]Who would have said unto Abraham, that Sarah should have given children suck? for I have born him a son in his old age.

8 And the child grew, and was weaned: and Abraham made a [k]great feast the same day that Isaac was weaned.[4]

9 ¶ And Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, which she had born unto Abraham, [l]mocking.

10 Wherefore she said unto Abraham, [m]Cast out this bond-woman and her son; for the son of this bond-woman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac.[5]

11 And the thing was very [n]grievous in Abraham's sight because of his son.

12 And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bond-woman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, [o]hearken unto her voice; [p]for in Isaac shall thy seed be called.[6]

13 And also of the son of the bond-woman [q]will I make a nation, because he is thy seed.

14 And Abraham [r]rose up early in the morning, and took bread and a bottle of water,[1] and gave it unto Hagar, (putting it on her shoulder,) and the child,[2] and sent her away: and she departed, and [s]wandered in the wilderness of Beer-sheba.

15 And the water was spent in the bottle,[3] and she cast the child under one of the shrubs.[4]

16 And she went, and sat her down over against him, a good way off, as it were a bow-shot; for she said, [t]Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against him, [u]and lift up her voice, and wept.[5]

17 And [v]God heard the voice of the lad: and the angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven,[6] and said unto her, [w]What aileth thee, Hagar? [x]fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.

18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for [y]I will make him a great nation.

19 And God [z]opened her eyes,[7] and she saw a well of water: and she went and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink.

20 And [a]God was with the lad; and he grew, and dwelt in the wilderness, and became an [b]archer.[8]

21 And he dwelt [c]in the wilderness of Paran:[9] and his mother took him [d]a wife out of the land of Egypt.

22 ¶ And it came to pass at that time, that [e]Abimelech, and Phichol the chief captain of his host, spake unto Abraham, saying, [f]God is with thee in all that thou doest:[10]

23 Now therefore [g]swear unto me here by God, that thou wilt not deal falsely with me,[11] nor with my son, nor with my son's son: but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned.

24 And Abraham said, I will swear.

25 And Abraham [h]reproved Abimelech because of a well of water, which Abimelech's [i]servants had violently taken away.

26 And Abimelech said, [k]I wot not who hath done this thing; neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it, but to-day.

27 And Abraham [l]took sheep and

1 The word visited, so used, denotes the visible effects of God's presence and power, either in mercy or in judgment. Here it signifies his gracious attention to Sarah, & his faithful accomplishment of his promise.

b Ps. 12. 6; Mat. 24. 35.

d ch.17.19; 22.2; Jos. 24. 3; Mat. 1. 2; Ac. 7. 8; He. 11. 18.

2 Isaac signifies laughter; a name given in remembrance of Abraham's laughing in believing joy and gratitude; and of Sarah's unbelieving laughter.

h Lu. 1. 14, 58; Ro. 12. 15.

3 In this case, the laughing is that of joy and gratitude. The joy of Abraham and Sarah, on this extraordinary occasion, & the congratulations which they would receive from friends and neighbours, were but feeble earnests of the rejoicings of many millions in Him who descended from Isaac, to bless the nations of the earth.

4 It is probable that Isaac was not weaned till he was about 5 years of age. It was usual not to wean their children till they were at least 3 years old. At this time, Ishmael was about 17 years old; and the feasting & rejoicing on occasion of the weaning of Isaac seem to have excited his jealousy; and he derided Isaac to such an extent as to amount to persecution, contempt & hatred of him as the child of promise, as well as contempt of God's covenant, Ga.4.29.

CHAPTER XXII.

Abraham is tempted to offer Isaac, 1, 2. He giveth proof of his faith and obedience, 3—10. The angel stayeth him, 11, 12. Isaac is exchanged with a ram, 13. The place is called Jehovah-jireh, 14. Abraham is blessed again, 15—19. The generations of Nahor, from whom came Rebekah, 20—24.

AND it came to pass after these things, that [a]God did tempt Abraham,[4] and said unto him, Abraham. And he said, Behold, here I am.[5]

2 And he said, [b]Take now thy son,[6] thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of [c]Moriah;[7] and[d] offer him there for a burnt-offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

3 ¶ And Abraham [e]rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass,[8] and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt-offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him.

4 Then on the [f]third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

5 And Abraham said unto his young men, [g]Abide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and [h]come again to you.[9]

6 And Abraham took the wood of the burnt-offering, and [i]laid it upon Isaac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife; and they went both of them together.

7 And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, [k]My father: and he said, Here am I,[1] my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood; [l]but where is the lamb[2] for a burnt-offering?

8 And Abraham said, My son, [m]God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt-offering: so they went both of them together.

9 And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order; and [n]bound Isaac his son, and laid him on the altar upon the wood.

10 And Abraham [o]stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son.[3]

11 ¶ And the [p]angel of the LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said, [q]Abraham, Abraham. And he said, Here am I.

12 And he said, [r]Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for [s]now I know that thou fearest God, [t]seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from me.[4]

13 And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, [u]behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt-offering [v]in the stead of his son.

14 And Abraham [w]called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh:[5] as it is said to this day, [x]in the mount of the LORD it shall be seen.

15 ¶ And the angel of the LORD called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time,

16 And said, [y]By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD;[6] for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son;

17 That [z]in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying [a]I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore;[7] and [b]thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies:[8]

9 This implies Abraham's faith that God could raise Isaac from the dead, He.11.9. This whole, most solemn & affecting transaction, is, in many respects, typical of Christ. God provides the sacrifice, as He did his own Son. Isaac, as Christ, willingly yields himself for a sacrifice; & as Christ rose from the dead in three days, so was Isaac released from a sentence of death at the end of three days.

4 It is plain from the phraseology here employed, that the Angel of the Lord spoken of in the 11th verse is none other than the Angel Jehovah, the Messenger of the covenant, whose appearances we have already had occasion to notice; who else might say, 'I know that thou fearest God,' 'Thou hast not withheld thy son from me.' He interposes as Mediator; He provided a ram for the burnt-offering, a type of his offering Himself in our room and stead.

19 So [e]Abraham returned unto his young men; and they rose up, and went together to [f]Beer-sheba: and Abraham dwelt at Beer-sheba.

The age and death of Sarah, 1, 2. The purchase of Machpelah, where Sarah was buried, 3—20.

AND Sarah was [a]an hundred and seven and twenty years old:[3] these were the years of the life of Sarah.

2 And Sarah died in [b]Kirjath-arba;[4] the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to [c]mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.[5]

3 ¶ And Abraham stood up from before his dead, and spake unto the sons of [d]Heth,[6] saying,

4 I am a [e]stranger and a sojourner with you: give me a possession of a burying[f] place with you, that I may bury[g] my dead out of my sight.

5 And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him,

6 Hear us, [h]my lord: thou art a mighty [i]prince[7] among us;[8] in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead: none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead.

7 And Abraham stood up, and [k]bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth.

8 And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight, hear me, and [l]intreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar, a ch. 17. 17.

3 It is worthy of remark that Sarah is the only woman, in the sacred writings, whose age, death, and burial, are distinctly noted. And she has been deemed worthy of higher honour, for St Paul, Ga. 4. 22,23, makes her a type of the church of Christ: and her faith in the accomplishment of God's promise, is particularly celebrated in He. 11. 11.

3 This transaction shows the esteem and respect with which Abraham was regarded on the one hand, & his upright & honourable spirit on the other. The whole people, as well as Ephron, manifested the utmost readiness to accommodate Abraham in his distress; and exhibited a beautiful display of sympathy, hospitality, and generosity.

4 Abraham rendered honour and respect to the sons of Heth, according to the custom of that age and country. It is evidently no part of the religion of the Bible to refuse such expressions of regard; but an ornament to godliness to render them, as far as it can be done, without flattering the persons, or countenancing the crimes of those to whom they are addressed.—Scott.

5 In ancient times money was weighed, not counted, & among the Jews was so in David's time, 1 Ch. 21. 25, & even till the captivity at Babylon, Je.32. 9. The word shekel comes from the Hebrew root signifying to weigh.

8 In Eastern countries anciently their burying places were in the fields, in vaults or caves in the sides of the rock; so it seems they were in the time of our Saviour, and seem to have been family vaults. Thus in the case of Lazarus, John 11. 30-31; in that of the strangers, Mat. 27. 7. & their carrying the widow's son out of the city, Lu. 7. 12. Many of these sepulchral caves still exist in Syria, Palestine, & Egypt, as also in the valley of mount Seir; some descend into the rock, others are cut horizontally in the declivities of mountains. Many of them contain several chambers, & have recesses in the walls, to receive the bodies; a few have stone coffins covered with a lid.

9 It is remarkable that the first purchase of possession mentioned in scripture, was a place to bury in, not to build in.—Trapp.

9 That he may give me the cave of Machpelah which he hath, which is in the end of his field: for as much money[1] as it is worth he shall give it me, for a possession of a burying-place amongst you.

10 And Ephron dwelt among the children of Heth. And Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the audience[2] of the children of Heth, even of [m]all that went in at the gate of his city, saying,

11 Nay, [n]my lord, hear me: the field give I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presence of the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy dead.[3]

12 And Abraham bowed down himself before the people of the land.[4]

13 And he spake unto Ephron, in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt give it, I pray thee, hear me: [o]I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

14 And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him,

15 My lord, hearken unto me: the land is worth four hundred shekels of silver; what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead.

16 And Abraham hearkened unto Ephron; and Abraham [p]weighed[5] to Ephron the silver, which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, [q]four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.[6]

17 And [r]the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were [s]made sure

18 Unto Abraham for a possession, in the presence of the children of Heth, before all that went in at the gate of his city.[7]

19 And after this, Abraham [t]buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah,[8] before Mamre: the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan.

20 And the field, and the cave that is therein, were made sure unto Abraham, for a possession of a burying-place,[9] by the sons of Heth.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Abraham swearеth his servant, 1—9. The servant's journey, 10, 11. His prayer and sign, 12—14. Rebekah meeteth him, and fulfilleth his sign, receiveth jewels, showeth her kindred, and inviteth him home, 15—25. The servant blesseth God, 26—28. Laban entertaineth him, 29—33. The servant showeth his message, 34—49. Laban and Bethuel approve of it, 50—57. Rebekah consenteth to go, 58—61. Isaac meeteth her, and bringeth her home, 62—67.

AND Abraham was [a]old, and well stricken in age:[1] and the LORD had blessed[b] Abraham in all things.

2 And Abraham said unto his [c]eldest servant[2] of his house, that [d]ruled over all that he had, [e]Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh;[3]

3 And I will make thee [f]swear by the LORD, [g]the God of heaven, and the God of the earth,[4] [h]that thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell:

4 But thou shalt go unto my country, and [i]to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac.

5 And the servant said unto him, Peradventure[k] the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

6 And Abraham said unto him, Beware[l] thou that thou bring not my son thither again.[5]

7 The [m]LORD God of heaven, which took[n] me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which[o] spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land; he shall send his [p]angel before thee,[6] and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.

8 And if the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then thou shalt be [q]clear from this my oath: only bring not my son thither again.

9 And the servant [r]put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and sware to him concerning that matter.

10 ¶ And the servant took ten camels,[7] of the camels of his master, and departed; (for[8] [s]all the goods of his master were in his hand;) and he arose, and went to [t]Mesopotamia,[9] unto the city[u] of Nahor.

11 And he made his camels to kneel down[10] without the city by a well of water, at the time of the evening, even the time that women go out to draw water.[11]

12 ¶ And he said, [v]O LORD God of my master Abraham, [w]I pray thee, send me good speed this day, and shew kindness unto my master Abraham.[1]

13 Behold, I stand here by the well of water; and the [x]daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water:

14 And let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink; and I will give thy camels drink also: let the same be she [y]that thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac; [z]and thereby shall I know that thou hast shewed kindness unto my master.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, [a]before he had done speaking, that, behold, Rebekah[b] came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of [c]Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her [d]pitcher upon her shoulder.[2]

16 And the damsel was very fair[3] to look upon, a virgin; neither had any man known her: and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher, and came up.[4]

17 And the servant ran to meet her, and said, [e]Let me, I pray thee, drink a little water of thy pitcher.

18 And she said, [f]Drink, my lord: and she hasted, and let down her pitcher upon her hand, and gave him drink.

19 And when she had done giving him drink, [g]she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking.

20 And she hasted, and emptied her pitcher into the trough, and ran again unto the well to draw water; and drew for all his camels.[5]

21 And the man, [h]wondering at her, held his peace, to wit whether the LORD had made his journey prosperous or not.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, as the camels had done drinking, that the man [i]took a golden ear-ring[6] [k]of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands of ten shekels weight of gold,[7]

23 And said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me, I pray thee. Is there room in thy father's house for us to lodge in?

24 And she said unto him, [t]I am the daughter of Bethuel the son of Milcah, which she bare unto Nahor.

25 She said, moreover, unto him, We[m] have both straw and provender enough, and room to lodge in.

26 And the man [n]bowed down his head, and worshipped the LORD.

27 And he said, [o]Blessed be the LORD God of my master Abraham, who hath not left destitute my master [p]of his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, [q]the LORD led me to the house of [r]my master's brethren.

28 And the damsel ran, and told them of[s] her mother's house these things.

29 ¶ And Rebekah had [t]a brother, and his name was Laban: and Laban ran out unto the man unto the well.

30 And it came to pass, when he saw the ear-ring,[1] and bracelets upon his sister's hands, and when he heard the words of Rebekah his sister, saying, Thus spake the man unto me, that he came unto the man; and, behold, he stood by the camels at the well.

31 And he said, Come in, [u]thou blessed of the LORD; wherefore standest thou without? [v]for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels.[2]

32 ¶ And the man came into the house: and he ungirded his camels, and gave straw and provender[3] for the camels, and water to [w]wash his feet, and the men's feet that were with him.

33 And there was set meat before him to eat: but he said, [x]I will not eat until I have told mine errand.[4] And he said, Speak on.

34 ¶ And he said, I am Abraham's servant.

35 And [y]the LORD hath blessed my master greatly, and he is become great; and he hath given him [z]flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and menservants, and maid-servants, and camels, and asses.

36 And [a]Sarah, my master's wife, bare a son to my master when she was old; and [b]unto him hath he given all that he hath.

37 And [c]my master made me swear, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife to my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I dwell:

2 From the circumstance of the mother's house being mentioned, ver.28, some have conjectured, that her father, Bethuel, was dead; and the person called Bethuel, ver. 50, was a younger brother. This is impossible; but the mother's house might be mentioned were even the father alive; for in Asiatic countries the women have apartments entirely separate from those of the men, in which their little children & grown up daughters reside with them.
3 This was a mixture of cut straw and barley, the usual food for their labouring animals. The straw, which indeed is very much bruised in 'treading out' by the animals, is cut still smaller for this purpose. It is never used for litter in the east.

As soon as we accosted them, they brought us water to drink, and likewise watered our horses. Similar civilities had been shown me in other parts, but here it appeared particularly remarkable, as Rebekah, who was certainly brought up in these parts, showed herself equally obliging to travellers.—Niebuhr.

6 The grand-daughter of his brother Nahor. Bethuel, who was Abraham's nephew, is called his brother, as Lot was before. There is great simplicity & beauty, as well as piety and wisdom, in this narrative of Abraham's servant. He places the whole circumstances in the order of events, in such a way as to make it appear plain to the family of Rebekah, that he had been directed to her by the special direction of God, and therefore it would be their duty to grant his request, as the finger of God was manifest in directing his way. His master had assured him that the Lord would be with him and prosper his way. He himself had prayed that God would give a certain token of his providence in the matter. It had been granted, and he now left it in their hands to give him an answer.

38 But thou shalt go unto my father's house, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son.

39 And I said unto my master, Peradventure the woman will not follow me.

40 And he said unto me, The LORD, [d]before whom I walk,[1] [e]will send his angel with thee, and prosper thy way; and thou shalt take a wife for my son of my kindred, and of my father's house.

41 Then shalt thou be clear from this my oath,[2] when thou comest to my kindred; and if they give not thee one, thou shalt be clear from my oath.

42 And I came this day unto the well, and said,[3] [f]O LORD God of my master Abraham, if now thou do [g]prosper my way which I go:

43 Behold, I stand by the well of water; and it shall come to pass, that when the virgin cometh forth to draw water, and I say to her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink;

44 And she say to me, [h]Both drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be [i]the woman whom the LORD hath appointed out for my master's son.

45 And [k]before I had done [l]speaking in mine heart,[4] Behold, Rebekah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the well, and drew water: and I said unto her, Let me drink, I pray thee.

46 And she made haste, and let down her pitcher from her shoulder, and said, Drink; and I will give thy camels drink also: so I drank, and she made the camels drink also.[5]

47 And I asked her, and said, Whose daughter art thou? And she said, The daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Milcah bare unto him: and [m]I put the ear-ring upon her face, and the bracelets upon her hands.

48 And [n]I bowed down my head, and worshipped the LORD, and blessed the LORD God of my master Abraham, which had [o]led me in the right way, to take my master's brother's [6]daughter unto his son.

49 And now [p]if ye will deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; [q]that I may turn to the right hand, or to the left.

50 Then [r]Laban and Bethuel[1] answered and said, [s]The thing proceedeth from the LORD; [t]we cannot speak unto thee bad or good.

51 Behold, Rebekah is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the LORD hath spoken.

52 And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words, he [u]worshipped the LORD, bowing himself to the earth.[2]

53 And the servant brought forth jewels[3] of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: he gave also to her brother and to her mother [v]precious things.[4]

54 And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night: and they rose up in the morning; and he said, [w]Send me away unto my master.

55 And her brother and her mother said, Let the damsel abide with us a few days,[5] at the least ten;[6] after that she shall go.

56 And he said unto them, [x]Hinder me not, seeing the LORD hath prospered my way; send me away, that I may go to my master.

57 And they said, We will call the damsel, and enquire at her mouth.

58 And they called Rebekah, and said unto her, [y]Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go.

59 And they sent away Rebekah their[z] sister, and her [a]nurse,[7] and Abraham's servant, and his men.

60 And [b]they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Thou art our sister, be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let [c]thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them.

61 ¶ And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and [d]they rode upon the camels, and followed the man; and the servant took Rebekah, and went his way.

62 And Isaac came from the way of the well [e]Lahai-roi: for he dwelt in the south country.

63 And Isaac went out to [f]meditate[8] in the field at the even-tide; and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and, behold, the camels were coming.

64 And Rebekah lifted up her eyes; and when she saw Isaac, she [g]lighted off[1] the camel.

65 For she had said unto the servant, What man is this that walketh in the field to meet us? And the servant had said, It is my master: therefore she took a [h]vail, and covered herself.[2]

66 And [i]the servant told Isaac all things that he had done.

67 And Isaac brought her into [k]his mother Sarah's tent, [l]and took Rebekah, and she became his wife; and he loved her: and Isaac was [m]comforted after his mother's death.

2 And she bare him Zimran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and [b]Midian, and Ishbak, and [c]Shuah.

3 And Jokshan begat [d]Sheba and [e]Dedan. And the sons of Dedan were [f]Asshurim, and Letushim, and Leummim.

4 And the sons of Midian; [g]Ephah, and Epher, and Hanoch, and Abidah, and Eldaah. All these were the children of Keturah.

5 ¶ And Abraham [h]gave all that he had unto Isaac.[4]

6 But unto the sons of the [i]concubines,[5] which Abraham had, Abraham gave [k]gifts, and sent them away from Isaac his son, (while he yet lived,) eastward unto the [l]east country.[6]

7 ¶ And these are the days of the years of Abraham's life which he lived, an hundred threescore and fifteen years.

8 Then Abraham [m]gave up the ghost, and died in a [n]good old age, an old man, and full of years;[7] and was [o]gathered to his people.

9 And his sons [p]Isaac and Ishmael buried him [q]in the cave of Machpelah, in the field of Ephron the son of Zohar the Hittite, which is before Mamre;

10 The field which Abraham purchased of the sons of Heth: there was Abraham buried, and Sarah his wife.

3 Commentators are divided as to whether this union with Keturah took place after Sarah's death, or some time before. Abraham's age (137 years at Sarah's death) is supposed to render the former supposition improbable; yet there is nothing impossible in his having had so many children at an advanced age. The fact however, that in verse 6, Keturah is classed along with Hagar as one of the concubines, for we know of no others; and that in 1 Ch. 1. 32, Keturah is expressly called a concubine, and her children are named before Isaac, seems to favour the latter opinion.

11 And it came to pass, [r]after the death of Abraham, that God blessed his son Isaac: and Isaac dwelt by the well [s]Lahai-roi.

12 ¶ Now [t]these are the generations of Ishmael, Abraham's son, whom Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's handmaid, bare unto Abraham.

13 And these are [u]the names of the sons of Ishmael, by their names, according to their generations: The firstborn of Ishmael, [v]Nebajoth;[1] and [w]Kedar, and Adbeel, and Mibsam,

14 And Mishma, and [x]Dumah,[2] and Massa,

15 Hadar,[3] and [y]Tema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedemah.[4]

16 These are the sons of Ishmael, and these are their names, by their towns, and by their castles;[5] [z]twelve princes according to their nations.[6]

17 And [a]these are the years of the life of Ishmael, an hundred and thirty and seven years: and he gave up the ghost, and died, and was gathered unto his people.

18 And they dwelt from [b]Havilah unto Shur, that is before Egypt, [c]as thou goest [d]towards Assyria:[7] and he died[8] in[e] the presence of all his brethren.

19 ¶ And these are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son: [f]Abraham begat Isaac.

20 And Isaac was forty years old when[g] he took Rebekah to wife, the daughter of Bethuel [h]the Syrian of Padan-aram, the sister to Laban the Syrian.

21 And Isaac [i]entreated the LORD for his wife, [k]because she was barren: and the LORD was entreated of him, and[l] Rebekah his wife conceived.

22 And the children struggled together within her: and she said, If it be so, why am I thus? and she went to [m]enquire of the LORD.

23 And the LORD said unto her, Two[n] nations are in thy womb, and two[o] manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and [p]the elder shall serve the younger.

24 ¶ And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb.

25 And the first came out red, [q]all over like an hairy garment; and they called his name Esau.[1]

26 And [r]after that came his brother out, and his hand took hold on Esau's heel; and his name was called [s]Jacob:[2] and Isaac was threescore years old when she bare them.

27 And the boys grew: and Esau was [t]a cunning hunter, a man of the field; and Jacob was [u]a plain man, dwelling in tents.

28 And Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison;[3] but Rebekah loved Jacob.

29 And Jacob sod pottage: and Esau came from the field, [v]and he was faint.

30 And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage;[4] for I am faint: therefore was his name called [w]Edom.

31 And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birth-right.

32 And Esau said, Behold, I am at the point to die:[5] [x]and what profit shall this birth-right do to me?[6]

33 And Jacob said, [y]Swear to me this day; and he sware unto him: [z]and he sold his birth-right unto Jacob.

34 Then Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentiles; and he did [a]eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way. [b]Thus Esau despised his birth-right.

AND there was a famine in the land, besides [a]the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. [b]And Isaac went unto Abimelech[7] king of the Philistines unto Gerar.[8]

2 And the LORD [c]appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; [d]dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of.

3 [e]Sojourn in this land, and [f]I will be with thee, and will bless thee: for [g]unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries; and I will perform the [h]oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father:

Trav. in Barbary, p. 140, says, 'Beans, lentils, kidney beans, and gravancos, are the chiefest of their pulse kind. Beans when boiled and stewed with oil and garlic, are the principal food of persons of all distinctions. Lentils are dressed in the same manner as beans, dissolving easily into a mass, and making a pottage of a chocolate colour.' This was the 'red pottage' for which Esau, from thence called Edom or red, sold his birthright.

6 It does not appear that the birth-right implied the inheritance of any larger portion of temporal blessings, otherwise it is not probable that a man of Esau's earthly character would have sold it so incautiously, & cared so little about it. It included, however, not only the promise that Abraham's seed should possess the land of Canaan, but they should inherit spiritual blessings, & especially in the promised Messiah. These Jacob valued, and Esau altogether despised them.

will give unto thy seed all these countries: and in thy [k]seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;

5 Because that Abraham [l]obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.[1]

6 ¶ And Isaac dwelt in Gerar.

7 And the men of the place asked him of his wife; and he said, [m]She is my sister: for he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah; because she was [n]fair to look upon.

8 And it came to pass, when he had been there a long time,[2] that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out at [o]a window, and saw, and, behold, Isaac was [p]sporting with Rebekah his wife.[3]

9 And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, Behold, of a surety she is thy wife; and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And Isaac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

10 And Abimelech said, [q]What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and thou shouldest have brought guiltiness upon us.

11 And Abimelech charged all his people, saying, He that [r]toucheth this man, or his wife, shall surely be put to death.[4]

12 ¶ Then Isaac sowed in that land, and received[5] in the same year [s]an hundred-fold;[6] and the LORD [t]blessed him.

13 And the man waxed great, and went[7] forward, and grew, until he became very great:

14 For he had [u]possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of servants:[8] and the Philistines [v]envied him.

15 For all the wells which [w]his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had stopped them,[9] and filled them with earth.

16 And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us; for thou art much [x]mightier than we.

17 ¶ And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

1 God thus testified his approbation of Abraham's remarkable obedience, for the honour of his own name, and the encouragement of Isaac, & of others in every age and nation. This obedience likewise conduced to the fulfilment of the promises. It was the evidence of that faith, by which Abraham was justified; and in consequence of his prompt obedience, the covenant respecting his seed was confirmed to him by an oath. The several expressions made use of, seem to refer to Abraham's unreserved obedience, in leaving his native country, sojourning in Canaan, offering sacrifices, being circumcised, and circumcising his sons and servants, & at length intentionally sacrificing Isaac at God's command, as well as to his general course of piety, righteousness, and holiness. —Scott.

9 This was a very iniquitous transaction in itself, and especially aggravated by the fact, that it was contrary to covenant and oath, ch. 21. 25-32. — In those arid countries, a well of water was a great acquisition; hence, to stop up the wells is justly accounted an act of hostility. This mode of injuring settlers, and revenging themselves on their enemies, is still resorted to among the Arabs. See Niebuhr & D'Herbelot.

They saw that he was protected in a special manner by the providence of God, and they desired to enter into a solemn league with him of mutual peace and amity. How true is the saying of the Word of God, 'that he maketh even their (his people's) enemies to be at peace with them.' In their advances on the present occasion, they conceal their former conduct, and attempt to justify themselves, though they had certainly acted deceitfully towards him. They now affirm that they had done him nothing but good. He wisely, for the sake of future peace and concord, accepts their plea without any dispute.

18 And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

19 And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of springing water.[1]

20 And the herdmen of Gerar did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well Esek;[2] because they strove with him.

21 And they digged another [3]well, and strove for that also: and he called the name of it Sitnah.[4]

22 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it Rehoboth;[5] and he said, For now the LORD hath made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land.

23 ¶ And he went up from thence to [y]Beer-sheba.

24 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, [z]I am the God of Abraham thy father: [a]fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed, for my servant Abraham's sake.[6]

25 And he [b]builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there:[7] and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

26 ¶ Then [c]Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahuzzath one of his friends, and Phichol[8] the chief captain of his army.

27 And Isaac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, [d]seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you?

28 And they said, We saw[9] certainly that the LORD was with thee: and we said, [e]Let there be now an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

29 That thou wilt[10] do us no hurt, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: thou art now [f]the blessed of the LORD.[11]

31 And they rose up [h]betimes in the morning, and sware one to another: and Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

32 And it came to pass the same day, that Isaac's servants came and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, We have found water.

33 And he called it Shebah:[1] therefore the name of the city is Beer-sheba[2] unto this day.

34 ¶ And Esau was forty years old when he took to wife Judith [i]the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Bashemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite;

35 [k]Which were a grief of mind[3] unto Isaac and to Rebekah.[4]

CHAPTER XXVII.

Isaac sendeth Esau for venison, 1—5. Rebekah instructeth Jacob to obtain the blessing, 6—17. Jacob under the person of Esau obtaineth it, 18—29. Esau bringeth venison, 30—32. Isaac trembleth, 33. Esau complaineth, and by importunity obtaineth a blessing, 34—40. He threateneth Jacob's life, 41. Rebekah disappointeth it, 42—46.

AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dim,[a] so that he could not see, he called Esau his eldest son, and said unto him, My son. And he said unto him, Behold, here am I.

2 And he said, Behold now, I am old,[5] [b]I know not the day of my death.

3 Now therefore [c]take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow, and go out to the field, and take me[6] some venison;

4 And make me savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; [d]that my soul may bless thee before I die.[7]

5 And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son. And Esau went to the field to hunt for venison,[8] and to bring it.

6 ¶ And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying,

7 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee [e]before the LORD[9] before my death.

8 Now therefore, my son, [f]obey my voice, according to that which I command thee.[10]

9 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence [g]two good kids of the goats;[1] and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth.

10 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he may bless thee before his death.

11 And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, Esau my brother is a [h]hairy man, and I am a smooth man:

12 My father peradventure will feel me, and I shall seem to him as [i]a deceiver; [k]and I shall bring a curse upon me, and not a blessing.

13 And his mother said unto him, [l]Upon me be thy curse, my son; only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

14 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother [m]made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

15 And Rebekah took goodly[2] raiment of her eldest son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son.

16 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck.[3]

17 And she gave the savoury meat and the bread, which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.

18 ¶ And he came unto his father, and said, My father. And he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son?

19 And Jacob said unto his father, [n]I am Esau thy first-born; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, that thy soul may bless me.

20 And Isaac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, [o]Because the LORD thy God brought it [4]to me.[5]

21 And Isaac said unto Jacob, Come near, I pray thee, that I may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau or not.

22 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

23 And he discerned him not, because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands. So he blessed him.[6]

24 And he said, Art thou my very son Esau?[7] And he said, [p]I am.

25 And he said, Bring it near to me,

1 Eastern dishes were so disguised in dressing that there was no difficulty in making a kid pass for venison. Dr Russel says, 'Most of the dishes of the people of Aleppo are either greasy with fat or butter, pretty high seasoned with salt and spices; many of them made sour with verjuice, pomegranate, or lemon-juice; and onions and garlic often and garlic often complete the seasoning. Some of their dishes of meat, however, are of a sweet nature. 'A whole lamb, stuffed with rice, almonds, raisins, pistaches, &c., and stewed, is a favourite dish with them,' and De la Roque states this latter dish to be also a favourite among the Arabs.

5 This whole conduct of Jacob is such a tissue of deception, falsehood, and profaneness, in so using the name of God, as is no less criminal than humiliating, and issuing from Rebekah's sinful conduct in the matter, brought very painful consequences to both, though God, bringing good out of evil, overruled it to the accomplishment of his own purposes.
6 Isaac no doubt would have rejoiced to hear Esau use the language of piety, as Jacob affected to do; yet this circumstance seems to have concurred in exciting his suspicions. But as his eyes failed him, he distrusted his ears also. How wonderful is that difference, which there is betwixt the faces and the voices of the several individuals of the human species! Scarcely any two are exactly alike in either, yet the difference cannot be defined or described! The power, wisdom, & kindness of our Creator should be admired & adored in this remarkable circumstance; for they are very visible.—Scott.
7 Isaac is still very suspicious that he is imposed upon, & tho' he had given him a common blessing, he still hesitates about pronouncing upon that which follows.

and I will eat of my son's venison, that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat: and he brought him wine, and he drank.

26 And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

27 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, the[q] smell of my son is as the smell of a field [r]which the LORD hath blessed:

28 Therefore God give thee[1] [s]of the dew of heaven,[2] and [t]the fatness of the earth, and [u]plenty of corn and wine:

29 [v]Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: [w]be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: [x]Cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.[3]

30 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting.

31 And he also had made savoury meat, and brought it unto his father, and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

32 And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy first-born, Esau.

33 And Isaac trembled[4] very exceedingly, and said, Who? where is he that hath taken[5] venison, and brought it me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? yea,[y] and he shall be blessed.

34 And when Esau heard the words of his father, [z]he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father![6]

35 And he said, [a]Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

36 And he said, Is not he rightly named Jacob? for he hath supplanted me these two times: he took away my birth-right;[7] and, behold, now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

37 And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, Behold, [b]I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and with corn and wine have I sustained[1] him: and what shall I do now unto thee, my son?

38 And Esau said unto his father, [c]Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, O my father! And Esau lifted up his voice, and wept.

39 And Isaac his father answered and said unto him, [d]Behold, thy dwelling shall be the fatness[2] of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above;

40 And by [e]thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt [f]serve thy brother: and it shall come to pass, when thou shalt have the dominion, that [g]thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.[3]

41 ¶ And Esau [h]hated Jacob, because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him: and Esau said in his heart, [i]The days of mourning for my father are at hand;[4] [k]then will I slay my brother Jacob.

42 ¶ And these words of Esau her elder son were told to Rebekah. And she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold, thy brother Esau, as touching thee, doth [l]comfort himself, purposing to kill thee.

43 Now therefore, my son, [m]obey my voice; and arise, flee thou to Laban my brother, to [n]Haran;

44 And tarry with him [o]a few days, until thy brother's fury turn away;

45 Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him: [p]then I will send and fetch thee from thence: [q]why should I be deprived also of you both in one day?[5]

46 And Rebekah said to Isaac, [r]I am weary of my life [s]because of the daughters of Heth: if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?[6]

1 Or rather, God shall give thee; for this may be viewed as a prophecy rather than a prayer; and indeed the prophecy was actually fulfilled in the history of the two nations descended from Jacob and Esau. This whole transaction is very remarkable, and Isaac seems to have spoken with hesitation, & in general terms; but they were such as conveyed the dominion to Jacob; the birthright had been conveyed before.

2 It is difficult for us to estimate the full value & beauty of the blessing here foretold. But in those countries where the rain seldom falls from April to September, and where the sun is powerful, the dews of the night are absolutely necessary for refreshing and sustaining the drooping vegetation. The dews of heaven, the fatness of the earth, & corn and wine are everything that denote abundance and prosperity.

But as he had formerly indicated such profane indifference about the birthright, or spiritual promise and future inheritance, it is probable that the same carnal mind which led to contempt of it, now leads to inordinate sorrow for the loss of temporal dominion and prosperity; and he earnestly entreats that these should be given him.

2 Arise, go to [c]Padan-aram,[1] to the house of Bethuel thy mother's father, and take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of [d]Laban thy mother's brother.

3 And [e]God Almighty bless thee,[2] and [f]make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a multitude of people;[3]

4 And give thee [g]the blessing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art a stranger,[4] [h]which God gave unto Abraham.

5 And Isaac sent away Jacob; and he went to Padan-aram unto Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Esau's mother.

6 ¶ When [i]Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and sent him away to Padan-aram, to take him a wife from thence; and that, as he blessed him, he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan;

7 And [k]that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Padan-aram;

8 And Esau seeing that [l]the daughters of Canaan pleased not[5] Isaac his father;

9 Then went Esau [m]unto Ishmael, and took unto the wives which he had Mahalath[6] the daughter of Ishmael, Abraham's son, the sister of Nebajoth, to be his wife.[7]

10 ¶ And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and [n]went toward Haran.[8]

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set:[9] [o]and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep.[10]

12 And [p]he dreamed, and behold a ladder[q][11] set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

13 And, behold, [r]the LORD stood above it, and said, [s]I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: [t]the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed;

14 And [u]thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth; and thou shalt spread abroad[1] [v]to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: [w]and in thee, and in thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

15 And, behold, [x]I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again unto this land; for I will not leave thee, [y]until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.

16 ¶ And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in this place, [z]and I knew it not.

17 And [a]he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place![2] this is none other but [b]the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

18 And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and [c]set it up for a pillar, and [d]poured oil upon the top of it.[3]

19 And he called [e]the name of that place Beth-el:[4] but the name of that city was called Luz at the first.[5]

20 And Jacob [f]vowed a vow,[6] saying, [g]If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and [h]will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on,

21 So that I come again to my father's house in peace, [i]then shall the LORD be my God:[7]

22 And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be [k]God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me, [l]I will surely give the tenth unto thee.

THEN [a]Jacob went[8] on his journey, and [b]came into the land of the people[9] of the east.[10]

2 And he looked, and behold [c]a well in the field, and, lo, [d]there were three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.

3 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

But it is vouchsafed to us only through Jesus Christ, as 'God manifest in the flesh;' the mediator and advocate for sinners. 10 And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel, the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother, that Jacob went near, [k]and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother.

11 And Jacob [l]kissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, and wept.

12 And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's [m]brother,[5] and that he was Rebekah's son: [n]and she ran and told her father.

13 And it came to pass, when Laban heard the tidings[6] of Jacob his sister's son, that he [o]ran to meet him, and embraced him, and [p]kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told Laban all these things.

14 And Laban said to him, Surely thou [q]art my bone and my flesh.[7] And he abode with him the space of a month.[8]

15 ¶ And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? tell[r] me, what shall thy wages be?

16 And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder [s]was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel.

17 Leah was tender-eyed;[9] but [t]Rachel was [u]beautiful and well favoured.

18 And Jacob [v]loved Rachel; and said, [w]I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.[10]

Wells are of great value in Eastern countries, and kept shut up to prevent the water being wasted, or the well filled up with the shifting sands. 10 It was the custom in these times for the father to receive a portion for his daughter, and as Jacob had none to give, he engages to give an equivalent in seven years' personal service. This custom, according to modern travellers, prevails in the countries of the East to this day. We cannot help thinking that very wise ends in the providence of God, have been served, in illustrating and confirming the Word of God, by the circumstance that the ancient manners and customs of the East have continued so stationary to the present day.

1 Interpreters have wasted much time and pains in endeavouring to ascertain what is intended by the Hebrew word dudaim. The greatest number, however, agree with the ancient versions, rendering it mandrakes, a species of melon. It grows low, like a lettuce, to which its leaves have a great resemblance, except that they have a dark green colour. The flowers are purple, & the root is for the most part forked. The fruit, when ripe in the beginning of May, is of the size and colour of a small apple, exceedingly ruddy, and of a most agreeable odour.—See Harris' Nat. Hist. and Paxton.

2 The desire, by no means improper in itself, though often inordinately entertained by the Jewish women, of being the mother of the promised Seed, & obtaining the blessing of Abraham, seems to have been the main cause of these contentions. The desire of avoiding the reproach of barrenness, together with envy, jealousy, & pride, must have mingled with it.

6 Jacob well knew the covetous and selfish disposition of Laban, and he will rather trust to the blessing of God, on his skill and labour, than enter into any agreement with him. He would have none of the flock that were speckled, & spotted and brown, & yet he was to receive for his hire of such as they should produce; so that it would appear that it was by no dishonesty of his that his share had increased, and God would thus be the judge between them. Laban eagerly seizes upon a proposal that seemed so little likely to benefit Jacob.
o ch. 31. 9.
7 Laban acted with uncommon caution, not only committing those of the flock of the colours for which Jacob had stipulated, to the hands of his sons, but removing Jacob and the flocks he tended, to a distance of three days' journey. The usual way for the wealthy possessors of large flocks in these countries, was to remove from place to place, over wide, and probably unappropriated, pastoral plains & districts of country.
p ch. 31. 9-13.
8 It is amazing what labour is often expended by good men in attempting, on grounds very unsatisfactory indeed, to account by natural causes for effects recorded in the word of God, as brought about by a special, nay even a miraculous interposition of the Almighty; and after all they are obliged to confess their attempts abortive. Such have been some of those made to account for the effect consequent upon Jacob's use of the 'pilled' rods here narrated; while it is plain that the simple state of the case is, that God, who had seen the injustice of Laban, determined to punish him and to reward Jacob; & that when he appeared to him in a dream, ch. 31. 9, and showed him the produce of his flock to be according to his wishes he ordered him to make use of the rod as a trial of his faith, and as a test of his obedience.

1 That is, 'all this riches;' that in which men glory as the source of power and influence, & the means of display. Jacob heard the murmurings, & probably threatenings, of Laban's sons, & he dreaded some mischief, or at least great trouble and disquiet, and he resolved to return to his own country; Laban himself also betrayed his uneasy & suspicious feelings.

3 As I have been with thee hitherto, I will still protect and bless thee. The Chald. Par. has it, 'My WORD shall be for thy aid.' Such an encouragement was both necessary & most comforting to Jacob at such a time. He had many difficulties to encounter whether he returned or remained; & this promise would support him on his journey. We find him pleading it with God, ch. 32. 9, when threatened with the attack of his brother Esau with 400 men.
4 He had probably been absent at some distance with the flocks, & might rather choose to converse with them privately, than in the presence of any of Laban's family.

7 Jacob very truly declares here, that it was by the special interposition and blessing of God, that he was thus enriched, tho' he prudently conceals the means which he employed, probably fearing they might be divulged to any of Laban's family.

the rods, and [q]brought forth cattle ring-straked, speckled, and spotted.

40 And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ring-straked and all the brown in the flock of Laban; and he put his own flocks by themselves; and put them not unto Laban's cattle.

41 And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

42 But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in: so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's.

43 And the man [r]increased exceedingly, and had much cattle, and maid-servants, and men-servants, and camels, and asses.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Jacob upon displeasure departeth secretly, 1—18. Rachel steal-eth her father's images, 19—21. Laban pursueth after him, and com-plaineth of the wrong, 22—33. Rachel's policy to hide the images, 34, 35. Jacob's complaint of Laban, 36—42. The covenant of Laban and Jacob at Galeed, 43—55.

AND he heard the words of Laban's sons, saying, [a]Jacob hath taken away all that was our father's; and of that which was our father's hath he gotten all this [b]glory.[1]

2 And Jacob beheld the [c]countenance of Laban, and, behold, [d]it was not toward him as before.[2]

3 And the LORD said unto Jacob, [e]Return unto [f]the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be with thee.[3]

4 And Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah to the field unto his flock,[4]

5 And said unto them, [g]I see your father's countenance, that it is not toward me as before; but [h]the God of my father hath been with me.

6 And ye know, that [i]with all my power I have served your father.

7 And your father hath deceived me, and changed my wages [k]ten times:[5] but [l]God suffered him not to hurt me.[6]

8 If he said thus, [m]The speckled shall be thy wages; then all the cattle bare speckled: and if he said thus, The ring-straked shall be thy hire; then bare all the cattle ring-straked.

9 Thus [n]God hath taken away the cattle of your father, and given them to me.[7]

10 And it came to pass, at the time that the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in [o] a dream,[1] and, behold, the rams[2] which leaped upon the cattle were ring-straked, speckled, and grisled.

11 And the [p] angel of God[3] spake unto me in a dream, saying, Jacob. And I said, [q] Here am I.

12 And he said, [r] Lift up now thine eyes and see, all the rams which leap upon the cattle are ring-straked, speckled, and grisled:[4] for [s] I have seen all that Laban doeth unto thee.

13 I am [t] the God of Beth-el, where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me: now arise, get thee out from this land, and [u] return unto the land of thy kindred.

14 And Rachel and Leah answered and said unto him, Is there [v] yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house?

15 Are we not counted of him strangers? for he hath [w] sold us, and hath quite devoured also our money.[5]

16 For all the riches which [x] God hath taken from our father, that is ours, and our children's: now then, whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do.

17 ¶ Then Jacob rose up, and set his sons and his wives [y] upon camels:

18 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the cattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Padan-aram, [z] for to go to Isaac his father in the land of Canaan.

19 And Laban went to shear his sheep: and Rachel had stolen the images[6] that were her father's.

20 And Jacob stole away unawares[7] to Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.

21 So he fled with all that he had; and he rose up, and [a] passed over the river,[8] and [b] set his face toward the mount [c] Gilead.

22 And it was told Laban on the third[d] day, that Jacob was fled.

23 And he took his [e] brethren with him, and pursued after him seven days' journey; and they overtook him in the mount Gilead.[9]

24 And God came to Laban [f] the Syrian in a [g] dream by night, and said unto him, [h] Take heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.[1]

25 ¶ Then Laban overtook Jacob. Now Jacob had [i] pitched his tent in the mount: and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gilead.

26 And Laban said to Jacob, [k] What hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and [l] carried away my daughters, as captives taken with the sword?

27 Wherefore [m] didst thou flee away secretly, and steal away from me,[2] and didst not tell me, [n] that I might have sent thee away [o] with mirth, and with songs, with tabret,[3] and with harp?

28 And hast not suffered me to [p] kiss my sons and my daughters? thou hast now done [q] foolishly in so doing.

29 It is in [r] the power of my hand to do you hurt:[4] but [s] the God of your father spake unto me yesternight, saying, [t] Take thou heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

30 And now, though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house, yet wherefore hast thou stolen [u] my gods?

31 And Jacob answered and said to Laban, [v] Because I was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldest take by force thy daughters from me.

32 With [w] whomsoever thou findest thy gods, let him not live: [x] before our brethren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee. [y] For Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen [5] them.

33 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into [z] Leah's tent, and into the two maid-servants' tents; but he found them not. Then went he out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

34 Now Rachel [a] had taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture,[6] and sat upon them. And Laban searched[7] all the tent, but found them not.

35 And she said to her father, Let it not displease [b] my lord that I cannot [c] rise up before thee; for the [d] custom of women is upon me. And he searched, but found not the images.

36 ¶ And Jacob [e] was wroth, and chode with Laban:[8] and Jacob answered and said to Laban, What is my trespass?

5 Or, 'our price.' Laban's whole conduct in reference to Jacob and his daughters, was really a covetous and mercenary matter. He disposed of them for gain as if they had been slaves, and neglected to make any provision or settlement for them, as was customary at the time of marriage. He allowed them neither portion nor inheritance.

6 Heb. teraphim. What these images or teraphim were, seems very uncertain. It is probable they were used something in the way of the Roman household gods, & for purposes of divination, or discovering future events. They seem to have been figures of the human form, or at least with a human head, and of various sizes. From whatever motive Rachel took them, whether of superstition, or covetousness, or benefit to her father, to convince him how vain they were, certain it is it was wrong in her to steal them. 6 The original word has in it the idea of roundness, and Parkhurst therefore says, 'that in Gen.31.34, it seems to denote a large round pannier, such as the ancient Easterns, and particularly the women, sometimes rode in.' From an able note in the Pictorial Bible, we are disposed to think that it was the camel's pack-saddle, which was hollow below, and used often as a seat or cushion to lean on; with a cover (consisting of cloths, carpets, cloaks, &c.) which was used to recline on, & the images were therein concealed. Boothroyd renders it, 'camel's pillow.'

what is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

37 Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household-stuff? [f]set it here before my brethren and thy brethren, that they may judge betwixt us both.

38 This [g]twenty years have I been with thee; thy [h]ewes[1] and thy she-goats have not cast their young, and the [i]rams of thy flock have I not eaten.

39 That which was [k]torn of beasts I brought not unto thee; [l]I bare the loss of it:[2] of my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, [m]or stolen by night.

40 Thus I was; [n]in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night;[3] and my sleep departed from mine eyes.

41 Thus have I been twenty years in thy house: I served thee [o]fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle; and thou hast changed my wages [p]ten times.

42 [q]Except the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and the [r]Fear of Isaac,[4] had been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away now empty. God hath[s] seen mine affliction, and the labour of my hands, and rebuked thee yesternight.

43 ¶ And Laban answered and said unto Jacob, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest is mine: and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have born?[5]

44 Now therefore come thou, [t]let us make a covenant,[6] I and thou; and let it be for [u]a witness between me and thee.

45 And Jacob took a [v]stone, and set it up for a pillar.

46 And Jacob said unto his brethren, [w]Gather stones; and they took stones, and made an heap: and they did eat there upon the heap.[7]

47 And Laban called it Jegar-sahadutha: but Jacob called it Galeed.[8]

48 And Laban said, This heap is a witness between me and thee this day.[9] Therefore was the name of it called Galeed;

49 And Mizpah:[1] for he said, The LORD watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

50 If thou shalt [x]afflict my daughters, or if thou shalt take other wives besides my daughters, no man is with us; see, [y]God is witness betwixt me and thee.

51 And Laban said to Jacob, Behold this heap, and behold this pillar, which I have cast betwixt me and thee;

52 This [z]heap be witness, and this pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap and this pillar unto me, for harm.

53 The [a]God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, [b]judge betwixt us.[2] And Jacob sware by the [c]Fear of his father Isaac.

54 Then Jacob offered sacrifice[3] upon the mount, and called his brethren to eat bread: and they [d]did eat bread, and tarried all night in the mount.

55 And early in the morning Laban rose up, [e]and kissed his sons and his daughters, and [f]blessed them: and Laban departed, [g]and returned unto his place.

2 And when Jacob saw them, he said, This is [b]God's host: and he called [c]the name of that place Mahanaim.[5]

3 ¶ And Jacob sent messengers[6] before him to Esau his brother, unto the land of [d]Seir, the country[7] of [e]Edom.[8]

4 And he commanded them, saying, Thus shall ye speak unto [f]my lord Esau; Thy [g]servant Jacob saith thus, I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed there until now:

5 And [h]I have oxen, and asses, flocks, and men-servants, and women-servants: and I have sent to tell my lord, that I [i]may find grace in thy sight.

6 ¶ And the messengers returned to Jacob, saying, We came to thy brother Esau, and also he cometh to meet thee, [k]and four hundred men with him.

7 We have many instances in the scriptures of setting up tokens of commemorationor of testimony, to certain transactions, or of fixing upon objects previously existing, as witnesses. The word rendered 'heap,' signifies a round heap, and on it they ate in token of amity, and left the stone in token of remembrance of it. The Lord's supper is a feast and memorial of reconciliation and love.
8 Jegar-sahadutha, in the Chaldee or Syriac, and Galeed in the Hebrew, signifying respectively 'the heap of witness;' dialects of the same general language, marking the inhabitants of different regions.

2 There seems to be some ambiguity in Laban's language, respecting the God by whom he sware; for Abraham, and Nahor, and their father Terah, had worshipped other gods in Mesopotamia, Jos. 24. 2; and Laban's expressions in this discourse imply that he was an idolater, and did not worship the true God alone, ver. 29, 30. Jacob therefore, appealed to the God of his father Isaac, who had never been an idolater, that he might not leave it in doubt, to whom he rendered this act of solemn worship.—Scott.

distressed: and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and herds, and the camels, into two bands;

8 And said, [m]If Esau come to the one company, and smite it, then the other company which is left shall escape.[1]

9 ¶ And [n]Jacob said, [o]O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the LORD [p]which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country,[2] and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:

10 I am[3] not [q]worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the [r]truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with [s]my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become [t]two bands.

11 [u]Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and [v]the mother with[4] the children.

12 And [w]thou saidst, [x]I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.

13 ¶ And he lodged there that same night; and took of that [y]which came to his hand[5] [z]a present for Esau his brother;

14 Two [a]hundred she-goats and twenty he-goats, two hundred ewes and twenty rams, 15 Thirty milch camels[6] with their colts, forty kine and ten bulls, twenty she-asses and ten foals.

16 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a space betwixt drove and drove.

17 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When Esau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose[b] art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?

18 Then thou shalt say, They [c]be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and, behold, also he is behind us.

19 And so commanded he the second, and the third,[7] and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau, when ye find him.

20 And say ye moreover, Behold, thy servant Jacob is behind us. For he said, [d]I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face; [e]peradventure he will accept of me.[1]

21 So went the present over before him; and himself lodged that night in the company.

22 And he rose up that night, and took [f]his two wives, and his two women-servants, and his eleven sons, and passed over the ford [g]Jabbok.[2]

23 And he took them, and [3]sent them over the brook, and sent over that he had.

24 ¶ And Jacob was left alone; and there [h]wrestled[4] a [i]man with him until the breaking of the day.[5]

25 And when he saw [k]that he prevailed not against him, he [l]touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him.

26 And he said, [m]Let me go, for the day breaketh. And he said, [n]I will not let thee go, except [o]thou bless me.

27 And he said unto him, [p]What is thy name? And he said, Jacob.

28 And he said, [q]Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel:[6] for as a prince hast thou [r]power with God and [s]with men, and hast prevailed.

29 And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name. And he said, [t]Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he [u]blessed him there.

30 And Jacob[7] called the name of the place Peniel:[8] for [v]I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.

31 And as he passed over Penuel the sun rose upon him, and [w]he halted upon his thigh.

32 Therefore the children of Israel [x]eat not of the sinew which shrank, which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day: because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh in the sinew that shrank.

4 This very wonderful narration is full of interest, & unfolds the way in which God revealed himself to men. Jacob is alone, in prayer and meditation. A Man, one in fashion as a man, 'wrestled' with him, emblematical of the earnestness, vigour, activity, & perseverance of believing prayer in opposition to every difficulty and discouragement. This One, it is said, 'prevailed not,' that is, Jacob did not desist, but refused to take a denial. He with whom he wrestled teaches him that it was not for want of power that he suffers Jacob to prevail. Notwithstanding, Jacob perseveres in demanding a blessing, and succeeds. His name is changed from Jacob to Israel, 'a prince of God.' Jacob is made aware that he who wrestled with him as a man, was God. He therefore called the name of the place Peniel, or, 'the face or countenance of God.' Compare Hos.12.3-6. The references afford a most powerful proof that 'truly this was the Son of God.'

he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two hand-maids.

2 And he put the hand-maids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, [c]and Rachel and Joseph hindermost.[1]

3 And he [d]passed over before them, and [e]bowed himself to the ground seven times,[2] until he came near to his brother.

4 And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced[f] him, and [g]fell on his neck, and kissed him:[3] and they wept.

5 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children; and said, Who are those with thee?[4] And he said, The [h]children which God hath graciously given thy servant.

6 Then the hand-maidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves:

7 And Leah also with her children came near, and bowed themselves:[5] and after came Joseph near and Rachel, and they bowed themselves.

8 And he said, What meanest thou by [i]all this drove which I met?[6] And he said, These are to find grace in the sight of my lord.

9 And Esau said, I have enough,[k] my brother; keep that thou hast unto thyself.[7]

10 And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, [l]if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand;[8] for therefore [m]I have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God,[9] and thou wast pleased with me.

11 Take, I pray thee, [n]my blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, [o]and because I have enough.[10] And he [p]urged him, and he took it.

12 And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us go, and I will go before thee.

13 And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that [q]the children are tender, and the flocks and herds with young are with me: and if men should overdrive them one day, all the flock will die.

14 Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant; and I will lead on softly, according as the cattle that goeth before me and the children[11] [r]be able to endure, until I come unto my lord [s]unto Seir.[1]

15 And Esau said, Let me now leave[2] with thee some of the folk that are with me: And he said, What needeth it?[3] let me [t]find grace in the sight of my lord.

16 ¶ So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir.

17 And Jacob journeyed to [u]Succoth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called Succoth.[4]

18 ¶ And Jacob came to [v]Shalem,[5] a city of [6]Shechem, which is in the land of Canaan, when he came from [w]Padan-aram, and pitched his tent before the city.

19 And he [x]bought a parcel of a field, where he had spread his tent, at the hand of the children of [7]Hamor, Shechem's father, for an hundred pieces of money.[8]

20 And he erected there an [y]altar, and called it, El-elohe-Israel.[9]

wroth, because he had [g]wrought folly in Israel,[1] in lying with Jacob's daughter; which [h]thing ought not to be done.

8 And Hamor communed with them, saying, [i]The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her him to wife.

9 And [k]make ye marriages with us, and give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you.

10 And ye shall dwell with us: [l]and the land shall be before you; dwell and trade you therein, and get you possessions therein.[2]

11 And Shechem said unto her father, and unto her brethren, Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me I will give.

12 Ask me never so much [m]dowry[3] and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me: but give me the damsel to wife.

13 ¶ And the sons of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father [n]deceitfully, and said, because[4] he had defiled Dinah their sister:

14 And they said unto them, We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is [o]uncircumcised; for that were a reproach unto us:[5]

15 But in this will we consent unto you: [p]if ye will be as we be, that every male of you be circumcised;

17 But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised; then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone.

19 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, [q]because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he was more [r]honourable than all the house of his father.

20 ¶ And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto [s]the gate of their city,[6] and communed with the men of their city, saying, 21 These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for the land, behold, it is large enough for them; let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.

22 Only herein [t]will the men consent unto us for to dwell with us, to be one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circumcised.

23 Shall [u]not their cattle, and their substance, and every beast of theirs, be ours? only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us.[1]

24 And unto Hamor, and unto Shechem his son, hearkened all that went out of the gate of his city; and [v]every male was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.

25 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day, when they were [w]sore, that two of the sons of Jacob, [x]Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and slew all the males.[2]

26 And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the edge[3] of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechem's house, and went out.

27 The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and [y]spoiled the city, because [z]they[4] had defiled their sister.

28 They took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field,

29 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives took they captive,[5] and spoiled even all that was in the house.

30 ¶ And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, [a]Ye have troubled me, to make me [b]to stink[6] among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites and the Perizzites: [c]and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me; [d]and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.

31 And they said, [e]Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?[7]

3 The practice of thus purchasing their wives still continues among the Arabs, and for this reason an Arab is happy when he has numerous daughters, and counts them the principal riches of his house. An Arabian suitor will offer fifty sheep, six camels, or a dozen cows; and if not rich enough to make such offer, will propose a young mare or colt, considering in the offer the merit of the young woman, the rank of her family, and his own circumstances.

5 As neither Abraham nor Isaac had daughters, & both Isaac & Jacob had married daughters of uncircumcised persons, and it does not seem that such marriages were at this time forbidden, though the marriage of Abraham's family with idolaters was discountenanced, Jacob's sons might know that the uncircumcised were not in covenant with God, and the sentiment uttered by them was right; but they evidently made a religious consideration a pretence for the more easily and completely effecting their purpose of revenge, and their conduct was deeply hypocritical, and sinful.

2 Simeon and Levi, sons of Leah, were Dinah's brethren by the whole blood. It has not improbably been conjectured, that they were at that time hospitably entertained in Shechem's house; which gave them a fairer opportunity of coming upon the Shechemites, when sore and unprepared, & of effecting this dreadful execution. Though no more of Jacob's sons were concerned in the massacre, perhaps some servants might assist; and it seems that all the rest, without hesitation, concurred in the plunder.—Scott.

2 Then Jacob said [c] unto his household, and to all that were with him, Put away the [d] strange gods that are among you, and be [e] clean, and change your garments:[1]

3 And let us arise, and go up to Beth-el; and I will make there an altar unto God, [f] who answered me in the day of my distress, and [g] was with me in the way which I went.

4 And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hand, and all their [h] ear-rings[2] which were in their ears; and Jacob [i] hid them under the [k] oak which was by Shechem.

5 And they journeyed: and [l] the terror of God[3] was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob.

6 ¶ So Jacob came to [m] Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, that is, Beth-el, he and all the people that were with him.

7 And he [n] built there an altar, and called the place El-beth-el;[4] because there God appeared unto him, when he fled from the face of his brother.

8 But Deborah, [o] Rebekah's nurse, died, and she was buried beneath Beth-el [p] under an oak: and the name of it was called Allon-Bachuth.[5]

9 ¶ And [q] God appeared unto Jacob again, when he came out of Padan-aram, and blessed him.

10 And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob: [r] thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel.

12 And [u] the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land.

13 And [v] God went up from him in the place where he talked with him.

14 ¶ And Jacob [w] set up a pillar in the place where he talked with him, even a pillar of stone; and he poured a drink-offering thereon, and he poured oil thereon.

1 They were to purify themselves outwardly in token of internal purification, by the washing of regeneration, & renewing of the Holy Ghost. They were to put away idolatry, called 'strange gods,' as the idols which were worshipped by the heathen were strangers to the true God and to them, & very probably the images which Rachel stole were among the number. It seems that some of Jacob's family had worshipped these idols; & he had not forbidden or prevented it before.

4 A mountainous tract, extending from the southern extremity of the Dead Sea to the gulf of Acaba, or Eziongeber. The name was probably derived from Seir, the descendant of Hor, and first possessor of the country; see ver. 20; De. 2. 12, 22. Mount Seir is at present known in different parts of its course by the names of Djibal Shera, Djibal Hesma, and El Djibal. It rises abruptly on its western side from the valleys of El Ghor and El Araba; on the east side the plains are much higher. The mean elevation of the chain cannot be estimated at less that 4000 feet. In summer it produces most of the European fruits, while in winter deep snows occasionally fall, with frosts to the middle of March. The inhabitants, like those of most mountainous regions, are very healthy.

7 The word duke is from the Latin Dux, a leader; the word in the Hebrew, which it is here very properly employed to render, has the same signification; but as it denotes also a thousand, a leading number, this leader, or chief, was probably the commander of a thousand men, & came to be employed to denote heads of tribes, or families. The government of such dukes, or chiefs, was the first that prevailed among the Idumeans.

5 This passage has occasioned much difficulty to commentators, as the word translated mules occurs in this sense in no other place. The more general opinion seems to be, that he discovered the method of breeding mules while feeding the asses in the wilderness. The word rendered mule, is rendered by others giants or emim. We are disposed to understand it of waters, and that what he discovered in the wilderness while feeding the asses, was springs of water, a discovery worthy of being noted in such regions; see Clarke, Boothroyd and Pictorial Bible. Bush, Illustrations of Scripture, adds, 'perhaps Anah first observed the faculty with which the ass is endued of snuffing the moisture of the air, and being by these means led to latent waters.' This most beneficial discovery is here recorded; and hence he supposes arose the great veneration the Horites had for this animal. The sons of princes were wont, in ancient times, to follow the employment of feeding the asses. Saul was sent to seek his father's asses.

10 It is not certain whether these kings were the descendants of Esau or of Seir. The word king being different from that of duke, and having a distinctive definite meaning, it is probable that after several dukes had governed the Edomites, their government was afterwards changed into a monarchy.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Joseph is hated of his brethren, 2—4. His two dreams, 5—12. Jacob sendeth him to visit his brethren, 13—17. His brethren conspire his death, but Reuben saveth him, 18—25. They sell him to the Ishmaelites, 26—30. His father, deceived by the bloody coat, mourneth for him, 31—35. He is sold to Potiphar in Egypt, 36.

AND Jacob dwelt in the land wherein his father was a stranger,[5] in the land of Canaan.

2 These are [a]the generations[6] of Jacob. Joseph, being seventeen years old, was feeding the flock with his brethren; and the lad was with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's wives:[b] and Joseph brought unto his father their [c]evil report.[7]

3 Now Israel loved Joseph more than all his children, because he was the [d]son of his old age:[8] and he made him [e]a coat of many colours.[9]

1 Bozrah, Bezer, or Bostra, was situated in Arabia Deserta, and the eastern part of Edom, 24 miles from Ederi. It afterwards belonged to Moab, and was given by Moses to Reuben, but again reverted to Edom. It is now called Bostra; & according to Burckhardt, is, including its ruins, the largest town in the Haouran, though only inhabited by about 12 or 15 families. It lies in the open plain, 2 hours distant from Aare. & is at present the last inhabited place in the south-east extremity of the Haouran: its greatest length is from east to west, and its circumference 3-4ths of an hour. Some of the ruins are described as very beautiful, and among them are found Cufic, Greek, and Roman inscriptions.

6 If this word is to be understood in its common acceptation, it is to be taken as connected with the latter end of ch. 35, and with ch. 36, which give the genealogy of Jacob and Esau; or if understood to refer to what follows, it must mean the history of the lives and actions of Jacob and his sons. Probably the former meaning is to be preferred; and the history then proceeds with the family of Jacob, and especially of Joseph, who is now for a long time the chief object of interest.

2 They themselves interpreted the dream, and while wickedly endeavouring to prevent its fulfilment, they were actually accomplishing it. Thus the Jews, understanding the parables of our Lord, fulfilled them by the very hatred and malice which prompted them to destroy him. 'Their hatred (that of Joseph's brethren towards him) had originated in religion, and the thought of God having determined to honour him, provoked them the more. 4 And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they [f]hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.[1]

5 ¶ And Joseph [g]dreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren: and they hated him yet the more.

6 And he said unto them, [h]Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed:

7 For, behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and, lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and, behold, [i]your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

8 And his brethren said to him, [k]Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? And they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.[2]

9 ¶ And he dreamed yet [l]another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more; and, behold, [m]the sun, and the moon, and the eleven stars, made obeisance to me.[3]

10 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked him,[4] and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? [n]Shall I, and thy mother, and thy brethren, indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?

11 And his brethren [o]envied him; but his father [p]observed the saying.

12 ¶ And his brethren went to feed their father's flock [q]in Shechem.

13 And Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem? [r]come, and I will send thee unto them. And he said to him, [s]Here am I.

14 And he said to him, Go, I pray thee, see whether it be well with thy brethren,[5] and well with the flocks; and bring me word again. So he sent him out of the vale of [t]Hebron, and he came to Shechem.[6]

15 And a certain man found him, and, behold, [u]he was wandering[7] in the field: and the man asked him, saying, [v]What seekest thou?

17 And the man said, They are departed hence; for I heard them say, Let us go to [z]Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan.

18 And when they saw him afar off, even before he came near unto them, they[y] conspired against him[1] to slay him.

19 And they said one to another, Behold, this dreamer cometh.[2]

20 Come now therefore, [z]and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit; and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: [a]and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

21 And [b]Reuben heard it, and he delivered him out of their hands; and said, Let us not kill him.

22 And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they [c]stripped Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours,[3] that was on him;

24 And they took him, and cast him into a pit: and [d]the pit was empty,[4] there was no water in it.

25 And [e]they sat down to eat bread: and they lifted up their eyes, and looked, and, behold, a company of [f]Ishmaelites came from [g]Gilead, with their camels bearing spicery, and balm, and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.[5]

26 And Judah said unto his brethren, What[h] profit is it if we slay our brother, and [i]conceal his blood?

27 Come, and let us [k]sell him to the Ishmaelites, and [l]let not our hand be upon him; for he is [m]our brother, and our flesh: and his brethren were content.[6]

28 Then there passed [n]by Midianites, merchant-men; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, and sold[o] Joseph to the Ishmaelites for twenty pieces of silver:[7] and they brought Joseph into Egypt.

29 ¶ And Reuben returned unto the pit; and, behold, Joseph was not in the pit; and [p]he rent his clothes.

30 And he returned unto his brethren, and said, [q]The child is not; and I, whither shall I go?[1]

31 And they took [r]Joseph's coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood:

32 And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father; and said, This have we found: know now whether it be [s]thy son's coat or no.

33 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat; an [t]evil beast hath devoured him: Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces.

34 And Jacob [u]rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days.[2]

35 And all his sons, and all his daughters, [v]rose up to comfort him; but he refused to be comforted: and he said, [w]For I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning. Thus his father wept for him.

Their ironical allusion to his dreams showed they dreaded they might be true, otherwise they might have passed them by as idle tales. Joseph is in this instance also a type of Christ; & the conduct of his brethren suggests the recollection of those of whom Christ said, 'Now have they both seen & hated both me and my Father,' John 15. 24.

5 These were descendants of Ishmael, Midian, Medan, and the other sons of Abraham by Keturah, who had by this time increased greatly in numbers. They were engaged in a traffic in gums and spiceries, the peculiar productions of their country; and were carrying them down into Egypt, which had long been the centre of the land commerce of the East. It seems to be the very same as those caravans that traverse these countries to the present day. Egypt continued long not only to supply these countries with its own peculiar productions in return for theirs, but to be the channel between India and other oriental countries, of the rich commerce carried on with the civilized states of Europe. The discovery of the passage to India by the Portuguese, first turned this commerce out of its ancient channels.

marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother.[1]

9 And Onan knew that the seed should not be his: and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, [t]lest that he should give seed to his brother.

10 And the thing which he did displeased the LORD:[2] wherefore he slew him also.[3]

11 Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter-in-law, Remain a widow at thy father's house, [k]till Shelah my son be grown: (for he said, Lest peradventure he die also, as his brethren did.) And Tamar went and dwelt in her father's house.

12 ¶ And, in process of time,[4] the daughter of Shuah, Judah's wife, died: and Judah was [l]comforted, and went up unto his [m]sheep-shearers to Timnath,[5] he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite.

13 And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold, thy father-in-law goeth up to Timnath[6] to shear his sheep.

14 And she put her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a veil, and wrapped herself, [n]and sat in an open place,[7] which is by the way to Timnath: for she saw [o]that Shelah was grown, and she was not given unto him to wife.

15 When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; because she had covered her face.[8]

16 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee; (for he knew not that she was his daughter-in-law.) And she said, [p]What wilt thou give me,[9] that thou mayest come in unto me?

17 And he said, [q]I will send thee a kid from the flock.[10] And she said, [r]Wilt thou give me a pledge till thou send it?

18 And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, [s]Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand: and he [t]gave it her, and came in unto her; and she conceived by him.

19 And she arose, and went away, and [u]laid by her veil from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood.

20 And Judah sent the kid by the hand of [v]his friend the Adullamite, to receive his pledge from the woman's hand; but he found her not.

1 The custom of marrying a brother's widow, when he died childless, seems to have been traditional before it became a written law; and the first-born from such marriages was accounted the child of the deceased, adopted into his family, and so became his heir.

3 The sin of Onan was double: his refusal and the manner of effecting it. 'Onan's habitual conduct, (for this is meant,) was not only unnatural and detestable in itself, but full of envy & malice, and not without something of the nature of murder in it: for the same principle would have induced him to murder a child born to him, but accounted his brother's, if he could have done it with impunity. It implied also a contempt of the promise of a numerous posterity, made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and of that Seed especially in whom all nations "should be blessed."'—Scott.

3 In primitive times, both in the East and West, as among the Greeks and Romans, and other western nations, the father was not only ruler and judge, but had the power of life & death in his own family—a power which was often cruelly abused. The crime of Tamar was adultery, she being betrothable to Shelah, and considered his wife. And this crime was punishable by death. But Judah was guilty of excessive severity in intending to burn her in her situation. This fearful punishment was often barbarously inflicted for the supposed crime of heresy. In the notes to the Pictorial Bible, it is said, 'by all parties.' This is overstated, as were easy to show, in reference to this country.

4 He occasioned her sin, tempted to it, and was partner in it. Not less to blame, but more righteous. Among the Garrows if a man dies, his wife marries one of his brothers, and failing brethren, or in case of their death, she marries his father. If a custom such as this prevailed among the Canaanites, it is clear that Tamar acted on this principle; Shelah not being given to her, she considered him 'as dead,' and married 'his father;' she might in reality have contracted a sort of marriage with Judah, by receiving his pledges, as we find the fourth form of marriage in the Gentoo code of laws, consists in the interchange of 'necklaces and strings of flowers.' and he was a prosperous man; and he was in the [d]house of his master the Egyptian.

3 And his master [e]saw that the LORD was with him, and that the LORD made all that he did to [f]prosper in his hand.

4 And Joseph [g]found grace in his sight, and he served him: and he made him [h]overseer over his house, and all that he had he had put into his hand.

5 And it came to pass, from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for[i] Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field.

6 And he [k]left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not ought he had, save the bread which he did eat:[1] and Joseph was [l]a goodly person, and well-favoured.

7 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife [m]cast her eyes upon Joseph; and she said, [n]Lie with me.

8 But he [o]refused; and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master wotteth not what is with me in the house, and he hath committed all that he hath to my hand:

9 There is [p]none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife: [q]how then can I do this great wickedness, and [r]sin against God?[2]

10 And it came to pass, as she spake to Joseph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, [s]or to be with her.

11 And it came to pass, about this time, that Joseph went into the house to do his business; and there was [t]none of the men of the house there within.

12 And she [u]caught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me: [v]and he left his garment[3] in her hand, and fled, and got him out.

13 And it came to pass, when she saw that he had left his garment in her hand, and was fled forth,

14 That she called unto the men of her house, and spake unto them, saying, See, he hath brought in [w]an Hebrew unto us to mock us; [x]he came in unto me to lie with me, and I cried with a loud[1] voice:

15 And it came to pass, when he heard that I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled, and got him out.

16 And she [y]laid up his garment by her until his lord came home.[2]

17 And she spake unto him according to these words, saying, [z]The Hebrew servant, which thou hast brought unto us, came in unto me to mock me:

18 And it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled out.

19 And it came to pass, when his master [a]heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did thy servant to me; that [b]his wrath was kindled.

20 And Joseph's master took him, and put him [c]into the prison, a place where [d]the king's prisoners were[3] bound: and he was there in the prison.

21 ¶ But [e]the LORD was with Joseph,[4] and shewed him mercy,[5] and [f]gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

22 And the keeper of the prison [g]committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it.

23 The [h]keeper of the prison looked not to any thing that was under his hand; [i]because the LORD was with him, and that which he did, the LORD made it to prosper.

AND [a]it came to pass after these things, that [b]the butler of the king of Egypt and his baker had offended their lord,[6] the king of Egypt.

2 And Pharaoh was [c]wroth against two of his officers, against [d]the chief of the butlers,[7] and against the chief of the bakers.

2 This conduct of Joseph is most admirable for wisdom and piety, and every good, honourable, and pure feeling. 'Comparing his conduct with that of Judah, Reuben, and the other sons of Jacob, it must be allowed, that he had justly the preference in his father's esteem. Nor was this refusal more worthy of admiration, than the manner of it. The calmness of his spirit, the force of his arguments, the generosity and delicacy, as well as piety, of his sentiments, are most beautiful. His master's kindness to him, the honourable station which he held in his family, the peculiar relation in which his tempter stood to his generous benefactor, the greatness of the injustice and ingratitude to him; but above all, the greatness of the wickedness in the sight of God, whose authority and displeasure he was not ashamed to mention to this adulterous woman.'—Scott. All this ought to have filled her with respect and admiration of the youth, and reverence for his God.

2 The whole of the conduct of this woman betrays an artful and corrupted heart, such as betrayed herdisappointment,rage, and revenge, and great cunning in her attempts to gratify them, besides gross falsehood and cruelty. In all probability Joseph's master never once condescended to speak to him on the subject, much less to hear his explanation or justification. Power is haughty and tyrannical. It is remarkable that Joseph was not at once put to death. But 'God was with Joseph.' Perhaps too the laws required his trial.

9 Joseph was confined in a dungeon, 'bound' in fetters. These men were also thus treated. So were Paul & Silas, Ac.16.25. How different their feelings from those of these poor Egyptians.

4 And [f]the captain of the guard charged Joseph with them,[1] and he served them; and they continued a season in ward.

5 ¶ And [g]they dreamed a dream both of them, each man his dream in one night, each man according to the interpretation of his dream, the butler and the baker of the king of Egypt, which were bound in the prison.

6 And Joseph came in unto them in the morning, and looked upon them, and, [h]behold, they were sad.

7 And he asked[2] Pharaoh's officers, that were with him in the ward of his lord's house, saying, [i]Wherefore[3] look ye so sadly to-day?

8 And they said unto him, We have dreamed a dream, and there is no interpreter of it.[4] And Joseph said unto them, [k]Do not interpretations belong to God? tell me them, I pray you.

9 And the chief butler told his dream to Joseph, and said unto him, In my dream, behold, [l]a vine was before me;

10 And in the vine were three branches: and it was as though it budded, and her blossoms shot forth; and the clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes:

11 And Pharaoh's cup was in my hand: and I took the grapes, and pressed them into Pharaoh's cup, and I gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand.

12 And Joseph said unto him, [m]This is the interpretation of it: [n]The three branches are three days.

13 Yet within three days [o]shall Pharaoh lift up thine head,[5] and restore thee unto thy place; and thou shalt deliver Pharaoh's cup into his hand, after the former manner when thou wast his butler.[6]

14 But think[7] [p]on me when it shall be well with thee, and [q]shew kindness, I pray thee, unto me; and make mention of me unto Pharaoh, and bring me out of this house:

15 For indeed I was [r]stolen away out of the land of [s]the Hebrews; and here also have I [t]done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon.[8]

16 When [u]the chief baker saw that the interpretation was good, he said unto Joseph, I also was in my dream, and, behold, I had three white [1]baskets on my head.

17 And in the uppermost basket there was of all manner of [2]bake-meats for Pharaoh; and the birds did eat them out of the basket upon my head.

18 And Joseph answered and said, This is the interpretation thereof: [v]The three baskets are three days.

19 Yet [w]within three days shall Pharaoh lift up thy head[3] from off [4]thee, and shall [x]hang thee on a tree; [y]and the birds shall eat thy flesh from off thee.

20 ¶ And it came to pass the third day, which was Pharaoh's [z]birth-day, that he made a feast unto all his servants: and he lifted[5] up the head of the chief butler and of the chief baker among his servants.

21 And he restored the chief butler unto his butlership again; and he [a]gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand:

22 But [b]he hanged the chief baker, as Joseph had interpreted to them.

23 Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, [c]but forgat him.[6]

CHAPTER XLI.

Pharaoh's two dreams, 1—24. Joseph interpreteth them, 25—32. He giveth Pharaoh counsel, 33—37. Joseph is advanced, 38—49. He begetteth Manasseh and Ephraim, 50—53. The famine beginneth, 54—57.

AND it came to pass, at the end of two full years,[7] [a]that Pharaoh dreamed; and, behold, he stood by [b]the river.[8]

2 And, behold, [c]there came up out of the river seven well-favoured kine,[9] and fat-fleshed; and they fed in a meadow.

3 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill-favoured, and lean-fleshed; and stood by the other kine upon the brink of the river.

4 And the ill-favoured and lean-fleshed kine did eat up the seven well-favoured and fat kine. So Pharaoh awoke.

5 And he slept, and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank[10] and good.

6 And, behold, seven thin ears, and [d]blasted with the east-wind, sprung up after them.

7 And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears. And Pharaoh awoke, and, behold, it was a dream.

8 And it came to pass in the morn-

1 It is very likely that by this time Potiphar was not only convinced of Joseph's prudence and abilities, but of his innocence of the matter laid to his charge; and his prisoners being persons of some note, Joseph is intrusted with the care of them. 'On how many little incidents of which the parties at the time think nothing, do some of the greatest events depend. . . . He that appoints the end, appoints the means that lead to it.'—Fuller.

4 The prisoners could not consult the diviners, in whom they placed confidence; & this added to their anxiety. Joseph's apposite question intimates, that he had before discoursed with them concerning the true God, and endeavoured to draw them off from these lying vanities to his worship & service.

6 The rapid budding and blossoming of the vine, & ripening of the grapes, seems to have fixed the interpretation to three days, rather than weeks, months, or years: and the actual delivery of the cup into Pharaoh's hand obviously denoted a prosperous event. 8 Joseph is naturally anxious for his liberty, and though he knew and believed that all things were in the hand of God, yet he here avails himself of the opportunity presented to him of apparently gaining his end. The event, however, illustrated the truth of the saying of scripture, 'The lot is cast into the lap, but the disposal thereof is of the Lord.'

4 It must have been very painful to the tender & delicate heart of Joseph to communicate this interpretation. 7 'Two years of days;' that is, two complete solar revolutions, or two full years. Joseph must have been a considerable time in prison before this. Two years more are added to his confinement; but God brings him out with great honour as a benefactor to Egypt & its king, rather than as a debtor to the favour of one of his officers.

8 The river Nile. The scene was very suitable for such a dream, seeing the annual overflowing of that river caused the fertility and abundance of Egypt, & the failure of it was followed by famine or scarcity. The rising of the Nile was an event of great importance, anticipated with great interest, & observed with rejoicing. The Nile was the object of religious veneration; see note ch. 5. 29.

9 The ox in Egypt was symbolical of agriculture & subsistence, and the application in the dream is very apparent; and moreover, animals of that kind betake themselves to the water in hot weather. 'This may be often witnessed in the Nile; and the writer has also seen it in the Tigris, & other rivers of Asia.'—Pict. Bible. It may be seen in summer in our own country.

ng, that [e]his spirit was troubled; and e sent and called for all the [f]magicians[1] of Egypt, and all [g]the wise men thereof:
nd Pharaoh told them his dreams; [h]but here was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.

9 ¶ Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, [i]I do remember my faults this day:[2]

10 Pharaoh was wroth with his servants, and put me in ward in the captain of the guard's house, both me and he chief baker:

11 And we [k]dreamed a dream in one night, I and he: we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

12 And there was there with us a young man, an Hebrew, [l]servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, nd he [m]interpreted to us our dreams:
o each man according to his dream he id interpret.

13 And it came to pass, as he interreted to us, so it was;[3] [n]me he restored nto mine office, and him he hanged.

14 ¶ Then Pharaoh [o]sent and called oseph, [p]and they brought him hastily[4] ut of the dungeon: and [q]he shaved imself,[5] and changed his raiment, and ame in unto Pharaoh.

15 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is one that can interpret it: and [r]I have heard say of thee, that thou canst understand a dream[6] to interpret it.

16 And Joseph answered Pharaoh, saying, [s]It is not in me: God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace.[7]

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, [t]my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river:

18 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, [u]fat-fleshed, and well-favoured; and they fed in a meadow:[8]

19 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor, and very ill-favoured, and lean-fleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness:

20 And the lean and the ill-favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine.

21 And when they had eaten them up,[9] it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill-favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke.

22 And I saw in my dream, and, behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good:

23 And, behold, seven ears, withered, thin,[1] [v]and blasted with the east wind,[2] sprung up after them:

24 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears. And I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it to me.

25 ¶ And Joseph said unto Pharaoh,
The dream of Pharaoh is one: [w]God hath shewed Pharaoh what he is about to do.[3]

26 The seven good kine are seven years; and the seven good ears are [x]seven years: [y]the dream is one.

27 And the seven thin and ill-favoured kine that came up after them, are seven years: and the seven empty ears, blasted with the east wind, shall be seven years of famine.

28 This is the thing which I have spoken[4] unto Pharaoh: [z]What God is about to do he sheweth unto Pharaoh.

29 Behold, there come seven years of great plenty[5] throughout all the land of Egypt:

30 And there shall arise after them
[a]seven years of famine; and all the plenty [b]shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt; and the famine shall [c]consume the land:

31 And the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine following; for it shall be very grievous.[6]

32 And for that the dream was [d]doubled[7] unto Pharaoh twice; [e]it is because the thing is established by [8]God, and God will shortly bring it to pass.

33 Now [f]therefore let Pharaoh [g]look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of Egypt.

34 Let Pharaoh do this, and let him appoint officers[9] over the land, [k]and take up the fifth part of the land of Egypt in the seven plenteous years.

35 And let them [i]gather all the food of those good years that come, and lay up corn under the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities.

36 And that food shall be for store

5 Though a preparation natural enough to us, we do not expect it to be so noticed in a Jew or an Eastern, generally, as they were in the habit of wearing the beard; but it very singularly confirms the exact truth of the scripture narrative, as the Egyptians were singular in cutting the beard, while in other nations it was carefully preserved, and the loss of it esteemed a great disgrace. 2 In Egypt, this wind is particularly destructive. It comes thro' the parched deserts of Arabia, often destroying numbers of human beings. The terrible effects of the Simoom, are mentioned by almost all travellers. This pestilence advances with great rapidity, its approach is indicated by redness in the air; when near, it appears like a haze, in colour resembling the purple parts of the rainbow, but not so dense. The principal stream of the blast moves in a line about 20 yards in breadth, and 12 feet above the surface of the earth; but its parching effects spread to a considerable distance. The only possible means of escape from its fatal influence, is to fall flat on the face on the ground, till the blast pass over. Camels, and other animals, instinctively perceive its approach, and bury their mouths and nostrils in the sand. It seldom lasts more than 7 or 8 minutes, but its poisonous breath instantly suffocates those who inhale it.

When lower than this, the waters do not overflow the whole ground; when higher, they are too long in running off. to the land against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt; [k]that the land perish not[1] through the famine.[2]

37 ¶ And [l]the thing was [m]good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.[3]

38 And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man [n]in whom the Spirit of God is?

39 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as [o]God hath shewed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art:

40 Thou [p]shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled:[4] only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

41 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See,[q] I have set thee over all the land of Egypt.

42 And Pharaoh took off [r]his ring[5] from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and arrayed him in vestures of fine linen,[6] and put [s]a gold chain about his neck:

43 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, Bow the knee:[7] and he made him [t]ruler over all the land of Egypt.

44 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh,[8] and without thee shall no man [u]lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

45 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphnath-paaneah; and he gave him to wife Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah priest[9] of On.[10] And Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt.

46 ¶ (And Joseph was [v]thirty years old when [w]he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt.) And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt.

47 And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by [x]handfuls.

48 And [y]he gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

49 And Joseph gathered corn [z]as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering: for it was without number.

50 And [a]unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came; which [b]Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah priest[1] of On, bare unto him.

51 And Joseph [c]called the name of the first-born Manasseh:[2] for God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house.

52 And the name of the second [d]called he Ephraim:[3] for God hath caused me to be fruitful in [e]the land of my affliction.[4]

53 ¶ And [f]the seven years of plenteousness that was in the land of Egypt were ended.

54 And [g]the seven years of dearth began to come, [h]according as Joseph had said: [i]and the dearth was in all lands;[5] but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

55 And when all the land of Egypt was [k]famished,[6] the people cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, [l]Go unto Joseph;[7] what he saith to you, do.

56 And the famine was over all [m]the face of the earth.[8] And Joseph opened all the store-houses,[9] and [n]sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

57 And [o]all countries[10] came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore [p]in all lands.

CHAPTER XLII.

Jacob sendeth his ten sons to buy corn in Egypt, 1—5. They are imprisoned by Joseph for spies, but set at liberty on condition to bring Benjamin, 6—20. They have remorse for Joseph, 21—23. Simeon is kept for a pledge, 24. They return with corn, and their money, 25—28. Their relation to Jacob, 29—34. He is afraid, and refuseth to send Benjamin, 35—38.

NOW [a]when Jacob [b]saw that there was corn in Egypt, Jacob said unto his sons, [c]Why do ye look one upon another?[11]

2 And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt: [d]get you down thither, and buy for us from thence; [e]that we may live, and not die.

3 ¶ And Joseph's [f]ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

4 But [g]Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren: for he said, [h]Lest peradventure mischief befall him.[12]

3 The advice was as safe as it was sound, & no great harm could arise from following it. Pharaoh was so convinced that Joseph was aided by divine wisdom in interpreting his dream, and so superior to all his magicians & wise men, and had given such fit and valuable counsel, that he concludes justly that the Spirit of God was in him; and thus, after Joseph, gives the honour to whom it was due. The Egyptians, overawed by the evident interposition of God, readily consent to the elevation of Joseph; though a stranger and a slave.

5 And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: [i]for the famine was in the land of Canaan.

6 And Joseph was the [k]governor over the land, and [l]he it was that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came, and [m]bowed down themselves before him[1] with their faces to the earth.

7 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly unto them;[2] and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, From the land of Canaan to buy food.

8 And Joseph knew his brethren, but[n] they knew not him.

9 And Joseph [o]remembered the dreams[3] which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, [p]Ye are spies; to see the [q]nakedness of the land ye are come.

10 And they said unto him, Nay, my[r] lord; but to buy food are thy servants come.

11 We are all one man's sons: we are [s]true men, thy servants are no spies.

12 And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

13 And they said, [t]Thy servants are twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan; and, behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and [u]one is not.[4]

14 And Joseph said unto them, That[v] is it that I spake unto you, saying, Ye are spies.

15 Hereby ye shall be proved: [w]by the life of Pharaoh[5] ye shall not go forth hence, [x]except your youngest brother come hither.

16 Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be kept[6] in prison, [y]that your words may be proved, whether there be any truth in you: or else, by the life of Pharaoh, surely ye are spies.

17 And he put[7] them all together into [z]ward three days.

18 And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live; for [a]I fear God.

19 If ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in the [b]house of your prison: go ye, [c]carry corn for the famine of your houses:

20 But [d]bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. [e]And they did [1]so.

21 ¶ And [f]they said one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that [g]we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is [h]this distress come upon us.[2]

22 And Reuben answered them, saying, [i]Spake I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child? and ye would not hear; therefore, behold, also [k]his blood is required.[3]

23 And they knew not that Joseph understood them: for he spake unto them by an interpreter.[4]

24 And he turned himself about from them, and [l]wept; and returned to them again, and communed with them, and took from them [m]Simeon, and bound him before their eyes.

25 ¶ Then Joseph [n]commanded to fill their sacks with corn, and to restore every man's money into his sack, and [o]to give them provision for the way: [p]and thus did he unto them.

26 And they laded their asses with the corn, and departed thence.

27 And as one of them opened his sack, to give his ass provender in [q]the inn,[5] he espied his money; for, behold, it was in his sack's mouth.

28 And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and, lo, it is even in my sack: and [r]their heart failed them,[6] and they were afraid, saying one to another, [s]What is this that God hath done unto us?

29 ¶ And they came unto Jacob their father unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that befell unto them; saying,

30 The man, who is the lord of the land, spake roughly to us,[7] and took us for spies of the country.

31 And we said unto him, We are true men; we are no spies.

32 We be twelve brethren, sons of our father: one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan.

1 Joseph was doubtless a person of great prudence & activity, and there might be a special permission necessary for selling corn to strangers. They might be required to appear before himself. Here his dream is remarkably fulfilled, his brethren's sheaf bowing down to his.
2 Heb. hard things with them, ver. 14-17, 19, 20; Mat. 15. 23-26. He did so evidently for the purpose of trying them, and having an opportunity of impressing their minds with a sense of their former guilt, making them feel the evils of adversity, and bringing them to a right mind. By making himself strange to them, he might have better opportunities of getting at the real state of his father's family. His anxiety on this point showed his tenderness and regard for them from the first. He was only 17 years of age when his brethren sold him. He is now 38. Twenty years would make a great alteration on his appearance at such a time of life, and surrounded with the trappings and retinue of his rank, he could easily conceal himself from them, especially as he spake by an interpreter, (ver. 23.)

5 Travellers in the East are not, nor ever were accommodated at inns on the road, after the manner of European nations. The khan or caravansara is seldom more than four bare walls, open at top, and perfectly exposed; if there are cells, nothing is found but bare walls, dust, and sometimes scorpions, the only refreshment being the water generally found in the vicinity; nor are even these empty mansions always to be met with. But in the deserts such as Joseph's brethren had to pass, these buildings are invaluable; in those pathless plains, for many miles together, not a tree, a bush, nor even a blade of grass is to be seen; all is one undulating mass of sand, like the waves of the trackless ocean. In these ruthless wastes, where no rural village or cheerful hamlet, no inn or house of refreshment is to be found, how noble is the charity that rears the hospitable roof, that plants the shady grove, & conducts the refreshing moisture into reservoirs. It is probable, however, that even these were not in use at this early period.

CHAPTER XLIII.

Jacob is hardly persuaded to send Benjamin, 1—14. Joseph entertaineth his brethren, 15—25. He maketh them a feast, 26—34.

AND [a]the famine was sore in the land.

2 And it came to pass, when they had eaten up the corn which they had brought out of Egypt, their father said unto them, [b]Go again, buy us a little food.

3 And Judah spake unto him, saying, The [c]man did solemnly protest[4] unto us, saying, Ye shall not [d]see my face, except your brother be with you.

4 If thou wilt send our brother with us, we will go down and buy thee food:

5 But if thou wilt not send him, we will[e] not go down: for the man said unto us, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

6 And Israel said, Wherefore dealt ye so ill with me, as to tell the man whether ye had yet a brother?

1 Their father might apprehend some treachery or evil design, and could not but dread that mischief was determined upon Benjamin as upon Joseph. His sons were obviously under the impression that there was some secret design to bring them into distress and danger, and that it was a just judgment of God upon their wickedness and cruelty to their brother. For, when the money of one them is found in his sack, they say, as in ver. 28. A guilty conscience terrified them. This was the effect Joseph wished to produce in them.

2 Probably Jacob suspected a fallacy in the relation, and feared lest his sons had really committed some base crime, which was the cause of Simeon's being left behind; & perhaps that they had some design upon Benjamin; at least he charged the blame upon them in language implying such distrust. All these things lay as a heavy burden upon him, which he thought his sons but little felt. Jacob made this lamentation, when, had he known all, his heart would have exulted with joy.—Me have ye bereaved, &c.
[x] ch. 43. 9; 44. 32-34; Mic. 6. 7.
3 All this was spoken by Reuben very unadvisedly and foolishly. He had no power that could secure the return out of Egypt of any of his brethren; and it could be no alleviation, but on the contrary, a great aggravation, of the grief of his father, to lose his grand-children, supposing, as was not the case, that Reuben had a right thus to dispose of his children. But it was in all probability, tho' not avowed, yet a passionate assurance to his father that they had no evil designs to Benjamin, of which he would soon perceive his father to be suspicious.

14 This was a procedure altogether unusual, and a guilty conscience suspected danger and evil determined, & that he was evidently seeking some cause of quarrel with them.

7 And they said, The man asked[1] us straitly of our state, and of our kindred, saying, Is your father yet alive? have ye another brother? And we told him according to the tenor[2] of these words. Could we certainly know[3] that he would say, Bring your brother down?[4]

8 And Judah said unto Israel his father, Send the lad with me, and we will arise and go; [f]that we may live, and not die, both we, and thou, and [g]also our little ones.

9 I [h]will be surety for him; [i]of my hand shalt thou require him: If I bring him not unto thee, and set him before thee, then let me bear the blame for ever:[5]

10 For except we had [k]lingered, surely now we had returned this second time.[6]

11 And their father Israel said unto them, [l]If it must be so now, do this; take of the best fruits in the land in your vessels, and [m]carry down the man a present, [n]a little balm, and a little honey, [o]spices and myrrh, nuts and almonds.[7]

12 And take [p]double money in your hand; and the money that was brought again in the [q]mouth of your sacks, carry it again in your hand; peradventure it was an oversight.

13 Take also your brother, and arise, go again unto the man:

14 And [r]God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may send away your other brother, and Benjamin. If I[8] be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved.[9]

15 ¶ And the men took that present, and they took double money in their hand, and Benjamin; and rose up, and went down to Egypt, and stood before Joseph.[10]

16 And when Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to [s]the ruler of his house, Bring these men home,[11] and slay,[12] and make ready: for these men shall dine[13] with me at noon.

17 And the man did as Joseph bade; and the man brought the men into Joseph's house.

money that was returned in our sacks at the first time are we brought in; that he may seek occasion against us,[1] and fall upon us, and take us for bondmen, and our asses.

19 ¶ And they came near to the steward of Joseph's house, and they communed with him at the door of the house,

20 And said, O sir, we came indeed[2] down at the first time to buy food:

21 And it came to pass, when [u]we came to the inn, that we opened our sacks, and, behold, every man's money was in the mouth of his sack, our money in full weight; and [v]we have brought it again in our hand.

22 And other money have we brought down in our hands to buy food: we cannot tell who put our money in our sacks.

23 And he said, [w]Peace be to you, fear not; your God, and the God of your father, hath given you treasure in your sacks:[3] I had your money.[4] [x]And he brought Simeon out unto them.

24 And the man brought the men into Joseph's house, and [y]gave them water, and they washed their feet; and he gave their asses provender.

25 And [z]they made ready the present against Joseph came at noon: for they heard that they should eat bread there.

26 ¶ And when Joseph came home, they brought him the present which was in their hand into the house, and bowed[a] themselves to him[5] to the earth.

27 And he asked them of their welfare,[6] and said, Is your father well,[7] [b]the old man of whom ye spake? Is he yet alive?[8]

28 And they answered, Thy servant our father is in good health, he is yet alive: [c]and they bowed down their heads, and [d]made obeisance.

29 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw his brother Benjamin, his [e]mother's son, and said, Is this your younger brother, [f]of whom ye spake unto me? And he said, God be gracious unto thee, [g]my son.[9]

30 And Joseph made haste; for [h]his bowels did yearn upon his brother: and he sought where to weep; and he entered into his chamber, and [i]wept there.

31 And he washed his face, and went out, and [k]refrained himself, and said, Set on bread.[1]

32 And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians which did eat with him by themselves: because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews; for that is [l]an abomination unto the Egyptians.[2]

33 And they [m]sat before him, the first-born according to his birth-right, and the youngest according to his youth: and the men marvelled one at [3]another.

34 And he took and sent [n]messes unto them from before him: but Benjamin's mess [o]was five times[4] so much as any of their's. And they drank, and were merry with him.[5]

CHAPTER XLIV.

Joseph's policy to stay his brethren, 1—17. Judah's humble supplication to him, 18—34.

AND he commanded the steward of his house,[6] saying, [a]Fill the men's sacks with food, as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth.

2 And put my [b]cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his corn-money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken.

3 As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses.

4 And when they were gone out of the city, and not yet far off, Joseph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, [c]Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good?[7]

5 Is not this it, in which my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he divineth?[8] ye have done evil in so doing.

6 ¶ And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these same words.

7 And they said unto him, [d]Wherefore saith my lord these words? God forbid that thy servants should do according to this thing.

8 Behold, [e]the money which we found in our sacks' mouths we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan: [f]how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold?

They had seen this steward to be civil in his deportment to them, as the servant of such a master would be, and they think to bespeak his favour, assuring him that they had come for no other purpose than they had said, and that the subsequent occurrences that seemed unfavourable to their character, were altogether the contrivances of others, in which they had no hand at all.

3 Joseph had taught this man to trace events to the providence of God. This was the great leading feature of Joseph's character, and must have been observed by his servant. He did not know why his master acted the part he did. But he had discovered that it was from no ill design to these men; and he therefore encourages them to have no fear of him, and treated them kindly; and bringing Simeon to them would be the first thing to calm their fears.

1 This account from the 29th to the 31st verse, is exquisitely tender & beautiful in the highest degree, displaying the brotherly affection of Joseph, while he maintains the most entire dignity & perfect command of himself. Yet his feelings being powerfully moved, he retires to give them vent, and to recover his self-possession.

2 It has been generally thought that the reason of this antipathy to the Hebrews, was that they ate those animals which the Egyptians worshipped as gods. There is no proof that this species of worship prevailed so very early, but it seems rather to have been of later invention. Such antipathies prevail among many nations to this day, without any definite assignable reason, tho' generally founded in religious, or superstitious prejudices; as if the devil were not contented with setting up idolatries in opposition to the true God, but must make them sources of pride and hatred between one people and another. 4 Judah would be as useful a servant as Benjamin; Joseph would be no loser; his father could perhaps survive the loss of him; and he was willing to submit to any hardship, rather than occasion and witness his aged father's death. What must Benjamin have felt, when he heard his brother conclude his speech with a proposal, which could never have been thought of, if it had not been actually made! Perhaps the annals of the whole world do not produce an instance of so heroic and disinterested affection in anymere man. with him while Joseph made himself known unto his brethren.[1]

2 And he wept aloud:[2] and the Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard.

3 And Joseph said unto his brethren, [c]I am Joseph:[3] doth my father yet live? And his brethren could not answer him; [d]for they were troubled[4] at his presence.

4 And Joseph said unto his brethren, Come near to me, I pray you. And they came near. And he said, [e]I am Joseph your brother, whom ye sold[5] into Egypt.

5 Now therefore [f]be not grieved, nor angry[6] with yourselves that ye sold me hither; for [g]God did send me before you to preserve life.

6 For these [h]two years hath the famine been in the land: and yet there are five years, in the which there shall neither be [i]earing nor harvest.

7 And God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth,[7] and [k]to save your lives by a great deliverance.

8 So now, [l]it was not you that sent me hither, but God:[8] and he hath made me a [m]father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt.

9 Haste you, and go up to my father, and say unto him, [n]Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt; [o]come down unto me, tarry not:

10 And thou shalt dwell [p]in the land of Goshen,[9] [q]and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast:

11 And there [r]will I nourish thee, (for yet there are five years of famine,) lest thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast, come to poverty.

12 And, behold, [s]your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that it is my mouth that speaketh unto you.

13 And ye shall tell my father of all my [t]glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen; and ye shall haste and [u]bring down my father hither.

14 And he [v]fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.

15 Moreover, [w]he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that his brethren talked with him.[1]

16 ¶ And the fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come. And it pleased Pharaoh well,[2] and his servants.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Say unto thy brethren, This do [3]ye; [x]lade your beasts, and go, get you unto the land of Canaan;

18 And take your father, and your households, and come unto me: and I will give you the good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat [y]the fat of the land.

19 Now thou art commanded, this do ye; take you waggons out of the land of Egypt [z]for your little ones, and for your wives, and bring your father, and come.

20 Also regard[4] not your [a]stuff: for [b]the good of all the land of Egypt is yours.

21 ¶ And the children of Israel did so: and Joseph gave [c]them [5]waggons, according to the commandment[6] of Pharaoh, and gave them provision for the way.

22 To all of them he gave [d]each man changes of raiment;[7] but [e]to Benjamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver, and five changes of raiment.

23 And to his father he sent after this manner: ten asses laden[8] with the good things of Egypt, and ten she-asses laden with corn and bread and meat for his father by the way.

24 So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said unto them, [f]See that ye fall not out by the way.[9]

25 ¶ And they went up out of Egypt, and came into the land of Canaan unto Jacob their father,

26 And told him, saying, [g]Joseph is yet alive, [h]and he is governor over all the land of Egypt. [i]And Jacob's[10] heart fainted, [k]for he believed them not.[11]

27 And they told him all the words of Joseph, which he had said unto them: and when he saw the waggons, which Joseph had sent to carry him, [l]the spirit of Jacob their father revived.

28 And Israel said, [m]It is enough; Joseph my son is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die.

1 We could not but admire the strength of Joseph's mind, and the greatness of his self-command in circumstances so trying. But the feelings of the brother and the son, after this most powerful and pathetic appeal of Judah, can no longer be suppressed; & as he would not that the Egyptians should know the former guilt of his brethren, or be present at the family disclosures which would be made, he directed that they should all be caused to retire.

CHAPTER XLVI.

Jacob is comforted by God at Beer-shebu, 1—4. He goeth thence with his family into Egypt, 5—7. The number of those that went with him, 8—27. Joseph meeteth Jacob, 28—30. He instructeth his brethren how to answer Pharaoh, 31—34.

AND Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to [a]Beer-sheba, [b]and offered sacrifices [c]unto the God of his father Isaac.

2 And God spake unto Israel [d]in the visions of the night, and said, [e]Jacob, Jacob. And he said, Here am I.

3 And he said, I am God, the God of thy father: [f]fear not to go down into Egypt; [g]for I will there make of thee a great nation.

4 I [h]will go down with thee into Egypt; [i]and I will also surely bring thee up again: and [k]Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.

5 ¶ And Jacob rose up from Beer-sheba:[1] and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, [l]in the waggons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him.

6 And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came [m]into Egypt, Jacob, and all his seed with him:

7 His sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters,[2] and his sons' daughters, and all his seed, brought he with him into Egypt.

8 ¶ And these are [n]the names[3] of the children of Israel which came into Egypt, Jacob and his sons: [o]Reuben, Jacob's first-born.

9 And the sons of Reuben; Hanoch, and Phallu, and Hezron, and Carmi.

10 ¶ And the sons of [p]Simeon; Jemuel,[4] and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin,[5] and Zohar,[6] and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman.

11 ¶ And the sons of [q]Levi; Gershon,[7] Kohath, and Merari.

12 ¶ And the sons of [r]Judah;[8] Er, and Onan, and Shelah, and Pharez, and Zarah: but Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan. And the sons of Pharez were Hezron and Hamul.

13 ¶ And the sons of [s]Issachar; Tola, and Phuvah,[9] and Job,[10] and Shimron.

14 ¶ And the sons of [t]Zebulun; Sered, and Elon, and Jahleel.

15 These be the sons of [u]Leah, which she bare unto Jacob in Padan-aram, [v]with his daughter Dinah: all the souls of his sons and his daughters were thirty and three.

16 ¶ And the [w]sons of Gad; Ziphion,[1] and Haggai, Shuni, and Ezbon,[2] Eri, and Arodi,[3] and Areli.

17 ¶ And the sons of [x]Asher; Jimnah, and Ishuah, and Isui, and Beriah, and Serah their sister. And the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel.

18 These are the sons of [y]Zilpah, whom Laban gave to Leah his daughter; and these she bare unto Jacob, even sixteen souls.

19 ¶ The sons of [z]Rachel, Jacob's wife; [a]Joseph, and Benjamin.

20 And unto Joseph, in the land of Egypt, were born [b]Manasseh and Ephraim, which Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah priest[4] of On, bare unto him.

21 ¶ And [c]the sons of [5]Benjamin were Belah, and Becher, and Ashbel, Gera, and Naaman, Ehi,[6] and Rosh, Muppim,[7] and Huppim,[8] and Ard.

22 These are the sons of Rachel, which were born to Jacob: all the souls were fourteen.

23 ¶ And the sons of [d]Dan; [9]Hushim.

24 ¶ And the sons of [e]Naphtali; Jahzeel,[10] and Guni, and Jezer, and Shillem.

25 These are the sons of [f]Bilhah, which Laban gave unto Rachel his daughter; and she bare these unto Jacob: all the souls were seven.

26 All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his loins,[11] besides Jacob's sons' wives, all the souls were threescore and six.

27 And the sons of Joseph, which were born him in Egypt, were two souls: all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were [g]threescore and ten.[12]

28 ¶ And he sent [h]Judah before him unto Joseph, [i]to direct his face unto [k]Goshen;[13] and they came into the land of Goshen.

29 And Joseph made ready [l]his chariot, and went up to meet Israel his father, to Goshen, and presented himself unto him: and he [m]fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while.

30 And Israel said unto Joseph, [n]Now let me die,[14] since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive.

13 To instruct Joseph that they were gone to Goshen, where he might meet with them. The Septuagint calls it, 'Goshen of Arabia,' which is correct, as the country east of the Nile appears to have been called Arabia, in contradistinction from the western shore, which was referred to Lybia; so Herodotus says the stones for building the pyramids were brought from Arabia, i.e. from the eastern bank of the Nile. It is probable that Joseph might have obtained this district as a grant from Pharaoh, or if not, that he presumed that he would grant him this favour.

32 And the men are [p]shepherds,[1] for their trade hath been to feed cattle;[2] and[q] they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have.

33 And it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What[r] is your occupation?[3]

34 That ye shall say, [s]Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we and also our fathers; that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen: [t]for every shepherd is an abomination[4] unto the Egyptians.

CHAPTER XLVII.

Joseph presenteth five of his brethren and his father before Pharaoh, 1—10. He giveth them habitation and maintenance, 11, 12. He getteth all the Egyptians' money, 13—15. Their cattle, 16, 17. Their lands for Pharaoh, 18—21. The priests' land was not bought, 22. He letteth the land to them again for a fifth of the increase, 23—27. Jacob's age, 28. He sweareth Joseph to bury him with his fathers, 29—31.

THEN [a]Joseph came and told Pharaoh, and said, My father, and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and, behold, they are [b]in the land of Goshen.

2 And he took some of his brethren, even five men, [c]and presented them[5] unto Pharaoh.

3 And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, [d]What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, Thy servants are shepherds, both we, and also our fathers.

4 They said, moreover, unto Pharaoh, [e]For to sojourn in the land are we come;[6] for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks; [f]for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now therefore, we pray thee, [g]let thy servants dwell in the land of Goshen.

5 And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee:

6 The land of Egypt [h]is before thee: in the best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell; in the land of Goshen let them dwell: and if thou knowest any men of activity among them, then make them [i]rulers over my cattle.

7 And Joseph brought in Jacob his father, and set him before Pharaoh: [k]and Jacob blessed[1] Pharaoh.

8 And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How old art thou?[2]

9 And Jacob said unto Pharaoh, [l]The days of the years of my pilgrimage are [m]an hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and [n]have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers, in the days of their pilgrimage.[3]

10 And Jacob [o]blessed Pharaoh, and went out from before Pharaoh.

11 ¶ And Joseph placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best of the land, in the land of [p]Rameses, as Pharaoh had commanded.[4]

12 And Joseph nourished [q]his father, and his brethren, and all his father's household, with bread, according to their families.[5]

13 ¶ And there was no bread in all the land: for the famine was very sore, [r]so that the land of Egypt, and all the land of Canaan, [s]fainted by reason of the famine.

14 And Joseph gathered up all [t]the money that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, for the corn which they bought: and [u]Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's house.

15 And when money failed in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, [v]Give us bread: for why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth.

16 And Joseph said, Give your cattle; and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail.

17 And they brought their cattle unto Joseph: and Joseph gave them bread in exchange [w]for horses,[6] and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses; and he [7]fed them with bread for all their cattle, for that year.

18 When that year was ended, they came unto him the second year, and said unto him, [x]We will not hide it from my lord, how that our money is 4 Various conjectures have been formed as to the reason of this antipathy of the Egyptians to shepherds. The most probable reason of it is that furnished by Hales in his Chronology, viz. 'that the Egyptians having been conquered by a race of shepherds, who, after exercising the most grievous and insulting tyrannyfor the space of 260 years, were at last expelled after a war of 30 years. This took place only about 27 years before Joseph became ruler of all the land of Egypt; and as this tyrannical race, of whom there were six kings, retired to Palestine, from which Joseph's brethren came,and the remembrance of their cruelty & oppression was still fresh in the minds of the Egyptians, this accounts for their antipathy to those who seemed of the same race and employment.

2 Heb. How many are the days of the years of thy life? ver. 9. Pharaoh observed something peculiarly venerable in the aspect of Jacob, & conceiving perhaps that he was olderthan he really was, (to which appearance his various hardships & trials might contribute) he was curious to know his age.

3 This is a very remarkable answer, and could not fail to strike the monarch. The days of the years of his wanderings hesaid were an hundred and thirty. His life was truly that of a wanderer, and in strange lands, moving to different parts in Canaan, Mesopotamia & Egypt, and that generally as a pilgrim, religiously following the leadings of God's providence, & enduring many hardships & privations, and showing that this earth was not his home, Heb. 11. 13-16. The days which made up his years werefew, and his years short and fleeting, compared with eternity, & even with the lives of many of the patriarchs. They had been, however, full of troubles, & were now drawing to a close.

spent; my lord also hath our herds of cattle: there is not ought left in the sight of my lord, but our bodies and our lands:

19 Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? [y]Buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants[1] unto Pharaoh; [z]and give us seed,[2] that we may live and not die, that the land be not desolate.

20 And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh; for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them: so the land became Pharaoh's.

21 And as for the people, he removed them [a]to cities[3] from one end of the borders of Egypt even to the other end thereof.

22 Only the land of the priests[4] bought he not: [b]for the priests had a portion assigned them of Pharaoh, and did eat their portion which Pharaoh gave them; wherefore they sold not their lands.

23 ¶ Then Joseph said unto the people, Behold, I have [c]bought you[5] this day, and your land, for Pharaoh: lo, [d]here is seed for you, and ye shall sow the land.

24 And it shall come to pass, in the increase, that ye shall give [e]the fifth part unto Pharaoh; and four parts shall be your own, for seed of the field, and for your food, and for them of your households, and for food for your little ones.

25 And they said, [f]Thou hast saved our lives: [g]let us find grace in the sight of my lord, and we will be Pharaoh's servants.

26 And Joseph made it a law over the land of Egypt unto this day, that Pharaoh should have the fifth part;[6] except [h]the land of the priests[7] only, which became not Pharaoh's.

27 ¶ And Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt, in the country of Goshen; and they had possessions therein, and [i]grew, and multiplied exceedingly.

28 And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt [k]seventeen years: so the whole age[8] of Jacob was an hundred forty and seven years.

29 And the time drew nigh that Israel [l]must die: and he called his son Joseph, and said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, [m]put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh, and [n]deal kindly and truly with me; [o]bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt:

30 But I will [p]lie with my fathers; and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their burying-place. And he said, I will do as thou hast said.

31 And he said, Swear unto me. And he sware unto him. [q]And Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.[2]

CHAPTER XLVIII.

Joseph with his sons visiteth his sick father, who strengthened himself to bless them, 1, 2. He repeateth God's promise, 3, 4. He taketh Ephraim and Manasseh as his own, 5, 6. He telleth Joseph of his mother's grave, 7. He blesseth Ephraim and Manasseh, 8–16. He preferreth the younger before the elder, 17–20. He prophesieth their return to Canaan, 21, 22.

AND it came to pass after these things, that one told Joseph, Behold, [a]thy father is sick: and he took with him [b]his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.

2 And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee. And Israel [c]strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed.

3 ¶ And Jacob said unto Joseph, [d]God Almighty [e]appeared unto me at [f]Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me,

4 And said unto me, Behold, [g]I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an [h]everlasting possession.[3]

5 And now thy [i]two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt, before I came unto thee into Egypt, [k]are mine:[4] as [l]Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine.

6 And thy issue, which thou begettest after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance.[5]

7 And as for me, when I came from Padan, [m]Rachel died by me in the land of Canaan, in the way,[6] when yet there was but a little way to come unto [n]Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath; the same is Bethlehem.

8 ¶ And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these?[7]

9 And Joseph said unto his father, They are [o]my sons, whom God hath given me in this place.[8] And he said,

5 Joseph merely means here, that by right and their own consent, as having saved them alive, he had secured them for Pharaoh's servants: and if so, though he did not take them at their word, they could not object to his subsequent proposal of a fifth part, which probably was in place of all other public burdens, and was by no means oppressive to them, as the whole had been bought with Pharaoh's money.

6 From this history, and from Diod. Sic., we learn that the land of Egypt was divided into three parts: one belonged to the Priests, ver. 22, 26; a second was the King's, which appears to have been the land of Rameses or Goshen, ver. 11; the remainder was the Subjects. Joseph having purchased the land of the people, ver. 19, 20, restored it on the condition of their paying a fifth of the clear produce to the king; & this was made a law which remained in force when Moses wrote his history two hundred years afterwards.

10 (Now [q]the eyes of Israel were dim[1] for age, so that he could not see.) And he brought them near unto him; and he [r]kissed them, and embraced them.

11 And Israel said unto Joseph, [s]I had not thought to see thy face; and, lo, God hath shewed me also thy seed.

12 And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he [t]bowed himself with his face to the earth.[2]

13 And Joseph took them both, Ephraim in his right hand toward Israel's left hand, and Manasseh in his left hand toward Israel's right hand, and brought them near unto him.

14 And Israel stretched out his right hand, and [u]laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, [v]guiding his hands wittingly;[3] for Manasseh was the first-born.

15 ¶ And he [w]blessed Joseph, and said, God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac [x]did walk, the God which [y]fed me all my life long unto this day,

16 The [z]Angel[4] which [a]redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let [b]my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let them grow[5] into [c]a multitude in the midst of the earth.

17 And when Joseph saw that his father laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it displeased him:[6] and he held up his father's hand, to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head.

18 And Joseph said unto his father, Not [d]so, my father: [e]for this is the first-born; put thy right hand upon his head.

19 And his father refused, and said, I [f]know it, my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great; but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he,[7] and his seed shall become a multitude[8] of nations.

20 And he blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall [g]Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim, and as Manasseh. [h]And he set Ephraim before Manasseh.

21 And Israel said unto Joseph, [i]Behold, I die; but [k]God shall be with you, and bring you again unto the land of your fathers.

22 Moreover, I have [l]given to thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of [m]the Amorite with my sword and with my bow.

hy father, according as he made thee swear.[1]

7 ¶ And Joseph went up to bury his father: [m]and with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt,

8 And all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only[n] their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen.

9 And there went up with him both chariots[o] and horsemen; and it was a very great company.[2]

10 And they came to the thrashing-floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan;[3] and there they mourned with a great and very sore lamentation: and he made a mourning for his father [p]seven days.[4]

11 And when the inhabitants of the land, [q]the Canaanites, saw the mourning in the floor of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians:[5] wherefore the name of it was called Abel-mizraim,[6] which is [r]beyond Jordan.

12 And his sons did unto him [s]according as he commanded them:

13 For his sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in [t]the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham bought with the field, for a possession of a burying-place, of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

14 ¶ And Joseph returned into Egypt,[7] he, and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

15 ¶ And when Joseph's brethren saw that [u]their father was dead, they said, [v]Joseph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.[8]

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF GENESIS.

This book is deeply interesting, as the only authentic original record of the history of creation and providence. It is of undoubted and pre-eminent antiquity; yet, contrary to the hopes and expectations of the enemies of revelation, time, knowledge, and research, which are, and must be, always fatal to falsehood and imposture, have only served to show the entire accordance of all its statements with the physical and moral condition of the world and of the human race. The lapse of time, and the evolutions of the scheme of Providence, are daily manifesting and confirming our belief in the fact that Moses spake by the inspiration of God. While this book unfolds the great leading facts and principles of the history of Creation and Providence, it is in subserviency, and with a view to the revelation of the special providence of God, administered in the plan of redemption, through his Son, for the salvation of a lost world. Accordingly, amid all the facts, principles, and notices of remarkable persons which it contains, the special interposition of the second person of the Godhead, under the designation of the Angel of the Lord—the Angel Jehovah, is prominently exhibited. He appears as the guide, protector, deliverer, and comforter of his people, vindicating his own saying, 'Before Abraham was I am,' and held forth from the beginning as the 'Consolation of Israel.' This glorious and delightful truth, we have studied to hold forth to the view of the reader; and that, we trust, without unduly straining the interpretation of any one passage. The Sun of righteousness stands out, even thus early, as clearly revealed and distinguished above all others, as the natural sun above the lesser orbs. In this view alone, independently of all the beautiful and striking instructions communicated in this portion of Holy Writ, in regard to the fathers of mankind, suited to the circumstances of the people of God, in all the actings, relations, and trials of life, this book is worthy of the most careful study and lively faith, as the first record of all those precious promises and truths which 'are Yea and Amen in Christ Jesus.' The peculiarity, preciousness, and loftiness of its truths, justify, in regard to it, the decision of the Holy Spirit in reference to 'all scripture,' that it is 'given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, and instruction in righteousness.' It reads, in impressive manifestation, in the lives of Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph, and the incidental notices it gives of Enoch and Melchizedeck, the lesson of God himself, 'Them that honour me, I will honour.' Their names are had in everlasting remembrance.

THE SECOND BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

EXODUS.

THIS book is named Exodus in the Greek version of the scriptures called the Septuagint. The word signifies going out or departure; because the departure of the children of Israel out of Egypt and the attendant circumstances form the main subject of the book. It is called in Hebrew VE-ELLAH-SHEMOTH, signifying, 'These are the names,' after the custom noticed in the Preface to Genesis, these being the words with which it begins. It contains a history of the transactions of 145 years; beginning at the death of Joseph, and ending at the erection of the Tabernacle at the foot of mount Sinai. It is universally allowed to have been written by Moses. It is so cited by many of the sacred writers, as well as by our Lord himself. It is quoted twenty-five, and referred to nineteen times, by our Lord and his apostles. It contains matters of very deep interest. We have the birth, wonderful preservation, and remarkable life of Moses, by which God trained him to be the leader of the Israelites; the wonders by which God delivered that people from slavery, conducted them through the wilderness, established them in Canaan, and gave them ordinances, laws and institutions. All which related not only to themselves, but were figurative of things under the Christian dispensation; besides containing many predictions, some of which were accomplished in the time of Moses, and some not till 1490 years after, in 'Christ our Passover sacrificed for us.' It reveals also the moral law, which is of perpetual obligation. We would only add, that many of the circumstances in this divinely inspired book are confirmed by the testimony of heathen writers.

CHAPTER I.

The children of Israel, after Joseph's death, multiply greatly, 1—7. The more they are oppressed by a new king, the more they multiply, 8—14. The piety of the midwives, in saving the men-children alive, is rewarded by God, 15—21. Pharaoh commandeth the male-children to be cast into the river, 22.

NOW [a]these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt: every man and his household came with Jacob.

2 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah,

3 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin,

4 Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

5 And all the souls that came out of the loins[1] of Jacob were [b]seventy souls:[2] for Joseph was in Egypt already.

6 And [c]Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation.[3]

7 And the children of Israel were fruitful,[d] and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.[4]

8 ¶ Now there arose up [e]a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph.[5]

9 And he said unto his people, Behold, [f]the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we.

10 [g]Come on, let us deal [h]wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land.

3 Joseph and all his brethren had been for sometime dead. A new generation both of Israelites and Egyptians had sprung up, and the important services performed by Joseph were speedily forgotten.

4 The language of this verse, both in itself and in the accumulation of its phrases, denotes very great & wonderful increase. They were fruitful as healthful fruit-bearing trees, increased as fishes do, and multiplied, and became strong beyond measure.

5 Whether this king who 'knew not Joseph,' who probably was now dead sixty years, was a descendant of Pharaoh, Joseph's friend and master, or as conjectured, the king of a new dynasty of the expelled shepherd kings, is not certain. But he began to be jealous of the Israelites; & having had no personal knowledge of Joseph, no regard to his memory, or sense of his great and valuable services, he set about keeping down that people by cruelty and oppression.

1 Storehouses, granaries, or fortified places. Some suppose the word to be a proper name, & that there were three cities; by some that these places where Pharaoh laid up his treasures might be the pyramids. Josephus says that the building of these vast piles was one of the oppresive labours imposed on the Israelites; and, contrary to what was long supposed, some of the pyramids are of brick. Goshen is called the land of Rameses, Gen. 47. 11. Rameses was probably situated in Goshen.

3 These two might be the chief over the persons of this profession. Clarke conjectures, from what is said, verse 19, that very few such persons were required.

4 This seems to allude to the eastern custom of placing the children in stone troughs to wash them just after birth, and in which situation the midwives could easily put them to death.

11 Therefore they did set over them task-masters [i]to afflict them with their [k]burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure-cities,[1] Pithom and [l]Raamses.

12 But the more they afflicted [2]them, the more they multiplied and grew. And they were [m]grieved because of the children of Israel.

13 And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour.

14 And they made [n]their lives bitter with hard bondage, [o]in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, [p]was with rigour.

15 ¶ And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives; (of which the name of the one was Shiphrah, and the name of the other Puah;)[3]

16 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools,[4] if it be a son, [q]then ye shall kill him; but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

17 But the midwives [r]feared [5]God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men-children alive.

18 And the king of Egypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, [s]Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men-children alive?

19 And the midwives [t]said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women;[1] for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.

20 Therefore [u]God dealt well[2] with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty.

21 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that he [v]made them houses.

22 And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, [w]Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

CHAPTER II.

Moses is born, and laid in an ark cast among the flags, 1—4. He is found, and brought up by Pharaoh's daughter, 5—10. He slayeth an Egyptian, 11, 12. He reproveth an Hebrew, 13, 14. He fleeth into Midian, 15—20. He marrieth Zipporah, 21. Gershom is born, 22. God respecteth the cry of the Israelites, 23—25.

AND there went a man [a]of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi.

2 And the woman conceived, and bare a son: and when [b]she saw him that he was a goodly child,[3] she hid him three months.

3 And when [c]she could not longer hide him, she took for him [d]an ark of bulrushes,[4] and daubed it [e]with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

4 And [f]his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him.

5 And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river's side: and [g]when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it.

6 And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And [h]she had compassion on him,[5] and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children.

7 Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?

8 And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, [i]Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother.

9 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it.[6]

1 Clarke says that the Hebrew midwives simply and boldly declared a fact; and for which he accounts by affirming that what is affirmed of the Hebrew women is not unusual with those who are inured to hard labour in the open air.

3 Both Aaron and their sister Miriam were older than Moses. The cruel decree mentioned ch. 1. 22, had not then probably gone forth before they were born. There was something peculiarly beautiful and promising about Moses, Heb. 11. 23; so that his mother, in faith, braved the wrath of the king.

4 The bulrush is the papyrus, so famous in antiquity. It grows in marshy places, the stalk rises to the height of six or seven cubits, is triangular, and terminates in a crown of small filaments resembling hair. The reed was of great use to the Egyptians; the pith serving them for food, & the woody part to build vessels with; representations of which vessels frequently appear on various ancient monuments.

6 It is impossible not to observe the special providence of God, in directing all the circumstances for the preservation of Moses. 'The manner in which the great Ruler of the world accomplishes his secret purposes, without at all interfering with the free agency of his rational creatures, by imperceptibly leading them, in following their own inclinations and judgments, to such measures as coincide with his plans, is very observable in all these circumstances.' — Scott.

3 Compare Ac. 7. 23-25. In all this transaction Moses acted under divine impulse and direction. He knew that he was divinely commissioned to deliver Israel. In faith he was ready to renounce all the pleasures and advantages of his rank among the Egyptians, to take part with the people of God, in hope of the blessings promised in the Redeemer. He went out 'to visit his brethren' in this spirit. But God's time was not yet come. They were not prepared to welcome him, they must suffer a little more, and he must learn wisdom and meekness in the school of adversity. If, as is probable, the Egyptian killed the Hebrew, Moses was justified by the Noahic precept (Ge. 9. 6.) in acting as he did, as well as by his divine commission.

11 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, when [m]Moses was grown,[3] that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their [n]burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren.

12 And [o]he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.

13 And when he went out the second day,[4] behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: [p]and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?

14 And he said, [q]Who made thee a prince[5] and a judge over us? Intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian?[6] And [r]Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

15 Now when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses [s]fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of [t]Midian: and he [u]sat down by a well.

16 ¶ Now the priest[7] of Midian had seven daughters: and [v]they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

17 And [w]the shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock.

18 And when they came to [8]Reuel their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to day?

19 And they said, [x]An Egyptian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, [y]and also drew water enough for us, and watered the flock.

20 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? Why is it that ye have left the man? [z]Call him, that he may eat bread.

21 And Moses was [a]content to dwell with the man: and he gave Moses [b]Zipporah his daughter.

22 And she bare him a son, and he called his name Gershom:[9] [c]for he said, I have been a stranger in a strange land.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, [d]in process of time, that [e]the king of Egypt died:[1] and the children of Israel [f]sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried; and their [g]cry came up unto God, by reason of the bondage.

24 And [h]God heard their groaning, and God [i]remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.

25 And God [k]looked upon the children of Israel, and God had respect[2] unto them.

CHAPTER III.

Moses keepeth Jethro's flock, 1. God appeareth to him in a burning bush, 2—6. He sendeth him to deliver Israel, 7—10. Moses enquireth, and is told the name of God, 11—14. God's message to Israel, 15—22.

NOW Moses [a]kept the flock of Jethro[3] [b]his father-in-law, the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the back-side of the desert, and came to the[c] mountain of God, even to [d]Horeb.

2 And the [e]Angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush; and he looked, and, behold, the bush [f]burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.

3 And Moses said, I will now turn aside, [g]and see this great sight, why the bush is not burned.

4 And when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, [h]Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I.

5 And he said, [i]Draw not nigh hither: [k]put off thy shoes from off thy feet;[4] for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

6 Moreover he said, [l]I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses [m]hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.[5]

7 ¶ And the LORD said, [n]I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their task-masters; for I know their sorrows;

8 And [o]I am come down to [p]deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto[q] a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the [r]Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

9 Now therefore, behold, the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me: [s]and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

10 Come now therefore, [t]and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And Moses said unto God, [u]Who am I,[1] that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?

12 And he said, [v]Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a [w]token unto thee that I have sent thee: when thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, [x]ye shall serve God upon this mountain.[2]

13 And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, [y]What is his name? what shall I say unto them?

14 And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM:[3] And he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, [z]I AM hath sent me unto you.

15 ¶ And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, [a]The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: [b]this is my name for ever, and this is my [c]memorial unto all generations.[4]

16 Go, and gather the [d]elders[5] of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely [e]visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt:

17 And I have said, [f]I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt, [g]unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

5 In this passage, from the 2d to the 14th, inclusive, we have, in addition to several others already noticed, another very remarkable proof that that wonderful Being called the Angel of the Lord, or, Angel Jehovah, the Angel of the Covenant, is indeed God—God the Son, who, in John 8. 56, applies to himself the phrase, 'I AM.' Observe that in the passage before us, this Angel is called God repeatedly, the covenant God of his people, the LORD, Jehovah; and takes to himself that peculiar incommunicable name. See marg. ref.

the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The [k] LORD God of the Hebrews hath met[l] with us: and now let us go, we beseech thee, [m]three days' journey into the wilderness,[1] [n]that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.

19 And I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go, no, not[2] by a mighty hand.

20 And I will [o]stretch out my hand, and [p]smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and [q]after that he will let you go.

21 And I [r]will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty:

22 But [s]every woman shall borrow[3] of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall spoil[t] the Egyptians.[4]

CHAPTER IV.

Moses' rod is turned into a serpent, 1—5. His hand is leprous, 6—9. He is loth to be sent, 10—13. Aaron is appointed to assist him, 14—17. Moses departeth from Jethro, 18—20. God's message to Pharaoh, 21—23. Zipporah circumciseth her son, 24—26. Aaron is sent to meet Moses, 27—30. The people believeth them, 31.

AND Moses answered and said, But, behold, [a]they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The LORD hath not appeared unto thee.[5]

2 And the LORD said unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, [b]A rod.[6]

3 And he said, Cast it on the ground. And he cast it on the ground, and [c]it became a serpent; and Moses fled from before it.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, Put[d] forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. [e]And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand:

5 That [f]they may believe, that [g]the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.

6 ¶ And the LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thine hand into thy bosom. And he put his hand[7] into his bosom: and when he took it out, behold, his hand was [h]leprous as snow.

7 And he said, Put thine hand into thy bosom again. And he put his hand into his bosom again; and plucked it out of his bosom, and, behold, it [i]was turned again as his other flesh.

8 And it shall come to pass, [k]if they will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign,[1] that [l]they will believe the voice of the latter sign.

9 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe also these two signs, neither hearken unto thy voice, that thou shalt take of the water of the river, and pour it upon the dry land: and the water, which thou takest out of the river, shall become[2] [m]blood upon the dry land.

10 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, O my lord, I am not eloquent,[3] neither heretofore,[4] nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant; but I am [n]slow of speech,[5] and of a slow tongue.

11 And the LORD said unto him, [o]Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? have not I the LORD?

12 Now therefore go, and [p]I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say.

13 And he said, O my lord, [q]send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou wilt[6] send.

14 And [r]the anger of the LORD was kindled against Moses, and he said, Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know that he can speak well. And also, behold, [s]he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his heart.

15 And thou shalt speak unto him, [t]and put words in his mouth: [u]and I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and [v]will teach you what ye shall do.

16 And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even [w]he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and thou shalt be to him instead of God.[7]

17 And thou shalt take [x]this rod in thine hand, wherewith thou shalt do signs.

18 ¶ And Moses went and returned to Jethro[8] his father-in-law, and said

This dreadful disease was most inveterate and contagious, & deemed incurable. so that their inflicting and removing this disease instantaneously, was another token of the divine power. This sign of turning the water into blood was not wrought now, when God talked with him, as the two former were, for he was now in the desert. 5 Literally, 'For I am heavy of mouth.' Moses supposed that great eloquence would be requisite, both to persuade Israel, and to plead before Pharaoh; & he objected that in the Egyptian court, he had, at all former times, been defective in the gift of a ready and graceful elocution; & that even since the Lord had spoken to him, he had experienced no alteration in this respect. We read, however, that he 'was mighty in words,' as well as in deeds, (Acts 7. 22.) And so was St Paul, though he affected no eloquence, and was deemed by some 'in speech contemptible.' They both could speak with energy, & to the purpose; tho' not with the enticing words, nor delusive charms of human oratory.

6 We cannot enter at length into an examination of this difficult passage. It is probable that Moses had, thro' the aversion of Zipporah to have the rite of circumcision performed on her son, neglected it. God appeared to him on his journey, and visited him with a dangerous disease. Zipporah perceiving this, hastily circumcised her child with a knife made of flint, such knives being common in some countries. When this was done, and she expressed her submission to this rite of divine institution, and her affection to Moses, by saying, A bloody husband, or, A husband by blood art thou to me, God restored Moses, & let him prosecute his journey.

3 And they said, The God of the Hebrews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the desert, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God, [f]lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the sword.[3]

4 And the king of Egypt said unto them, [g]Wherefore do ye, Moses and Aaron, let the people from their[4] works? get you unto your burdens.

5 And Pharaoh said, Behold, the people of the land now are [h]many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

6 ¶ And Pharaoh commanded the same day [i]the task-masters of the people, and their officers,[5] saying,

7 Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.[6]

8 And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish ought thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

9 Let there more work be laid upon the men,[7] that they may labour therein; and let them not regard [k]vain words.

10 ¶ And the [l]task-masters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw.

11 Go ye, get you straw where ye can find it: yet not ought of your work shall be diminished.

12 So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt to gather stubble instead of straw.

13 And the task-masters hasted them, saying, Fulfil your works, your daily tasks,[1] as when there was straw.

14 And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's task-masters had set over them, were beaten,[2] and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task in making brick both yesterday and to-day, as heretofore?

15 ¶ Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore dealest thou thus with thy servants?

16 There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say to us, Make brick: and, behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.[3]

17 But he said, [m]Ye are idle, ye are idle; therefore ye say, Let us go and do sacrifice to the LORD.

18 Go therefore now and work: for there shall no straw be given you, [n]yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks.

19 And the officers of the children of Israel did see that they were in [o]evil case, after it was said, Ye shall not minish ought from your bricks of your daily task.

20 ¶ And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh:

21 And they said unto them, [p]The LORD look upon you, and judge; because ye have made [q]our savour to be abhorred[4] in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants, to put a sword in their hand to slay us.[5]

22 ¶ And Moses [r]returned unto the LORD, and said, Lord, Wherefore hast thou so evil entreated this people? [s]why is it that thou hast sent me?

23 For since I came to Pharaoh to speak [t]in thy name, he hath done evil to this people; neither hast thou delivered[6] thy people at all.

2 This is quite Oriental. We need only allude to China, which has been aptly said to be governed by the stick. In Persia, also, the stick is in continual action. Men of all ranks and ages are continually liable to be beaten. It is by no means a rare occurrence for the highest and most trusted persons in the state, in a momentof displeasure or caprice in their royal master, to be handed over to the beaters of carpets, who beat them with their sticks as if they were dogs. The same practice descends through all ranks; and it has often made the writer's heartache to see respectable, & even venerable white bearded men, chastised by the menials & messengers of great persons, &c.—*Pict. 5 Moses and Aaron were waiting with some anxiety to hear the result of their application to Pharaoh. The people, afflicted & oppressed, murmur against them, and even call upon God to plead their cause against them, as if they had made them odious in the sight of the Egyptians, even as good as put a sword into their hands, by giving them a pretence to oppress & even slay them, as disobedient and rebellious. Distress is unreasonable & complaining, fearful and apprehensive of greater evil. They ought to have remembered, however, that Moses & Aaron had given proofs of their divine commission.

2 Thou shalt speak [c]all that I command thee; and Aaron thy brother shall speak unto Pharaoh, that he send the children of Israel out of his land.

4 But Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you, [f]that I may lay my hand upon Egypt, and bring forth mine [g]armies, and my people the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt, [h]by great judgments.

5 And the Egyptians [i]shall know that I am the LORD, when [k]I stretch forth mine hand upon Egypt, and bring out the children of Israel from among them.

6 And Moses and Aaron did [l]as the LORD commanded them, so did they.

7 And Moses was [m]fourscore years old, and Aaron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pharaoh.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

9 When Pharaoh shall speak unto you, saying, [n]Shew a miracle for you: then thou shalt say unto Aaron, [o]Take thy rod, and cast it before Pharaoh, and it shall become a serpent.

10 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and they did so as the LORD had commanded: and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh, and before his servants, and [p]it became a serpent.

4 The historian here digressed to give some account of the persons to whom the charge was given. Reuben & Simeon are mentioned first, and in the order of their seniority. But the deliverer did not spring from them, but from Levi, the third son, who, tho' he had been disgraced, began now to be dignified. It has been attempted, by the help of the Septuagint and Jewish traditions, who wished to save the credit of Moses, to establish that Jochebed was not the aunt, but the cousin, of Amram. But the meaning of the word is fixed in another passage. 'The name of Amram's wife was Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, whom her mother bear to Levi in Egypt.' Nu. 26. 59. 3 God knew that when they delivered their message as of divine authority, Pharaoh would ask the proof. It was given as related. The magicians did so with their enchantments. As we believe that a real undoubted miracle is of itself proof of a divine commission, (see John 3. 2; 5. 36; 6. 27; 10. 38; 14. 11; 15. 25.) so we do not believe that such a miracle can be wrought in support of a falsehood. The expression they 'did so,' or 'in like manner,' may indicate only the attempt and not the deed, as afterwards in the plague of lice, 'when they did so with their enchantments, but could not,' ch. 8. 18. And the magicians, when unable to imitate the production of lice, declared, 'this is the finger of God.' It is well known that the Egyptians were famous for slight-of-hand, and for tricks with serpents, and though Aaron's serpent swallowed up their serpents, showing the superiority of the true miracle over the false, 2 Th. 2. 9, it might only lead the king to conclude, that Moses & Aaron were more expert jugglers than Jannes and Jambres, who opposed them, 2 Ti. 3. 8. If real miracles could be formed in support of falsehood, it would destroy the evidence for divine revelation. If those of the magicians were real, Pharaoh could not have known that the authority of Moses & Aaron was higher than theirs.

16 And thou shalt say unto him, The[x] LORD God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, [y]Let my people go, that they may [z]serve me in the wilderness: and, behold, hitherto thou wouldest not hear.

17 Thus saith the LORD, In this thou[a] shalt know[2] that I am the LORD: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the river, [b]and they shall be turned to blood.

18 And [c]the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink; and the Egyptians [d]shall loathe to drink of the water of the river.

19 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and [e]stretch out thine hand upon the waters of Egypt, upon their streams, upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon all their pools of water,[3] that they may become blood; and that there may be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood, and in vessels of stone.

20 And Moses and Aaron did so, as the LORD commanded: and [f]he lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants; and [g]all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood.

21 And [h]the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the Egyptians could not drink of the water of the river: and there was blood throughout all the land of Egypt.

22 And the [i]magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments: [k]and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them; as the LORD had said.

23 And Pharaoh turned and went into his house, [l]neither did he set his heart to this also.[1]

24 And all the Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink; [m]for they could not drink of the water of the river.

25 And [n]seven days were [2]fulfilled, after that the LORD had smitten the river.

Frogs are sent, 1—7. Pharaoh sueth to Moses, 8—11. And Moses by prayer removeth them away, 12—15. The dust is turned into lice, which the magicians could not do, 16—19. The plague of flies, 20—24. Pharaoh inclineth to let the people go, 25—31. But yet is hardened, 32.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, [a]Go unto Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, [b]Let my people go, that they may serve me.

2 And if thou [c]refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite[3] all thy borders with [d]frogs:

3 And the river shall bring forth frogs[4] abundantly, which shall go up, and come into thine house, and into thy bed-chamber, and upon thy bed, and into the house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy kneading-troughs:[5]

4 And the frogs shall come up both [e]on thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, [f]Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.

6 And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt; and [g]the frogs came up, and covered the land of Egypt.

7 And [h]the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt.

8 ¶ Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, [i]Entreat the LORD, that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; [k]and I will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

9 And Moses said unto Pharaoh,

1 When God is said to harden the heart, it is in no such way as to make Him the author of sin. 'He is not tempted with sin, neither tempteth He any one.' But he, as a just judgment or punishment for sin, leaves the sinner to his own heart's devices. In this place the phrase ought rather to be, 'Pharaoh's heart was hardened.' The same words are so rendered, ver. 22. His heart became strong and presumptuous. He was emboldened by the tricks of the magicians, and despised the miracles of Moses.

2 Let it be observed that the design of these plagues was to make Pharaoh know & confess that the God of the Hebrews was the true and supreme Jehovah, and to manifest it to all the nations of the earth, ch. 9. 16; 1Sa. 4.8; and to punish the Egyptians for their oppression and idolatry. The plagues were therefore such as to show this in the very points where they were most idolatrous.—See on this point, Bryant on the Ten Plagues. The Nile was worshipped with divine honours. 'The judgment thus inflicted upon the river, and all the waters of Egypt, in the presence of Pharaoh and of his servants, as foretold, when as soon as Aaron had smitten the waters of the river, they were turned into blood, & continued in that state for seven days, so that all the fish died, and the Egyptians could not drink of the waters of the river, in which they delighted, as the most wholesome of all waters; but were forced to dig wells for pure water to drink, was a significant sign of God's displeasure for their senseless idolatry in worshipping the river and its fish.' —Hales' Chron.

1 The magicians endeavoured, by some sleight of hand, to turn some small portion of water into blood, which would lead Pharaoh, in his state of mind, very easily to conclude that Moses and Aaron were only a little more skilled in their arts than his magicians, and he turned away from them defying the threatenings of Jehovah.

3 It has been very well remarked, that the prediction, as well as the miraculous nature, of the plagues themselves, was proof of a divine interposition.
[d] Ps. 78. 45; 105. 30; Re. 16. 13, 14.
4 We have now a series of plagues, from small & contemptible creatures, by which God shows his power over all the works of his hand, great and small, and how easily He can pour contempt upon princes, and make the most insignificant and impotent creatures become scourges to proud man. He teaches us how greatly we are indebted to the wise arrangement of God's providence, in preventing us from being overwhelmed by multitudes of insignificant creatures which we could not control nor destroy. The plague of frogs was also expressly fitted to humble the Egyptians, & pour contempt on their sottish idolatry. Their sacred river was made an active instrument of their punishment, along with another of their gods. The frog was one of their sacred animals, consecrated to the sun, & considered as an emblem of divine inspiration in its infations, See Re.16. 13. These creatures came up in vast multitudes on every place and on every person, polluting the whole land. This plague came upon the Israelites also. The magicians could imitate the miracle but could not diminish the plague.

Glory over me:[1] when shall I entreat for thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, to destroy[2] the frogs from thee and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

10 And he said, To-morrow.[3] And he said, Be it according to thy word; that thou mayest know that [l]there is none like unto the LORD our God.

11 And [m]the frogs shall depart from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only.

12 And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh; and Moses [n]cried unto the LORD because of the frogs which he had brought against Pharaoh.

13 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

14 And they gathered them together upon heaps; [o]and the land stank.

15 But when Pharaoh [p]saw that there was respite, [q]he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, [r]Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the land, that it may become lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

17 And they did so: for Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and it became [s]lice in man and in beast: all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

18 And the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but [t]they could not: so there were lice upon man and upon beast.[4]

19 Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, [u]This is the finger of God: and [v]Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

20 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, ([w]lo, he cometh forth to the water,) and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve me:

21 Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send swarms of flies[1] upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of [x]swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.

22 And I will [y]sever in that day the land of Goshen,[2] in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there; to the end thou mayest know [z]that I am the LORD in the [a]midst of the earth.

23 And I will put a division[3] between my people and thy people: to-morrow[4] shall this sign be.

24 And the LORD did so: and [b]there came a grievous swarm of flies[5] into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt: [c]the land was corrupted[6] by reason of the swarm of flies.

25 ¶ And Pharaoh [d]called for Moses and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land.

26 And Moses said, [e]It is not meet so to do; for [f]we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice [g]the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?

27 We will go [h]three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, [i]as he shall command us.

28 And Pharaoh said, [k]I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: [l]entreat for me.

29 And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will entreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, [m]to-morrow: but let not Pharaoh [n]deal deceitfully any more in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.

30 And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and entreated the LORD.

31 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people: there remained not one.

32 And [o]Pharaoh hardened his heart at this time also, neither would he let the people go.

A.M.2513. B.C.1491

1 Or, Have this honour over me, against when, I Ki. 18. 25. Pharaoh, learning that the magicians could not remove the plague, entreated Moses to do so, and promised to grant the people liberty to sacrifice to the Lord. Moses permits him thus much to have honour over him, that he should fix the time for the removal of the plague, and Moses would grant it. It is curious that Pharaoh does not request it to be done immediately, but 'to-morrow.' Probably in the hope that the frogs might before then disappear, and he would not be forced to acknowledge the hand of God, or his servant Moses, in the matter. Moses, by fixing his own time, more completely brought out that it was the work of God, and 'that there is none like unto the Lord our God.' Pharaoh having obtained respite, again hardens his heart.

4 This plague, like the preceding, was peculiarly fitted to humble the Egyptians. The peculiarity of this judgment is, that certain regulations of the Egyptian temple worship had reference to this very pollution, & uncommon care was taken in the regulation of their person and dress to prevent it. In its character and issue in showing the futility of their attempts to imitate it, they were forced to confess that this was 'the finger of God.' This plague was especially humiliating & disgraceful. It is singular that in almost all false religions they affect great external delicacy, pomp, and purity, while inwardly they are full of all manner of uncleanness. Outward purity is comparatively an easy matter; not so the mortification of the passions, and the internal purity of the heart. The former is therefore practised in the vain hope of its being accepted in place of the latter.

5 Perhaps a mixture of various insects, or a multitude of insects. Hales says of this fourth plague, 'This visitation of flies, of the gad-fly, or hornet, was more intolerable than any of the preceding. By this, his minute, but "mighty army," God afterwards drove out some of the devoted nations of Canaan, before Joshua; Ex. 23. 28; De. 7. 20; Jos. 24. 12. This insect was worshipped in Palestine and elsewhere, under the title of Baal-zebub, "Lord of the gad-fly," 2 Ki. 1. 1, 2. Egypt, we learn from Herodotus, abounded with prodigious swarms of flies or gnats: but this was in the heat of summer, during the dog-days; whence this fly is called κυνομυια, "the dog-fly." But the appointed time of this plague was in the middle of winter; and accordingly, this plague extorted Pharaoh's partial consent: "Go ye, sacrifice to your GOD, but in the land;" and when Moses & Aaron objected the offence they would give to the Egyptians, who would stone them for sacrificing "the abomination of the Egyptians," viz. animal sacrifices, he reluctantly consented; "Only ye shall not go very far away," for he was apprehensive of their flight, like his predecessor, who first enslaved the Israelites, ch. 1. 10.'—Hales Chron. II. p. 172.

CHAPTER IX.

The murrain of beasts, 1—7. The plague of boils and blains, 8—12. His message about the hail, 13—21. The plague of hail, 22—26. Pharaoh sueth to Moses, 27—34. But is still hardened, 35.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, [a]Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

2 For [b]if thou refuse to let them go, and wilt hold them still,

3 Behold, [c]the hand of the LORD is upon thy cattle which is in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the oxen, and upon the sheep: there shall be a very grievous murrain.[1]

4 And the LORD shall [d]sever between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel.

5 And the LORD appointed [e]a set time, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land.

6 And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and [f]all the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.

7 And Pharaoh sent, and, behold, there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. And [g]the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, and he did not let the people go.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and unto Aaron, [h]Take to you handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it toward the heaven in the sight of Pharaoh.

9 And it shall become small dust in all the land of Egypt, and shall be [i]a boil breaking forth with blains, upon man, and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt.

10 And they took ashes of the furnace,[2] and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became a boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast.

11 And the magicians [k]could not stand before Moses because of the boil; for the boil was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians.

12 And [l]the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

1 This fifth plague involves similar principles and similar lessons, and is equally indicative of the divine wisdom in adapting his judgments to the condition of the Egyptians, to abase them in the very things in which they gloried, and to exalt Himself in the sight of the nations. God commands Moses again to urge upon Pharaoh the request to let Israel go, threatening that by to-morrow, a grievous, widely extended murrain or pestilence, should be upon all the beasts of the field belonging to the Egyptians, but that a separation should be made between them and those of the Israelites. This judgment came to pass exactly as predicted. All the cattle of Egypt died; that is, as such universal terms are used in all languages, in a limited sense; not every one of their cattle, see ver. 19, but the greater proportion of their cattle, died, tho' not one belonging to the Israelites. What is especially remarkable about it is, that the Egyptians paid divine honours to beasts, and some of them were the objects of particular reverence and worship. By this plague, therefore, their supposed deities were shown to be nothing in the world, and sunk into contempt before the God of the Hebrews.

2 The Egyptians professed themselves famous in the art of medicine; had gods who were supposed specially to preside over it. Physicians were maintained at the public expence. It might probably be specially intrusted to the magicians, or wise men, who were charged with the care of all secret arts & learned professions; and there is particular significance in what is related in verse 11th, intimating that they could not protect themselves from the grievous maladies which were sent upon them. This plague consisted in violent inflammatory swellings, but so uncommon, that it has been called the botch of Egypt.

4 This is the eighth plague. At the 14th verse, God declares that he would send plagues upon their hearts, and visit them with judicial hardness of heart. At the 15th verse, He intimates that He could stretch (for so should it be rendered) out his hand and destroy them at once with the pestilence as he did their cattle; but that he had raised him up—sustained him so long in his obduracy, to manifest his divine power in the number and variety of the plagues. This plague of hail, fire, or lightning and thunder, was remarkable for its peculiarity, inasmuch as rain was scarcely ever seen in Egypt, and the sky was ever serene and cloudless, the country being watered by the overflowings of the Nile, from the rains which descended in the mountainous regions beyond it. And thunder and lightning, when they do occur, have so little terrific or dangerous in them, that the Egyptians never associate with them anything destructive. This plague destroyed every thing that was then grown; especially the flax & barley, for both of which Egypt was greatly famed, and by the destruction of which they must severely suffer.

c ch.10.6; Mat.24.21.

13 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [m]Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

14 For I will at this time send [n]all my plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; [o]that thou mayest know that there is none like me in all the earth.[1]

15 For now I will stretch out my hand, [p]that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be [q]cut off from the earth.

16 And in very deed [r]for this cause have I raised thee up,[2] [s]for to shew in thee my power; and [t]that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

17 As yet [u]exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go?

18 Behold, [v]to-morrow about this time, [w]I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail, such as hath not been in Egypt since the foundation thereof even until now.

19 Send therefore now, [x]and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field: for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

20 He that [y]feared the word of the LORD among the servants of Pharaoh made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses:

21 And he that regarded[3] not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [z]Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven, that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt, upon man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt.

23 And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven; and [a]the LORD sent thunder and [b]hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground:[4] and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was [c]none like it in all the land of Egypt since it became a nation.

25 And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field.

26 Only [d]in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail.

27 ¶ And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, [e]I have sinned this time: [f]the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.[1]

28 [g]Entreat the LORD (for it is enough) that there be no more mighty thunderings[2] and hail; and I will let you go, and [h]ye shall stay no longer.

29 And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will [i]spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; and the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou mayest know how [k]that the earth is the LORD's.

30 But as for thee and thy servants, I[l] know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God.

31 And the flax and the barley was smitten; for [m]the barley was in the ear, and the flax was bolled.

32 But the wheat and the rye were not smitten: for they were[3] not grown up.[4]

33 And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and spread abroad his hands unto the LORD; [n]and the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

34 And when Pharaoh [o]saw that the rain, and the hail, and the thunders, were ceased, he sinned yet more, [p]and hardened his heart, he and his servants.

35 And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go; [q]as the LORD had spoken by Moses.[5]

CHAPTER X.

God threateneth to send locusts, 1—6. Pharaoh, moved by his servants, inclineth to let the Israelites go, 7—11. The plague of locusts, 12—15. Pharaoh sueth again to Moses, 16—20. The plague of darkness, 21—23. Pharaoh sueth unto Moses, 24—26. But is still hardened, 27—29.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh: for [a]I have hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants, [b]that I might shew these my signs before him:[6]

4 It is interesting to observe how exactly this agrees with the state of the crops in Egypt at the present day, at the time of the year indicated. We are thus also enabled to fix the season of the year at which these important transactions took place. Flax is ripe in March, when the plants are gathered; and it must therefore have been 'bolled,' or risen in stalk, in February, in which month we would understand this, and several of the other miracles to have been effected. Barley is expressly stated in works on Egypt, to be gathered before the wheat; and as the wheat harvest takes place in May in Lower Egypt, and in April in Upper Egypt, the barley must have been in the ear in February. At the same time the wheat would hardly be grown up; and as to 'the rye,' it is not well determined what it was. —See Pict. Bible.

2 The design of this eighth plague was to confirm the faith of the Israelites, ver. 2. The locusts destroyed what had been spared by the tempest. These creatures come in such swarms in eastern countries, that they darken the air; they devour every green thing, moving right on, barking the trees and leaving universal desolation. Though common in Arabia, they are seldom found in Egypt; the Red Sea forming a barrier against them, as they are not formed for crossing seas, or for long flights. The wind also blows there six months from the north, and six from the south, so that the strong easterly wind that enabled them to cross it, was plainly præternatural.

4 This was either spoken in scorn and contempt, as if Pharaoh would say, 'Let the LORD be with you, and take care of you if he can; but I will not let you go;' or by way of imprecation: 'I would that the LORD may as certainly cease to be with you anymore, as I shall refuse to let you go with all your company; for to this I never will consent.' He intended to keep the children, and probably the women also, as hostages to ensure the return of the men. Nay, he threatened to punish Moses and Aaron, if they continued to trouble him; and his mad presumption was such, that he certainly would have attempted it, had not God dismayed & restrained him. Some suppose that he charged them with the design of stirring up the people to a revolt, when he said, 'evil is before you.' As, however, they were not satisfied with his proposal, he drove them with violence from his presence.

2 And [c]that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, what things I have wrought in Egypt, and my signs which I have done among them; [d]that ye may know how that I am the LORD.

3 And Moses and Aaron came in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, [e]How long wilt thou refuse to [f]humble thyself before me? Let my people go, that they may serve me:

4 Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, [g]to-morrow will I bring the [h]locusts into thy coast:

5 And they shall cover the face[1] of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and they shall eat [i]the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field.[2]

6 And they shall [k]fill thy houses, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians; [l]which neither thy fathers, nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. [m]And he turned himself, and went out from Pharaoh.

7 ¶ And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, [n]How long shall this man be a [o]snare unto us? Let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God. Knowest thou not yet [p]that Egypt is destroyed?

8 And Moses and Aaron were [q]brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God: but who[3] are they that shall go?

9 And Moses said, [r]We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go: for we must hold [s]a feast unto the LORD.

10 And he said unto them, Let the LORD be so with you, as I will let you go, and your little ones: [t]look to it; for evil is before you.[4]

11 Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that ye did desire. [u]And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land, even all that the hail hath left.

13 And Moses stretched forth his rod over the land of Egypt, and the LORD brought an [w]east wind upon the land all that day, and all that night; and when it was morning, the east wind brought the locusts.

14 And [x]the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt, and rested in all the coasts of Egypt: very grievous were they; [y]before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

15 For [z]they covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened;[1] and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt.

16 ¶ Then Pharaoh called[2] for Moses and Aaron in haste; and he said, [a]I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

17 Now therefore [b]forgive, I pray thee, my sin only this once, [c]and entreat the LORD your God, that he may take away from me [d]this death only.

18 And he went out from Pharaoh, and [e]entreated the LORD.

19 And the LORD turned [f]a mighty strong west wind, which took away the locusts, and cast[3] them into [g]the Red sea;[4] there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt.

20 But [h]the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch[i] out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be [k]darkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt.[5]

22 And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick[l] darkness in all the land of Egypt three days:

23 They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days: [m]but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.

The noise they make in browsing the plants and trees, may be heard at a distance like an army plundering in secret. Fire seems to follow their tracks. . . . Though Bruce, the traveller, who examined its whole extent, declares he saw no sea-weed in it of any kind, and that it must have had this name from the quantity of coral which grows in it, some of it of great size. It is called in the Septuagint the 'Red Sea,' as Bruce conjectures, from Edom, signifying 'red,' and whose territories lay along its coast. The Red sea, called also the Arabic gulf, separates Arabia from Upper Ethiopia and part of Egypt. It is computed to be 350 leagues in length from Suez to the Straits of Babelmandel, and is about 40 leagues in breadth. It is divided into two gulfs, the Elanitic, on the side of Arabia, and the Heroopolitan, on the side of Egypt.

2 It is probable that this revelation was made to Moses while still in the presence of Pharaoh; and there is no necessity for supposing, as some have done, that the two last verses of ch. 10. should be transposed, and placed at the end of ver. 8, of this.

3 The original does not in the least imply, that the Israelites asked the Egyptians to lend them the jewels, or vessels, of gold and silver, as promising to return them; but rather that they requested, or even required them; and as the LORD engaged to dispose the Egyptians to comply with their requirement; for the words may be rendered, 'And the LORD will give the people favour,' &c. ch. 3. 21, 22.—Scott. The Egyptians were probably by this time sensible that their calamities were connected with their cruelties to the Israelites.

24 ¶ And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and said, [n]Go ye, serve the LORD; only [o]let your flocks and your herds be stayed: [p]let your little ones also go with you.

25 And Moses said, Thou must give us also sacrifices[1] and burnt-offerings, that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God.

26 Our [q]cattle also shall go with us; there shall not an hoof be left behind: for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; [r]and we know not with what we must serve the LORD until we come thither.

27 ¶ But the LORD [s]hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go.

28 And Pharaoh said unto him, [t]Get thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more: [u]for in that day thou seest my face thou shalt die.

29 And Moses said, Thou hast spoken well; [v]I will see thy face again no more.

CHAPTER XI.

God's message to the Israelites to borrow jewels of their neighbours, 1—3. Moses threateneth Pharaoh with the death of the first-born, 4—8. Pharaoh is still hardened, 9, 10.

AND the LORD said unto [2]Moses, [a]Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; [b]afterwards he will let you go hence: when he shall let you go, he shall surely [c]thrust you out hence altogether.

2 Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man [d]borrow[3] of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, [e]jewels of silver, and jewels of gold.

3 And [f]the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover, the man [g]Moses was very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.

4 ¶ And Moses said, Thus saith the LORD, [h]About midnight [i]will I go out into the midst of Egypt:

5 And all the first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from [k]the first-born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the first-born of the maidservant that is [l]behind the mill;[4] and all the first-born of beasts.

6 And there shall be [m]a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more.

7 But against any of the children of Israel shall not a [n]dog move his tongue, against man or beast; that ye may know how that the LORD doth put [o]a difference between the Egyptians and Israel.

8 And [p]all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow thee:[1] and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pharaoh in a great anger.[2]

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh[q] shall not hearken unto you; that my [r]wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt.

10 And Moses and Aaron did all these wonders before Pharaoh: and the[s] LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

CHAPTER XII.

The beginning of the year is changed, 1, 2. The passover is instituted, 3—10. The rite of the passover, 11—14. The days of unleavened bread, 15—28. The first-born are slain, 29, 30. The Israelites are driven out of the land, 31—36. They come to Succoth, 37—42. The ordinance of the passover, 43—51.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying,

2 [a]This month shall be unto you the beginning of months:[3] it shall be the first month of the year to you.

3 ¶ [b]Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, [c]In the tenth day of this month they shall [d]take to them every man a lamb,[4] according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house.[5]

4 And if the household be too little for the lamb, let him and his neighbour next unto his house take it, according to the number of the souls: every man, according to his eating, shall make your count for the lamb.

5 Your lamb shall [e]be without blemish, a male of the first year:[6] ye shall take it out from the sheep, or from the goats.

6 And ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth[f] day of the same month: and the[g] whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in the evening.[7]

7 And they shall take of the [h]blood, and strike it on the two side-posts, and on the upper door-post of the [8]houses wherein they shall eat it.

3 The Hebrew months were originally distinguished by their numeral order. Afterwards they acquired distinct names. This month spoken of in this verse, was called Abib, or 'green,' from the green ears of corn at that season, for it began about the vernal equinox, about the latter end of our March and beginning of April.

5 The passover was instituted on this occasion as a token or means of their deliverance, and afterwards as a sacramental memorial of it, and a prefiguration of redemption by the promised Saviour. They were allowed to take a lamb or a kid; Lambs seem to have been preferred. It typified Christ, the 'Lamb of God, without spot or blemish.'

8 This was the token of the Israelites being preserved when the Egyptians were destroyed. It was a type of our acceptance with God, and preservation from the wrath to come, through the application, by the Spirit of God, of the blood of atonement. 'Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us.' The threshold was not sprinkled with the blood, lest anybody should tread upon it; which had been profane, this being an holy thing. This striking or sprinkling of the blood upon the posts, seems to have been peculiar to the first passover, at their going out of Egypt, and not to have been used in after times.

1 Unleavened or unfermented bread, denotes simplicity and purity; bitter herbs, sorrow for sin; the roasting of the lamb, the fire of divine wrath against sin, endured by our Surety. The eating of the whole lamb, denoted the completeness of Christ's sacrifice, and our acceptance of him in all the parts of his mediatorial office & work. The eating it, as directed, ver. 11, denoted that they were pilgrims & strangers, ready to quit Egypt, as believers spiritually are.

8 And they shall [i]eat the flesh in that night, [k]roast with fire, and [l]unleavened bread;[1] and [m]with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

9 Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, [n]but roast with fire; his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof.

10 And ye shall let [o]nothing of it remain until the morning; and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire.

11 ¶ And thus shall ye eat it; with [p]your loins girded, your [q]shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand: and ye shall eat it in haste; [r]it is the LORD's passover.

12 For I will [s]pass through the land of Egypt this night, and [t]will smite all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and [u]against all the gods[2] of Egypt I will execute judgment: [v]I am the LORD.

13 And [w]the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you,[3] when I smite the land of Egypt.

14 And this day shall be unto you [x]for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the LORD throughout your generations: ye shall keep it a feast [y]by an ordinance for ever.[4]

15 ¶ [z]Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whosoever eateth leavened bread, from the first day until the seventh day, [a]that soul shall be cut off from [5]Israel.

16 And in the first day there shall be [b]an holy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be an holy convocation to you; [c]no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat,[6] that only may be done of you.

17 And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread: for [d]in this self-same day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt: therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations [e]by an ordinance for ever.

18 [f]In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even.[1]

19 Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses:[2] for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, even[g] that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, [h]whether he be a stranger, or born in the land.

20 Ye shall eat nothing leavened; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

21 ¶ Then Moses called for all the elders[i] of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out, [k]and take you a lamb,[3] according to your families, and kill the passover.[4]

22 And ye shall take [l]a bunch of hyssop,[5] and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel and the two side-posts with the blood that is in the bason; [m]and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning.

23 For the Lord [n]will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side-posts, the LORD will pass over the door, [o]and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.

24 And ye shall observe this thing for[p] an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever.

25 And it shall come to pass, [q]when ye be come to the land which the LORD will give you, according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service.

26 And it shall come to pass, when your[r] children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service?

27 That ye shall say, [s]It is the sacrifice of the LORD's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people [t]bowed the head, and worshipped.

28 And the children of Israel went away, and did as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, that, [u]at midnight, [v]the LORD smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt, from [w]the first-born of Pharaoh that sat on his throne, unto the first-born of the captive that was in the dungeon,[1] and all the first-born of cattle.

30 And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, and all the Egyptians; and there was [x]a great cry in Egypt: for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

31 ¶ And he called for[2] Moses and Aaron by night, and said, [y]Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, both ye and [z]the children of Israel; and go, serve the LORD, as ye have said.

32 Also take [a]your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and be gone: and [b]bless me also.

33 And the Egyptians were [c]urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste; for they said, [d]We be all dead men.

34 And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their [3]kneading-troughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders.

35 And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses; [e]and they borrowed[4] of the Egyptians jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment.

36 And [f]the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them such things as they required; and they spoiled the Egyptians.

37 ¶ And the children of Israel journeyed from [g]Rameses to Succoth, about [h]six hundred thousand on foot that were men, besides children.

38 [i]And a mixed multitude[5] went up also with them; and flocks and herds, even very much cattle.[6]

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened; because they were [k]thrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victual.

40 ¶ Now the [l]sojourning[7] of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was [m]four hundred and thirty years.[8]

41 And it came to pass, at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even [n]the self-same day[9] it came to pass, that all the [o]hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt.

A.M.2513. B.C.1491

1 The passover was celebrated in the conclusion of the fourteenth day of this month, just before the beginning of the fifteenth day. For the next morning, when the Israelites, immediately after they had eaten the lamb, were hastened out of Egypt, was not part of the fourteenth day but of the fifteenth; as we read, Num. 32. 3.

2 This still makes the precept stricter; that they were not only to abstain from anything leavened, but not so much as to have it in their habitations. And to meet the letter of this precept in the fullest manner, the Jews, on the eve of this festival, institute the most rigorous search thro' every part of their houses, not only removing all leavened bread, but sweeping every part clean, that no crumb of bread shall be left that had any leaven in it. They searched even with candles. This was a token of the diligence with which believers should examine their heart and conduct, and put away all evil from them, before they celebrate divine ordinances.

4 That is, the lamb which was called the paschal or passover lamb. The animal that was to be sacrificed on this occasion, got the name of the institution itself. Thus, the word covenant, is often put for the sacrifice offered in making the covenant; so the rock was Christ, 1 Co. 10. 4; bread and wine the body and blood of Christ. Mark 14. 22, 24. 6 It seems the Israelites made a general rendezvous at Rameses, and from thence marched to some distance, where they pitched their tents; for the word Succoth, signifies tents. The word rendered men, literally denotes strong men; and it is generally supposed, that not only the minors and women, but such men as were incapable of great exertion by reason of age, were excluded in this computation; and the subsequent numberings of the people confirm this supposition. So that the whole company could not be much less than two millions; an immense increase from seventy persons, in little more than two hundred years! 'The mixed multitude' might be those Egyptians, who, from oppression, discontent, connection by marriage, and the like, followed the Israelites. They afterwards became a snare to them. Nu. 11. 4.

8 From the first calling of Abraham, to the departure out of Egypt, exactly four hundred and thirty years seem to have passed. The Septuagint read it, 'the sojourning of Israel..in Egypt, and the land of Canaan.' But this is merely a comment, though a just one.—Scott.

42 It is a night[1] to be much [p]observed unto the LORD for bringing them out from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all the children of Israel in their generations.

43 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is the ordinance of the passover; [q]there shall no stranger eat thereof:

44 But every man's servant that is bought for money, when thou hast circumcised[r] him, then shall he eat thereof.

45 A foreigner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof.[2]

46 In [s]one house shall it be eaten: thou shalt not carry forth ought of the flesh abroad out of the house; [t]neither shall ye break a bone thereof.

47 [u]All the congregation of Israel shall keep it.[3]

48 And when [v]a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, [w]let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he [x]shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.

49 [y]One law shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you.

50 Thus did all the children of Israel: as[z] the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

51 And it came to pass the self-same day, that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt [a]by their armies.

CHAPTER XIII.

The first-born are sanctified to God, 1, 2. The memorial of the passover is commanded, 3—10. The firstlings of man and beast are set apart to God, 11—16. The Israelites go out of Egypt, and carry Joseph's bones with them, 17—19. They come to Etham, 20. God guideth them by a pillar of a cloud, and a pillar of fire, 21, 22.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 [a]Sanctify unto me all the first-born, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and of beast:[4] it is mine.

3 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, Remember[b] this day, in which ye came out from Egypt, [c]out of the house of bondage;[5] for by [d]strength of hand the LORD brought you out from this place: there[e] shall no leavened bread be eaten.

4 This day came ye out, in the month Abib.[f]

5 And it shall be, when the LORD [g]shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which he [h]sware unto thy fathers to give thee, [i]a land flowing with milk and honey, that [k]thou shalt keep this service in this month.

6 [l]Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the LORD.

7 Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall [m]no leavened bread be seen with thee; neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters.[1]

8 And [n]thou shalt shew thy son[2] in that day, saying, This is done because of that which the LORD did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt.

9 And it shall be for [o]a sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes,[3] that the LORD's law [p]may be in thy mouth: for with a [q]strong hand hath the LORD brought thee out of Egypt.

10 Thou shalt therefore [r]keep this ordinance in his season from year to year.

11 ¶ And it shall be, when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, [s]as he sware unto thee and to thy fathers, and shall give it thee,

12 That [t]thou shalt set[4] apart unto the LORD all that [u]openeth the matrix, and every firstling that cometh of a beast which thou hast; the males shall be the LORD's.

13 And every firstling [v]of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb;[5] and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break his neck: and all the first-born of man among thy children [w]shalt thou redeem.

14 ¶ And it shall be, when [x]thy son asketh thee in time to come,[6] saying, What is this? that thou shalt say unto him, By strength of hand the LORD brought us out from Egypt, from the house of bondage:

15 And it came to pass, [y]when Pharaoh would hardly let us go, that [y]the LORD slew all the first-born in the land

2 Every person in each household, including women and children, ate this first passover, none being excepted but uncircumcised males. The law was not yet given; and whatever traditional customs prevailed, no restriction is mentioned in this chapter in respect of ceremonial uncleanness. Yet afterwards, even before the ceremonial law had been explicitly given, we read of those. who 'being defiled by the dead body of a man, could not keep the passover on that day,' (Nu. 9. 6-8.) The ceremonially unclean therefore, were thenceforth excluded. The women and children were not indeed commanded to go up to the tabernacle, where alone it was celebrated; but when they did they joined in this sacred feast. It does not appear that any servant or stranger was compelled to be circumcised; but, till he was circumcised, he must not be allowed to eat the passover. This may intimate, that without regeneration, or 'the circumcision of the heart,' we cannot share the benefits of redemption by the death of Christ; and by parity of reason, we are not meet communicants at the Lord's table.—Scott.

4 In remembrance of the destruction of the first-born of Egypt, both man and beast; and of the preservation of Israel, and their deliverance out of bondage by means of that judgment, the first-born males of the Israelites must be solemnly presented and dedicated to the Lord, and a price was appointed to be paid for their redemption. 1 We have already seen how very careful the Israelites were in searching their houses and purging them of leaven. 'On the arrival of Israel at Succoth, Moses seems to have again enforced the injunctions before given in Egypt, lest the people should forget them; and to show that these institutions were to be considered of perpetual obligation, especially after they were settled in the promised land; for they could not regularly observe them in the wilderness. . . . The first day of unleavened bread was particularly observed, in remembrance of Israel's setting out from Egypt on that day; & many expositors suppose, that they passed the Red sea on the seventh day, and that it was likewise the Sabbath-day.'

2 It is interesting to observe the regard had to the young in the ends & uses of these institutions, that they might, in satisfying their natural curiosity, be instructed from generation to generation in the history of God's wonderful deliverance of their fathers. This is one great end and reason for the public administration of religious ordinances, which may be made highly profitable for the instruction of the young, and to remind all of their vows and obligations.

of Egypt, both the first-born of man, and the first-born of beast: [z]therefore I sacrifice to the LORD all that openeth the matrix, being males; but all the first-born of my children[1] I redeem.

16 And it shall be for [a]a token upon thine hand, [b]and for frontlets between thine eyes:[2] [c]for by strength of hand the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near;[3] for God said, Lest peradventure [d]the people repent when they see war, and they [e]return to Egypt:

18 But God [f]led the people about, through the way of the wilderness of the Red sea. And the children of Israel went up [4]harnessed[5] out of the land of Egypt.

19 And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: [g]for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God[h] will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you.

20 ¶ And [i]they took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness.

21 And [k]the LORD went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light, to go by day and night.

22 He [l]took not away the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the [m]pillar of fire by night,[6] from before the people.

CHAPTER XIV.

God instructeth the Israelites in their journey, 1—4. Pharaoh pursueth after them, 5—9. The Israelites murmur, 10—12. Moses comforteth them, 13, 14. God instructeth Moses, 15—18. The cloud removeth behind the camp, 19, 20. The Israelites pass through the Red sea, which drowneth the Egyptians, 21—31.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, that[a] they turn and encamp before Pihahiroth, between [b]Migdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea.

3 For [c]Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, [d]They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

4 And [e]I will harden Pharaoh's heart, that he shall follow after them; [f]and I will be honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; [g]that the Egyptians may know that I am the LORD. And they did so.

5 ¶ And it was told the king of Egypt that the people fled: and [h]the heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, [i]Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?

6 And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him.

7 And he took [k]six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over every one of them.

8 And [l]the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: and the children of Israel went out [m]with an high hand.

9 But [n]the Egyptians pursued after them, (all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen,[1] and his army,) and overtook them [o]encamping by the sea, beside Pi-hahiroth, before Baal-zephon.

10 ¶ And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the Egyptians marched after them; [p]and they were sore afraid: and the children of Israel [q]cried out unto the LORD.

11 And they said unto Moses, [r]Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness?[2] [s]Wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us forth out of Egypt?

12 [t]Is not this the word that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, [u]Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? [v]For it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, [w]Fear ye not, stand still, and [x]see the salvation of the LORD, which he will shew to you to-day: for the [3]Egyptians whom ye have seen to-day, [y]ye shall see them again no more for ever.

14 [z]The LORD shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace.[4]

15 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [a]Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward:

1 The first-born males alone were thus set apart for God; if a female preceded, the first succeeding male was not considered as the first-born. The firstling males of such animals as were appointed for sacrifice, were offered at the altar, but others must either be exchanged or killed. The ass, as being common, is put for all unclean beasts.

2 The sign upon the hand is an allusion to the artificial modes of fixing something on it, or making some mark or impression upon it to aid the memory. The frontlets were fixed on the forehead. It was customary to write upon them certain texts, such as Ex. 13. 2-10, 11-16; De. 6. 4-9; 11. 13-21; which they superstitiously used as amulets or charms, tied to the forehead, or the hand or arm.

3 The direct road from Egypt to Canaan was only a few, probably three days' march, and was frequently traversed by the sons of Jacob. God, with great wisdom, led the Israelites, however, round about; subjected them to long hardships, lest, on being encountered by the hardy, and well trained Philistines, they should be immediately discouraged & flee before the enemy. God, therefore, led them round about much more to the south, towards the banks of the Red sea.

4 Moses, in all the calmness of an exalted faith, answers the murmurs of the Israelites with the utmost composure, and assures them that they have nothing to do but patiently to wait and see the wonderful deliverance God would work out for them. This would be the last time they should behold the Egyptians as formidable enemies on the way to Canaan; and it is a singular fact, that so completely were the Egyptians subdued by the overthrow of their hosts in the Red sea, that they never again assailed the Israelites during the forty years that they wandered in the wilderness.

16 But [b]lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it; [c]and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

17 And [d]I, behold, [e]I will harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them: [f]and I will get me honour upon Pharaoh,[1] and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

20 And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and it was [k]a cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night.

21 ¶ And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and [l]the LORD caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all the night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

22 And [m]the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were [n]a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.[3]

3 This song of the passage of the Red sea, is, with the exception of certain portions of Genesis, the oldest poem extant. It is not surpassed, if equalled, in boldness of imagery, sublimity of sentiment, or dignity and splendour of style & language. Lowth says, 'it is the most perfect example of that species of the sublime which is wholly dependent on the greatness of the conceptions, and the dignity of the language,' &c. The sacred hymns of the Hebrews were alternately sung by opposite choirs. The one choir usually performed the hymn itself, while the other sung a particular distich which was regularly interposed at stated intervals; see ver. 20. Miriam responded to the choir of men.

27 And Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, [y]and the sea returned to his strength when the morning appeared; and the Egyptians fled against it; [z]and the LORD [1]overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea.

28 And [a]the waters returned, and covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them: there [b]remained not so much as one of them.

29 But the children of Israel [c]walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea; and the waters were [d]a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

30 Thus [e]the LORD saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians; and Israel [f]saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea-shore.

31 And Israel saw that great [2]work which the LORD did upon the Egyptians; and the people [g]feared the LORD, and [h]believed the LORD, and his servant Moses.

CHAPTER XV.

Moses' song, 1—19. Miriam and the women join in it, 20, 21. The people want water, 22. The waters at Marah are bitter; a tree sweeteneth them, 23—26. They remove to Elim, 27.

THEN [a]sang Moses and the children of Israel this song[3] unto the LORD, and spake, saying, I will sing unto the LORD, [b]for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

2 The LORD is my [c]strength and [d]song, and he is become [e]my salvation: he is [f]my God, and I will prepare him [g]an habitation; my [h]father's God, and I will [i]exalt him.

3 The LORD is [k]a man of war: [l]the LORD is his name.

4 Pharaoh's [m]chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea: his [n]chosen captains also are drowned in the Red sea.

5 The [o]depths have covered them: [p]they sank into the bottom as a stone.

6 Thy [q]right hand, O LORD, is become glorious in power: thy right hand, O LORD, hath [r]dashed in pieces the enemy.

7 And in [s]the greatness of thine excellency thou hast overthrown [t]them that rose up against thee: thou sentest forth thy wrath, which [u]consumed them as stubble.

the waters were gathered together, the[w] floods stood upright as an heap, and the depths were congealed[1] in the heart of the sea.

9 The enemy said, [x]I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil; my lust shall be satisfied upon them; I will draw my sword, my hand shall destroy them.[2]

10 Thou didst [y]blow with thy wind, the[z] sea covered them; [a]they sank as lead in the mighty waters.

11 Who is [b]like unto thee, O LORD, among the gods?[3] who is like thee, glorious[c] in holiness, [d]fearful in praises, doing wonders?

12 Thou [e]stretchedst out thy right hand, the earth swallowed them.

13 Thou [f]in thy mercy hast [g]led forth the people which thou hast redeemed: thou hast [h]guided them in thy strength unto thy [i]holy habitation.

14 The people shall [k]hear, and be afraid: sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants [l]of Palestina.

15 Then the [m]dukes of Edom shall be amazed; the mighty men [n]of Moab, trembling shall take hold upon them: all[o] the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt[p] away.

16 Fear and [q]dread shall fall upon them: by the greatness of thine arm they shall be as [r]still as a stone;[4] till thy people pass over, O LORD, till the people pass over, [s]which thou hast purchased.

17 Thou shalt bring them in, and plant[t] them in the [u]mountain of thine inheritance,[5] in the place, O LORD, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in; in the sanctuary, O LORD, which thy hands have established.

18 The [v]LORD shall reign for ever and ever.[6]

19 For the [w]horse of Pharaoh went in with his chariots and with his horsemen into the sea, and the LORD [x]brought again the waters of the sea upon them: but the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea.

20 ¶ And Miriam the [y]prophetess,[7] the [z]sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and [a]all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances.

4 We are informed in another place, (Nu. 33. 10-12,) that the Israelites marched back to the Red sea, when they left Elim. Perhaps the Lord saw good to lead them thither again; in order to remind them of his past mercies, and to renew the impressions made at first on their mind, which were in great measure erased at Marah. They however arrived in the desert of Sin, not far from Sinai, exactly a month after they set off from Egypt.—Scott.

5 It is distressing to see their ingratitude & unbelief after all the mighty works of the Lord. Are we better than they? No, in no wise.

[c]Sing ye to the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

22 ¶ So Moses brought Israel from the Red sea; and they went out into the [d]wilderness of Shur;[1] and they went [e]three days in the wilderness, and found no water.

23 ¶ And when they came to [f]Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter: therefore the name of it was called Marah.[2]

24 And the people [g]murmured against Moses, saying, [h]What shall we drink?

25 And he [i]cried unto the LORD; and the LORD shewed him [k]a tree, which when he had cast into the waters, the waters were made sweet: there he made for them [l]a statute and an ordinance, and there he [m]proved them,

26 And said, [n]If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, [o]and wilt do that which is right in his sight, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of these [p]diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians: [q]for I am the LORD that healeth thee.

27 ¶ And they came to [r]Elim, where were twelve wells of water, and threescore and ten palm-trees:[3] and they encamped there by the waters.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Israelites come to Sin, and murmur for want of bread, 1—3. God promiseth them bread and flesh from heaven, 4—12. Quails and manna are sent, 13—15. The ordering of the manna, 16—26. It was not to be found on the sabbath, 27—31. An omer of it is preserved, 32—36.

AND they [a]took their journey from Elim; and all the congregation of the children of Israel came unto the wilderness of [b]Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of Egypt.[4]

2 And the [c]whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness.

3 And the children of Israel said unto them, [d]Would to God [e]we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the [f]flesh-pots, and when we did eat bread to the full! for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, [g]to kill this whole assembly with [h]hunger.

4 ¶ Then said the LORD unto Moses, Behold, [i]I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a certain rate[1] every day, that I may [k]prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no.[2]

5 And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall [l]prepare that which they bring in; [m]and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily.[3]

6 And Moses and Aaron said unto all the children of Israel, At [n]even, then ye shall know that [o]the LORD hath brought you out from the land of Egypt.

7 And in [p]the morning, then [q]ye shall see the glory[4] of the LORD; for that he heareth your murmurings against the LORD: and [r]what are we, that ye murmur against us?

8 And Moses said, This shall be, when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full; for that [s]the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him: and what are we? your murmurings are not against us, but [t]against the LORD.[5]

9 ¶ And Moses spake unto Aaron, Say unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, [u]Come near before the LORD: for he hath [v]heard your murmurings.

10 And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, [w]that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the LORD [x]appeared in the cloud.[6]

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel: speak unto them, saying, At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and [y]ye shall know that I am the LORD your God.

13 And it came to pass, that at even the[z] quails[7] came up, and covered the camp; and in the morning the dew lay round about the host.

14 And when [a]the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay a small round thing, as small as [b]the hoar frost on the ground.

15 And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, It [1]is [c]manna:[2] for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, [d]This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat.

16 ¶ This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, Gather of it every man according to his eating, an [e]omer for every man,[3] according to the number of your persons;[4] take ye every man for them which are in his tents.

17 And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less.

18 And when they did mete it with an omer, [f]he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack: they gathered every man according to his eating.[5]

19 And Moses said, Let no man [g]leave of it till the morning.[6]

20 Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it [h]bred worms, and stank: [i]and Moses was wroth with them.

21 And they gathered it every [k]morning, every man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, that [l]on the sixth day[4] they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for one man: and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses.

23 And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath said, Tomorrow is the [m]rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD: [n]bake that which ye will bake to-day, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over lay up for you, to be kept until the morning.

24 And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade; [o]and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein.

25 And Moses said, Eat that today; for to-day is [p]a sabbath unto the LORD: to-day ye shall not find it in the field.

26 [q]Six days ye shall gather it; but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none.

2 They profess that it is their distress that makes them murmur. God is about miraculously to supply their wants, and thus to prove, that when they murmur, it is through their perverse wickedness. The manna came down from heaven as rain or dew, and so appeared on the ground. It might therefore be called 'bread from heaven.' It was a type of Christ the true Bread; 'the living Bread, who came down from heaven to give life to the world.' See John 6. 30–35, 47–51.

4 This passage, from the 22d to the 30th verse inclusive, is exceedingly important, as fixing the moral obligation of the Sabbath. The whole people, tho' they knew that on ordinary occasions, if they gathered more than the fixed quantity, it 'bred worms and stank:' yet, on the sixth day, as if by one consent, they gather double; a clear proof that the Sabbath was previously known to them. Yet, as no particular command had been given, the overseers resort to Moses. He addresses them in language that most plainly implies that the Sabbath was no new thing to them.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, that there went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, [r]and they found none.

28 And the LORD said unto Moses, How[s] long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws?

29 See, for that the LORD [t]hath given you the sabbath,[1] therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days: [u]abide ye every man in his place; let no man go out of his place on the seventh day.

32 ¶ And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commandeth, Fill[y] an omer of it, to be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread wherewith I have fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt.

33 And Moses said unto Aaron, Take[z] a pot, and put an omer full of manna therein, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations.

34 As the LORD commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up before the [a]testimony,[2] to be kept.

35 And the children of Israel did eat manna [b]forty years, [c]until they came to a land inhabited: they did eat manna until they came unto [d]the borders of the land of Canaan.

CHAPTER XVII.

The people murmur for water at Rephidim, 1—4. God sendeth them for water to the rock in Horeb, 5—7. Amalek is overcome by the holding up of Moses' hands, 8—14. Moses buildeth the altar JEHOVAH-nissi, 15, 16.

AND all the congregation of the children of Israel journeyed from the wilderness of [a]Sin, after their journeys, according to the commandment of the LORD, and pitched in [b]Rephidim: and there was no water for the people to drink.

2 Wherefore [c]the people did chide with Moses, and said, [d]Give us water that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why chide ye with me? [e]Wherefore do ye tempt the LORD?[1]

3 And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore is this that [f]thou hast brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us, and our children, and our cattle, with thirst?[2]

4 And Moses [g]cried unto the LORD, saying, What shall I do unto this people? They be [h]almost ready to stone me.

5 And the LORD said unto Moses, [i]Go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and [k]thy rod, wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thine hand, and go.

6 Behold, [l]I will stand before thee there upon the rock [m]in Horeb; [n]and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, [o]that the people may drink.[3] And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.

7 And he called the name of the place Massah,[4] and Meribah,[5] because of the [p]chiding of the children of Israel, and because [q]they tempted the LORD, saying, [r]Is the LORD among us, or [6]not?

8 ¶ Then came [s]Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim.[7]

9 And Moses said [t]unto [8]Joshua, [u]Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: to-morrow I will stand on the top of the hill, with [v]the rod of God in mine hand.

10 So [w]Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: [x]and Moses, Aaron, and [y]Hur, went up to the top of the hill.

11 And it came to pass, when [z]Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed; and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.

12 But Moses' [a]hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur [b]stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun.

13 And [c]Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword.

14 And the LORD said unto Moses, Write this for a [d]memorial in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua;

1 From the 23d to the 30th verse, Moses shows that it was a day well known to them all, and not appointed for the first time. 'To-morrow is (not shall be) the rest of the holy Sabbath.' 'Eat that to-day; for to-day is a Sabbath unto the Lord; to-day ye shall not find it in the field;' ver. 26, 'six days shall ye gather it; but on the seventh day, the Sabbath, in it there shall be none.' And when any of them had violated the Sabbath by gathering the manna, the Lord said, 'How long refuse ye to keep my commandments & my laws;' language clearly demonstrative that the Sabbath had been previously 'given' by the Almighty. And of this we have no other account than in Ge. ch. ii. demonstrating that it was not an institution of the Mosaic or Jewish temporary dispensation; see ver. 29 also. This language as plainly refers to a well known existing institution, as if any of us should propose to labour for our daily bread on the day following our Saturday, & one should say, That must not be, 'to-morrow is the Sabbath.' God here works three miracles to honour the Sabbath. Double the quantity fell the day before; none fell on Sabbath; whatthey kept for that day did not corrupt.

2 The eduth, or testimony, belonged properly to the tabernacle, but that was not yet built. Some are of opinion that the tabernacle, built under the direction of Moses, was only a renewal of one that had existed in the patriarchal times. The word signifies reference to something beyond itself: thus the tabernacle, the manna, the tables of stone, Aaron's rod, &c. all bore reference & testimony to that spiritual good which was yet to come, viz. Jesus Christ and his salvation.

for[e] I will utterly put out [f]the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven.[1]

15 And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it JEHOVAH-nissi:[2]

16 For he said, Because[3] the [4]LORD hath sworn,[5] that the LORD [g]will have war with Amalek from generation to generation.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Jethro bringeth to Moses his wife and two sons, 1—6. Moses entertaineth him, 7—12. Jethro's counsel is accepted, 13—26. Jethro departeth, 27.

WHEN [a]Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses' father-in-law, [b]heard of all that [c]God had [d]done for Moses, and for Israel his people, and that the LORD had brought Israel out of Egypt;

2 Then Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took [e]Zipporah, Moses' wife, after he had sent her back,[6]

3 And her [f]two sons; of which the name of the one was Gershom;[7] for he said, I have been an alien in a strange land:

4 And the name of the other was Eliezer;[8] for the God of my father, said he, was mine help, and [g]delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh.

5 And Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, came with his sons and his wife unto Moses into the wilderness, where he encamped at the [h]mount of God:

6 And he said unto Moses, I thy father-in-law Jethro am come unto thee, and thy wife, and her two sons with her.

7 ¶ And Moses [i]went out to meet his father-in-law, and [k]did obeisance, and kissed[l] him; and they asked each other of their welfare:[9] and they came into the tent.

8 And Moses [m]told his father-in-law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh, and to the Egyptians, for Israel's sake, [n]and all the travail that had come upon them[10] by the way, and how [o]the LORD delivered them.

9 ¶ And Jethro [p]rejoiced for all the goodness which the LORD had done to Israel, whom he had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians.

10 And Jethro said, [q]Blessed be the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh; who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.

11 Now [r]I know that [s]the LORD is greater than all gods: for [t]in the thing wherein they dealt [u]proudly he was above them.[1]

12 And Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, [v]took a burnt-offering and sacrifices[2] for God: and [w]Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel, to [x]eat bread with Moses' father-in-law before God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses [y]sat to judge the people: and the people stood by Moses from the morning unto the evening.

14 And when Moses' father-in-law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? Why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto evening?

15 And Moses said unto his father-in-law, Because the people come unto me [z]to enquire of God.

16 When they have [a]a matter, they come unto me; and I judge between one and another,[3] and I do [b]make them know the statutes of God, and his laws.

17 And Moses' father-in-law said unto him, The thing that thou doest is not good.

18 Thou wilt[4] surely [c]wear away, both thou and this people that is with thee: for this thing is too heavy for thee; [d]thou art not able to perform it thyself alone.

19 [e]Hearken now unto my voice, I will give thee counsel, and [f]God shall be with thee: [g]Be thou for the people to God-ward, that thou mayest bring the causes unto God:

20 And thou shalt [h]teach them ordinances and laws, and shalt shew them [i]the way wherein they must walk, and the [k]work that they must do.

21 Moreover, [l]thou shalt provide out of all the people [m]able men, [n]such as fear God, [o]men of truth, [p]hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be [q]rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.

22 And let them judge the people [r]at all seasons: and it shall be, that every [s]great matter they shall bring unto thee,

1 The joy and praise of Jethro, for the mercies shown by the Lord to Israel, was a remarkable contrast to Israel's murmurs and rebellion. He declared that his faith was greatly confirmed, & his heart encouraged in worshipping the God of Israel, as distinguished from all idols, by this decided victory, which JEHOVAH had obtained over Pharaoh, the Egyptians, and the idols of Egypt.

but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they[t] shall bear the burden with thee.

23 If thou shalt do this thing, and God[u] command thee so, then thou shalt be able to endure, [v]and all this people shall also go to their place in peace.

24 So [w]Moses hearkened to the voice of his father-in-law, and did all that he had said.

25 And Moses [x]chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.[1]

26 And they judged the people [y]at all seasons: [z]the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.

27 ¶ And Moses [a]let his father-in-law depart;[2] and he went his way into his own land.

CHAPTER XIX.

The people come to Sinai, 1, 2. God's message by Moses unto the people out of the mount, 3—6. The people's answer returned again, 7—9. The people are ordered to be prepared against the third day, 10—11. The mountain must not be touched, 12—15. The fearful presence of God upon the mount, 16—25.

IN [a]the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day came[b] they into the wilderness of Sinai.[3]

2 For they were departed from [c]Rephidim, and were come to the desert of Sinai, and had pitched in the wilderness: and there Israel [d]camped before the mount.

3 ¶ And Moses [e]went up unto God, and the LORD [f]called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel;

4 Ye have [g]seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how [h]I bare you on eagles' wings,[4] and brought you unto myself.

5 Now therefore, [i]if ye will obey my voice indeed, and [k]keep my covenant,[5] then ye shall be [l]a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for [m]all the earth is mine.

6 And ye shall be unto me [n]a kingdom of priests, [o]and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel.

7 ¶ And Moses came, and called for [p]the elders of the people, [q]and laid before their faces all these words which the LORD commanded him.

8 And all the people [r]answered together, and said, All that the LORD hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the LORD.[1]

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, [s]Lo, I come unto thee in a thick [2]cloud, [t]that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and [u]believe thee for ever. And Moses told the words of the people unto the LORD.

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Go unto the people, and [v]sanctify them to-day and to-morrow, and let them [w]wash their clothes,[3]

11 And be ready against the third day: for the third day [x]the LORD will come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Sinai.

12 And thou shalt [y]set bounds unto the people round about, saying, [z]Take heed to yourselves, that ye go not up into the mount, [a]or touch the border of it: whosoever toucheth the mount shall be surely put to death:

13 There shall not an hand touch it, but he shall surely be stoned, or shot through; [b]whether it be beast or man, it shall not live: [c]when the [4]trumpet soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount.

14 ¶ And Moses went down from the mount unto the people, [d]and sanctified the people; and they washed their clothes.

15 And he said unto the people, [e]Be ready against [f]the third day: [g]come not at your wives.

16 And it came to pass on the third day, in the morning, that there were [h]thunders and lightnings, and a [i]thick cloud upon the mount, and the [k]voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that [l]all the people that was in the camp trembled.[5]

17 And [m]Moses brought forth the people out of the camp to meet with God; and they stood at the nether part of the mount.

18 And [n]mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it [o]in fire; and the smoke

1 The magistrates, thus constituted over thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens, were distinct persons from the seventy elders chosen on another occasion, and far more numerous, (Nu. 11. 16.) Probably this arrangement was permanent in Israel, at least as far as the rulers over thousands, (Ju. 6. 15; marg. Mic. 5. 2.)—Scott. Lord Bacon thinks, in his Essay on English Government, P. 1. p. 70, that Alfred the Great took from hence his idea of the old Saxon constitution of sheriffs in counties, &c., which closely resembled this.

thereof ascended [p]as the smoke of a furnace, and the [q]whole mount quaked greatly.

19 And [r]when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder,[1] [s]Moses spake, and God[t] answered him by a voice.

20 And [u]the LORD came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the LORD called Moses up to the top of the mount; and [v]Moses went up.

21 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go down, charge[2] the people, lest they break[w] through unto the LORD to gaze, and many of them perish.

22 And let [x]the priests also, which come near to the LORD, [y]sanctify themselves, lest the LORD [z]break forth upon them.

23 And Moses said unto the LORD, The people cannot come up to mount Sinai: for thou chargedst us, saying, Set[a] bounds about the mount, and sanctify it.

24 And the LORD said unto him, Away, get thee down, [b]and thou shalt come up, thou, and Aaron with thee: but[c] let not the priests and the people break through to come up unto the LORD, [d]lest he break forth upon them.

25 So [e]Moses went down unto the people, and spake unto them.

The ten commandments, 1, 2. The first table, 3—11. The second table, 12—17. The people are afraid, 18, 19. Moses comforteth them, 20, 21. Idolatry is forbidden, 22, 23. Of what sort the altar should be, 24—26.

AND [a]God spake all these words, saying,

2 I am [b]the LORD thy God, which have [c]brought thee out of the land of Egypt, [d]out of the house of [3]bondage.

3 Thou shalt have [e]no other gods before me.

4 Thou [f]shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth:

5 Thou shalt not [g]bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: [h]for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, [i]visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation[k] of them that hate me;

6 And [l]shewing mercy unto thousands of them that [m]love me, and keep my commandments.

7 Thou shalt not [n]take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

8 [o]Remember the sabbath-day, to keep it holy.

9 [p]Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work:

10 But [q]the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it [r]thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, [s]thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor [t]thy stranger that is within thy gates:

11 For in [u]six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath-day, and [v]hallowed it.

12 ¶ [w]Honour thy father and thy mother; [x]that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

13 [y]Thou shalt not kill.

14 [z]Thou shalt not commit adultery.

15 [a]Thou shalt not steal.

16 [b]Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

17 [c]Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's [d]wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that [e]is thy neighbour's.

18 ¶ And [f]all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and, when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off.

19 And they said unto Moses, [g]Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but [h]let not God speak with us, lest we die.

20 And Moses said unto the people, [i]Fear not: for God is come to [k]prove you, and that [l]his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

21 And [m]the people stood afar off: and Moses drew near unto the [n]thick darkness where God was.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, Ye have seen that [o]I have talked with you from heaven.

23 Ye [r]shall not make with me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold.[1]

24 ¶ An [s]altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy [t]burnt-offerings, and thy peace-offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen. In [u]all places where I record my name I will come unto thee, and I will [v]bless thee.[2]

25 And [w]if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone:[3] for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it.

26 Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that [x]thy nakedness be not discovered thereon.[4]

CHAPTER XXI.

Laws for men-servants, 1—4. For the servant whose ear is bored, 5, 6. For women-servants, 7—11. For man-slaughter, 12—15. For stealers of men, 16. For cursers of parents, 17. For smiters, 18—21. For a hurt by chance, 22—27. For an ox that goreth, 28—32. For him that is an occasion of harm, 33—36.

NOW these are [a]the judgments[5] [b]which thou shalt set before them.

2 If thou buy [c]an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve; [d]and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.

3 If he came in by himself,[6] he shall go out by himself; if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him.

4 If his master have given him a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself.

5 And [e]if the servant shall plainly say,[7] I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go out free:

6 Then his master shall bring him unto [f]the judges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door-post: and his master shall [g]bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him [h]for ever.[8]

7 ¶ And if a man [i]sell his daughter to be a maid-servant, she shall not go out as the men-servants do.

8 If she please[9] not her master, [k]who hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, seeing [l]he hath dealt deceitfully with her.

9 And if he have betrothed her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters.

1 This is to intimate, that though they professed to worship God, they were neither to conjoin with his worship that of any other gods, nor honour him by the worship of images, however costly the materials; and to prevent any such abuse, they are commanded in the succeeding verses to build altars of earth, or rough unhewn stone, that they might not be tempted to sculpture figures upon them, nor imitate thereby the idolatry of the heathen.

2 It was murder if a man slew another wilfully, whether from previous resentment or sudden anger. When it was what we call, by accident, or more properly, when 'God delivered him into his hand,' in his providence, thro' his instrumentality, took away the life which he gave, he was to appoint cities of refuge for him to flee to. If the murder was designedly perpetrated, the criminal who took refuge, or a priest who ministered at the altar, must be dragged therefrom and suffer death.

his servant, or the eye of his maid, that it perish; he shall let him go free for his eye's sake.

27 And if he smite out his man-servant's tooth, or his maid-servant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.[1]

28 ¶ If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then [m]the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit.

29 But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and [n]his owner also shall be put to death.[2]

30 If there be laid on him a sum of money, then he shall give, [o]for the ransom of his life, whatsoever is laid upon him.

31 Whether he have gored a son, or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him.

32 If the ox shall push a man-servant, or maid-servant; he shall give unto their master [p]thirty shekels of silver, [q]and the ox shall be stoned.

33 ¶ And if a man shall [r]open a pit, or if a man shall dig a pit, and not cover it, and an ox or an ass fall therein;

34 The [s]owner of the pit shall make it good, and give money unto the owner of them; and the dead beast shall be his.

35 ¶ And if one man's ox hurt another's, that he die; then they shall sell the live ox, and divide the money of it; and the dead ox also they shall divide.

36 Or [t]if it be known that the ox hath used to push in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox; and the dead shall be his own.

1 It appears from the words of our Saviour, Mat. 5. 38-40, that the words, from the 22d to the 25th verse inclusive, were interpreted by the Jews to justify private revenge. But, tho' they admitted the principle of like for like, yet they were not 'allowances for private revenge; but laws to regulate the magistrate's decision, who might go thus far if the heinousness of the offence required it, but not farther, & it seems reasonable to suppose, that they were also allowed to abate of this rigour when alleviating circumstances rendered it proper. As a variety of mischiefs are stated, some of which could scarcely happen in the case referred to, it is likely that various other suits for personal injuries were determined by the same rule.' Marg. ref.—Scott. Restitution was to be made to the slave not by giving eye for eye, or tooth for tooth, but by the freedom of the slave. This was a proper restraint upon the cruelty of masters, & a proper relief and protection to the slave from violence and oppression.

2 This law shows, in a very striking manner, the value put upon human life by the Author of our being. Even the unconscious beast that killed a human being was to be put to death, and the man who showed so little regard to human life as to leave his ox at large after he was warned that his ox was wont to be dangerous, and the death of a human being the result, the owner of the ox was to be held responsible with his own life, and if the person gored was a slave, full compensation was to be made to his master. The subsequent laws in this chapter are equally founded on principles of the strictest justice.

1 The reason of the distinction in this law is that, in the night, the robbery might be considered an assault upon the life as well as on the property, and in the terror and confusion of the night, life was more endangered. In both cases the care of human life is remarkable, and fully justifying the principle now very generally introduced into our law, that only crimes implying the taking away of life are punishable with death.

5 If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee[4] lying under his burden, and wouldest forbear to help him;[5] thou shalt surely help with him.

6 ¶ Thou shalt not [g]wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause.

7 Keep thee [h]far from a false matter; and the [i]innocent and righteous slay thou not: [k]for I will not justify the wicked.

8 ¶ And [l]thou shalt take no gift; for the gift blindeth the wise,[6] and perverteth the words of the righteous.

9 ¶ Also [m]thou shalt not oppress a stranger: for [n]ye know the heart[7] of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers[8] in the land of Egypt.

10 ¶ And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof:

11 But [o]the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beasts of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy olive-yard.[9]

12 ¶ [p]Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest; that thine ox and thine ass may rest, [q]and the son of thy handmaid and the stranger may be refreshed.

13 ¶ And in all things that I have said unto you [r]be circumspect: and [s]make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.[10]

14 [t]Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year.

15 Thou shalt keep [u]the feast of unleavened bread: (thou shalt eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded thee, in the time appointed of the month Abib; for in it thou camest out from Egypt; [v]and none shall appear before me empty:)

16 And the [w]feast of harvest, the first-fruits of thy labours, which thou hast sown in thy field: and the [x]feast of in-gathering, which is in the end of the year, when thou hast gathered in thy labours out of the field.

17 Three times in the year [y]all thy males shall appear before the LORD God.

18 ¶ Thou shalt not offer the [z]blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my sacrifice[1] [a]remain until the morning.

19 The [b]first of the first-fruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe [c]a kid in his mother's milk.

20 ¶ Behold, I send an [d]Angel[2] before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have [e]prepared.

21 [f]Beware of him, and obey his voice, [g]provoke him not; for [h]he will not pardon your transgressions: for [i]my name is in him.

22 But if thou shalt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak; then I will be [k]an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary[3] unto thine adversaries.

23 For mine Angel shall go before thee, and bring [l]thee in unto the Amorites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; and I will cut them off.

24 Thou [m]shalt not bow down to their gods, nor serve them, nor [n]do after their works; but thou shalt utterly [o]overthrow them, and quite break down their images.

25 And [p]ye shall serve the LORD your God, and [q]he shall bless thy bread, and thy water; and I [r]will take sickness away from the midst of thee.

26 ¶ There [s]shall nothing cast their young, nor be barren, in thy land: [t]the number of thy days I will fulfil.

27 I will send [u]my fear[1] before thee, and will destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come; and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs[2] unto thee.

28 And I will send [v]hornets[3] before thee, which shall drive out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite, from before thee.

29 I will not drive them out from before thee [w]in one year; lest the land become desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee.

30 By little and little I will drive them out from before thee, until thou be increased, and inherit the land.

31 And [z]I will set thy bounds from the Red sea even unto the sea of the Philistines, and from the desert unto the river:[4] for I will [y]deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hand; and thou shalt drive them out before thee.

32 Thou [z]shalt make no covenant with them, [a]nor with their gods.

33 They shall not dwell in thy land, lest [b]they make thee sin against me: for if thou serve their gods, [c]it will surely be a snare unto thee.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Moses is called up into the mountain, 1, 2. The people promise obedience, 3. Moses buildeth an altar, and twelve pillars, 4, 5. He sprinkleth the blood of the covenant, 6—8. The glory of God appeareth, 9—13. Aaron and Hur have the charge of the people, 14. Moses goeth into the mount, where he continueth forty days and forty nights, 15—18.

AND he said unto Moses, [a]Come [5]up unto the LORD, thou, and Aaron, [b]Nadab and Abihu, and [c]seventy of the elders of Israel; and worship ye afar off.

2 And Moses [d]alone shall come near the LORD;[6] but they shall not come nigh, neither shall the people go up with him.

3 ¶ And Moses came and told the people all the words of the LORD, and [e]all the judgments: and all the people answered with one voice, and said, [f]All the words which the LORD hath said will we do.

4 And Moses [g]wrote all the words of the LORD, and rose up early in the morning, [h]and builded an altar under the hill, and [i]twelve pillars, [k]according to the twelve tribes of Israel.[7]

5 And he sent [l]young men of the children of Israel, which offered [m]burnt-offerings, and sacrificed [n]peace-offerings of oxen unto the LORD.

2 The ANGEL who had the 'name,' or perfections of JEHOVAH, in Him, who had power to forgive or not to forgive, could be no other than the Great Angel Jehovah, who so often appeared to the patriarchs. We cannot help here quoting that singular comment on the words by Philo, the Jew, who was no friend to Christianity. 'God, as the shepherd and king, conducts all things according to law and righteousness, having established over them his right WORD, his only BEGOTTEN SON, who, as the viceroy of the Great King, takes care of, and ministers to, this sacred flock. For it is somewhere said, (ch. 23. 20.) Behold I AM, and I will send my ANGEL before thy face to keep thee in the way.'

5 From ch.19.24; 20. 21, Moses & Aaron were already on the mountain, and there Moses received the laws contained in ch. 20. 22, to the end of the 22d chapter. They were then to go down to state these laws to the people; and when the people had consented to them, and the solemn covenant was ratified by the sprinkling of the blood of the sacrifices, they were again to ascend with the sons of Aaron & seventy elders of Israel.

6 And Moses took half of the blood, and put it in basons; and half of [o]the blood he sprinkled [p]on the altar.

7 And he took [q]the book of the covenant, and [r]read in the audience of the people: and they said, [s]All that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.

8 And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled[t] it on the people, and said, Behold [u]the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you concerning all these words.[1]

9 ¶ Then [v]went up Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel;

10 And they [w]saw the God of Israel: and there was under his feet as it were a paved work [x]of a sapphire-stone,[2] and as it were the body of heaven [y]in his clearness.

11 And upon the [z]nobles of the children of Israel he [a]laid not his hand: also [b]they saw God, and [c]did eat and drink.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Come up to me into the mount, and be there: and I will give thee [d]tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written;[3] [e]that thou mayest teach them.

13 And Moses rose up, and [f]his minister Joshua; and Moses went up into the mount of God.

14 And he said unto the elders, Tarry[g] ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and, behold, Aaron and [h]Hur are with you; [i]if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them.

15 ¶ And Moses went up into the mount, and [k]a cloud covered the mount.

16 And [l]the glory of the LORD abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and the [m]seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud.

17 And the sight of the glory of the LORD was [n]like devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel.

18 And Moses [o]went into the midst of the cloud, and gat him up into the mount: and Moses was in the mount forty[p] days and forty nights.

1 We learn, from the epistle to the Hebrews, that the book also was sprinkled with blood. We learn also from the same authority, He. 9. 18-23, that the whole was intended as a type of the manner in which the true Israelites were admitted into covenant with God, through the atoning blood of Christ; and, yielding themselves to his service, willingly receive his commandments as the rule of their subsequent grateful obedience.

3 After the solemn ratification of the national covenant, God gave the law of the ten commandments, which He himself engraved on tables of stone, distinguishing them above the judicial or ritual institutions. The people engaged to obey them, but broke them by their idolatry. The tables of stone were also broken; God renewed them; along with them the ceremonial law was given, which typified redemption by Christ.

7 'The ark of the covenant' was so called, not only as it contained the tables of the law, which were the basis of the national covenant; but also because it was an abiding symbol of God's gracious presence with his people, and typifies those peculiar benefits, which belong to the covenant of peace, mediated by Christ in behalf of the true Israel. It was a chest, made of wood not liable to rot, of about four feet in length, and two feet and a half in breadth and in depth, plated all over, both within and without, with plates of pure gold, having a border, or cornice, of gold round about it; and covered with a covering all of massy gold, which was called, the covering, or 'the propitiatory,' or 'the mercy-seat,' and it was kept firm in its place by the cornice, as the word rendered 'crown' seems here to mean. . . . This was an evident type of Christ, as to his sinless human nature, (which 'saw no corruption,') in personal union with his divine nature, magnifying the law, & covering our transgressions of it, by 'having it in his heart,' obeying it in his life, and atoning for the violations of it by his death.—Scott.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, that [a]they bring[1] me an [2]offering:[3] of every man that giveth it [b]willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering.

3 And this is the offering which ye shall take of them; gold, and silver, and brass,

4 And [c]blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen,[4] and goats' hair,

5 And [d]rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and [e]shittim-wood,

6 [f]Oil for the light, [g]spices for anointing oil, and for sweet incense,

7 [h]Onyx-stones, and stones to be set in the ephod, and in the breast-plate.

8 And let them make me [i]a sanctuary,[5] that [k]I may dwell among them.

9 According to all that I shew thee, after [l]the pattern of the [6]tabernacle, and the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it.

10 ¶ And they shall make [m]an [7]ark of shittim-wood: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

11 And thou shalt [n]overlay it with pure gold, within and without shalt thou overlay it; and shalt make upon it a crown of gold round about.

12 And thou shalt cast [o]four rings of gold for it, and put them in the four corners thereof; and two rings shall be in the one side of it, and two rings in the other side of it.

13 And thou shalt make [p]staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold.

14 And thou shalt put the staves into the rings by the sides of the ark, that the ark may be borne with them.

15 [q]The staves shall be in the rings of the ark; they shall not be taken from it.

16 And thou shalt put into the ark [r]the testimony which I shall give thee.

half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof.

18 And thou shalt make [t]two cherubims of gold: of beaten work shall thou make them, in the two ends of the mercy-seat.

19 And make one cherub on the one end, and the other cherub on the other end; even of the mercy-seat[1] shall ye make the cherubims on the two ends thereof.

20 And the cherubims shall stretch forth their wings on high, [u]covering the mercy-seat with their wings, and their faces shall look one to another; toward[v] the mercy-seat[2] shall the faces of the cherubims be.

21 And thou shalt [w]put the mercy-seat above upon the ark;[3] and [x]in the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee.

22 And there I will meet with thee, and[y] I will commune with thee from above the mercy-seat, from [z]between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, of all things which I will give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel.

23 ¶ Thou shalt also make [a]a table of shittim-wood:[4] two cubits shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

24 And thou shalt [b]overlay it with pure gold, and make thereto a crown of gold round about.

25 And thou shalt make unto it a border of an hand-breadth round about, and thou shalt make [c]a golden crown to the border thereof round about.

26 And thou shalt make for it [d]four rings of gold, and put the rings in the four corners that are on the four feet thereof.

27 Over against the border shall the rings be [e]for places of the staves to bear the table.

28 And thou shalt make the staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold, that [f]the table may be borne with them.

29 And thou shalt make [g]the dishes[5] thereof, and spoons[6] thereof, and covers[7] thereof, and bowls thereof, to cover withal:[8] of pure gold shalt thou make them.

4 This is generally supposed to be a species of white thorn, the acacia horrida, or spina Egyptiaca, which grows abundantly about mount Sinai, the tree of all deserts from the northmost parts of Arabia to the extremity of Ethiopia. It is said to be exceedingly durable & very light, two properties which made it peculiarly fit for making the ark, tables, and boards of the tabernacle. This table bore a great resemblance to the ark. It had rings for the staves to carry it similar to the ark. It differed from the ark in that the staves of it were removed from the rings when at rest.

1 This candlestick, or chandelier, is generally described as having one shaft or stock, with six branches proceeding from it, adorned, at equal distances, with six flowers, like lilies, with as many bowls and knops placed alternately. On each of the branches there was a lamp; and one on the top of the shaft, which occupied the centre, thus there was seven lamps in all, ver. 37. 3 The five curtains shall be [e]coupled together one to another; and other five curtains shall be coupled one to another.

4 And thou shalt make [f]loops of blue upon the edge of the one curtain, from the selvedge in the coupling; and likewise shalt thou make in the uttermost edge of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

5 Fifty loops shalt thou make in the one curtain, and fifty loops shalt thou make in the edge of the curtain that is in the coupling of the second, that the loops may take hold one of another.

6 And thou shalt make fifty [g]taches of gold, and couple the curtains together with the taches; and it shall be one[h] tabernacle.

7 ¶ And thou shalt make [i]curtains of [k]goats' hair,[1] to be [l]a covering upon the tabernacle: [m]eleven curtains shalt thou make.

8 The [n]length of one curtain shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and the eleven curtains shall be all of one measure.

9 And thou shalt couple [o]five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double the sixth curtain in the fore-front of the tabernacle.

10 And thou shalt make [p]fifty loops on the edge of the one curtain that is outmost in the coupling,[2] and fifty loops in the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

11 And thou shalt make fifty taches of brass, and put the taches into the loops, and couple the tent[3] together, that[q] it may be one.

12 And the remnant that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half curtain that remaineth [r]shall hang over the back side of the tabernacle.

13 And [s]a cubit on the one side, and a cubit on the other side,[4] of that which remaineth in the length of the curtains of the tent, it shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle on this side, and on that side, to cover it.

14 And thou shalt make [t]a covering for the tent of [u]rams' skins dyed red, and a covering[5] of badgers' skins.[6]

5 Why there should have been four coverings does not appear. They might have been designed partly for respect; and partly to keep off dust & dirt, and the extremely fine sand which in the desert rises as it were on every breeze; and partly to keep off the intense heat of the sun, which would otherwise have destroyed the poles, bars, &c.
6 In the coverings of the tents the Orientals regard both the stuff and the colour; this royal tent was to be distinguished in both particulars. The curtain, which lay under the beams was the most beautiful and the most costly. On the finest linen stuff were embroidered cherubims of dark blue, purple, and scarlet. Over the under curtain a covering of goats' hair was spread, and to prevent the covering from injury by the dust, two others made of skins were laid over them. 'The whole represents the person and doctrine of Christ, his true church, and all heavenly things, which are outwardly, and to the carnal eye, mean; but are inwardly, and in the sight of God, exceedingly glorious and precious. The secure protection which he prepares for those who are precious in his sight, may also be denoted; & the unity of the whole, formed of so many pieces, and of such different materials, into one covering of the sanctuary, represents the spiritual temple, formed of persons of different nations, dispositions, abilities, and attainments, compacted together by the Spirit of love.'—Scott.

5 The word in the Hebrew is from a root signifying to break or rend; the inner vail of the tabernacle or temple, (2 Ch. 3. 14.) which broke, interrupted, or divided between the holy place and the most holy; the Holy Ghost thus signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest; while as the first tabernacle was standing, compare Heb. 9.8. The vail in the tabernacle was exceedingly costly; it was made of the same materials with the inner covering, blue, purple, scarlet, fine twined linen, embroidered with cherubims, &c. It served to divide the tabernacle into two parts. One, the outermost, called the Holy place; the other, or innermost, called the Holy of Holies, or the most Holy place. In this was deposited the ark of the covenant, and the other things that were laid up by way of memorial. Into this the high priest alone was permitted to enter, and that only once in the year, on the great day of atonement. It was in this inner place that Jehovah manifested Himself between the cherubim.

Morier thus describes the tent of an Eelaut chief, 'It was,'says he, 'composed of a wooden frame of circular laths, which were fixed on the ground and then covered over with large felts, that were fastened down by a cord ornamented by tassels of various colours. A curtain curiously worked by the women, of coarse needle work of various colours, was suspended over the door. In the king of Persia's tent, magnificent perdahs or hangings of needle work, are suspended, as well as on the doors of the great mosques in Turkey. By divine ordinances & protection Christ and his church are separated from the world. — Brown. The tabernacle, when set up, was inclosed in a court, between 50 and 60 yards in length, & between 25 and 30 broad; formed by curtains hung upon brazen pillars, fixed in brazen sockets, after the manner of the boards of the sanctuary; and having an entrance at the east end, similar to the entrance of that building. The curtains for this court were made of fine linen, spun and woven after the manner of the rich curtains of the tabernacle; yet neither dyed nor embroidered as they were; but those that formed the entrance into it, were dyed, and wrought with ornamental needle work, though not with cherubim.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Aaron and his sons are set apart for the priest's office, 1. Holy garments are appointed, 2—5. The ephod, 6—14. The breastplate with twelve precious stones, 15—29. The Urim and Thummim, 30. The robe of the ephod, with pomegranates and bells, 31—35. The plate of the mitre, 36—38. The embroidered coat, 39. The garments for Aaron's sons, 40—43.

AND [a]take thou unto thee Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from [b]among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office, even Aaron, [c]Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's sons.[3]

2 ¶ And thou shalt make [d]holy garments[4] for Aaron thy brother, for [e]glory and for beauty.

3 And thou shalt speak unto all that are [f]wise-hearted, whom I have [g]filled with the spirit of wisdom,[5] that they may make Aaron's garments to consecrate him, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

4 And these are the garments which they shall make; [h]a breastplate, and an [i]ephod, [k]and a robe, and [l]a broidered coat, a [m]mitre, and a girdle: and they shall make holy garments for Aaron thy brother, and his sons, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

5 And they shall take [n]gold, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen.

6 ¶ And they shall make the ephod of gold, of blue, and of purple, of scarlet, and fine twined [o]linen, with cunning work.

7 It shall have the [p]two shoulder-pieces thereof joined at the two edges thereof; and so it shall be joined together.

8 And [q]the curious[6] girdle of the ephod,[7] which is upon it, shall be of the same, according to the work thereof; even of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

9 And thou shalt take two [r]onyx-stones, and [s]grave on them the names of the children of Israel:

10 Six of their names on one stone, and the other six names of the rest on the other stone, [t]according to their birth.

11 With the work of an engraver in stone, like the [u]engravings of a signet, shalt thou engrave the two stones with the names of the children of Israel: thou shalt make them to be set in [v]ouches of gold.

12 And thou shalt put the two stones upon [w]the shoulders of the ephod, for stones of memorial[1] unto the children of Israel; and [x]Aaron shall bear their names before the LORD, upon his two shoulders, for a [y]memorial.

13 And thou shalt make ouches of gold;

14 And two [z]chains of pure gold at the ends; of [a]wreathen work shalt thou make them, and fasten the wreathen chains to the ouches.

15 ¶ And thou shalt make [b]the breastplate of judgment[2] with cunning work; [c]after the work of the ephod thou shalt make it: of gold, of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine twined linen, thou shalt make it.

16 Four-square it shall be, being doubled; a span shall be the length thereof, and a span shall be the breadth thereof.

17 And [d]thou shalt set in it [3]settings of stones, even four rows of stones: the first row shall be [e]a sardius,[4] [f]a topaz, and [g]a carbuncle: this shall be the first row.

18 And the second row shall be an [h]emerald, [i]a sapphire, and [k]a diamond.

19 And the third row [l]a ligure, [m]an agate, and an amethyst.

20 And the fourth row [n]a beryl, and [o]an onyx, and [p]a jasper: they shall be set in gold in their inclosings.[5]

21 And the stones shall be with the names of the children of Israel, [q]twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet; every one with his name shall they be [r]according to the twelve tribes.

2 'The breast-plate of judgment' was so called, because the high priest wore it whenever he consulted the Lord about the concerns of religion and government, in order to deliver the judgment of God to the rulers in the congregation. It was a piece of fine linen cloth, woven, dyed, & embroidered, like the golden ephod, and being doubled, it was a span square. Upon it were fixed 12 precious stones, set in ouches, or sockets, of gold; & on each of them was engraven the name of one of the sons of Israel; these being considered as the representatives of the twelve tribes. It is doubted whether the name of Levi was engraven, as that tribe might be sufficiently represented by the high priest himself; or whether Manasseh and Ephraim had each a separate stone, as forming two tribes; but the text seems to imply, that the names of all Jacob's sons were engraven, and no other.—Scott.

1 The Scriptures no where inform us, what the Urim and Thummim were; nor was any direction given to Moses howtomake them. The original words signify, THE LIGHTS, (or Illuminations,) & THE PERFECTIONS; and a variety of conjectures have been made ou the subject. Some suppose that the precious stones, engraven with the names of the sons of Israel, are meant; which are thus called from their brilliancy; and because they were the most perfect of their kind; but the context seems to imply that something further was intended, and this interpretation is not satisfactory. Others think, that the words URIM & THUMMIM were either wrought in the substance of the breast-plate, or engraven on a plate of gold, and fixed upon it; as HOLINESS TO THE LORD was, upon the mitre; intimating, that divine illumination and strict integrity or soundnessof heart, were requisite in the sacred office of the high priest; or rather, that the clearest light and knowledge, with the most perfect counsel and direction, would be obtained by thus consulting the Lord. This mode of consultation seems to have been little used after the consecration of Solomon's temple, and to have finally ceased after the captivity; till Christ, the great Antitype, arose, as a Priest with URIM and THUMMIM, who communicates to his true Church, from his treasury of divine wisdom and grace, thro' his word,and by his Spirit, all wisdom, knowledge & righteousness, & every perfect gift, in measure sufficient for every emergency. And as the URIM & THUMMIM were on Aaron's heart, whenever he entered the sanctuary to inquire the will of God. . . . So Christ 'appears in the presence of God for us,' and ever bears the interests of hiswhole church and of every believer on his heart, in his unremitting intercession for us. —Scott, whom see.

1 This robe of the ephod was the middle garment, which was under the ephod and above the coat. It was of one piece, like the coat of the Lord Jesus, which was 'without seam, woven from the top throughout,' to denote his perfect obedience. The pomegranates and bells were to denote the fruits and the glad tidings of the gospel of peace and salvation. The priest was enjoined to attend to these emblematical representations under the threatening of death if he neglected them.

2 The mitre was made of linen, wreathed after the manner of a turban, somewhat high. On this mitre was placed a plate or leaf, as that of a flower, of pure gold, with the words HOLINESS TO THE LORD, engraven upon it. It was over the priest's forehead, that every one might see it. This was to declare his sanctity and consecration to the service of Jehovah, and to typify Him who was the HOLY ONE, and consecrated and set apart a priest for evermore.

35 And it shall be upon Aaron to minister: and his sound shall be heard when he [k]goeth in unto the holy place before the LORD, and when he cometh out, that he die not.[1]

36 ¶ And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and [l]grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, [m]HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

37 And thou shalt put it on [n]a blue lace, that it may be upon the mitre: upon the fore-front of [o]the mitre[2] it shall be.

38 And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead, that Aaron may [p]bear the iniquity[3] of the holy things, which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts; and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be [q]accepted before the LORD.

39 ¶ And thou shalt [r]embroider the coat of fine linen, and thou shalt make the mitre of fine linen, and thou shalt make [s]the girdle of [t]needle-work.

40 ¶ And [u]for Aaron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and [v]bonnets shalt thou make for them, [w]for glory and for beauty

41 And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him; and shalt [x]anoint them, [y]and consecrate them,[4] and sanctify them, that they may [z]minister unto me in the priest's office.

42 And thou shalt make them linen [a]breeches to cover their [5]nakedness; from the loins even unto the thighs they shall reach.[6]

43 And they shall be upon Aaron, and upon his sons, when they come in unto the tabernacle of the congregation, or when they come near unto the altar to minister in the holy place; that they [b]bear not iniquity, and die. It shall be [c]a statute for ever[7] unto him, and his seed after him.

Take[c] one young bullock, and two rams without[d] blemish,

2 And [e]unleavened bread, and cakes unleavened [f]tempered with oil, and wafers[g] unleavened anointed with oil; of wheaten flour shalt thou make them.

3 And thou shalt put them into one basket, and bring them [h]in the basket, with the bullock and the two rams.

4 And Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring [i]unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shalt [k]wash them with water.

5 And thou shalt take the [l]garments, and put upon Aaron the coat, and the robe of the ephod, and the ephod, and the breastplate, and gird him with the curious girdle of the ephod:

6 And thou shalt put the [m]mitre upon his head, and put the holy crown[1] upon the mitre.

7 Then shalt thou take the [n]anointing oil, and pour it upon his head, and anoint him.[2]

8 And thou shalt bring [o]his sons, and put coats upon them.

9 And thou shalt gird them with girdles, (Aaron and his sons,) and put[3] the bonnets on them; and [p]the priest's office shall be theirs for a perpetual statute: and thou shalt [4]consecrate[5] Aaron and his sons.

10 And thou shalt [q]cause a bullock to be brought before the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron and his sons shall [r]put their hands upon the head of the bullock.

11 And [s]thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, by the [t]door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

12 And thou shalt take of [u]the blood of the bullock, and put it upon [v]the horns of the altar with thy finger, and pour[w] all the blood beside the bottom of the altar.

13 And thou shalt take [x]all the fat that covereth the inwards, [y]and the caul[5] that is above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and [z]burn them upon the altar.

14 But [a]the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: [b]it is a sin-offering.

15 ¶ Thou shalt also take [c]one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall [d]put their hands upon the head of the ram.

16 And [e]thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar.

17 And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and [f]wash the inwards of him, and his legs, and put them unto[1] his pieces, and unto his head.

18 And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is [g]a burnt-offering[2] unto the LORD: it is [h]a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

19 And thou shalt take [i]the other ram; [k]and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.

20 Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of his blood, and [l]put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot,[3] and [m]sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

21 And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of [n]the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he [o]shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

22 Also [p]thou shalt take of the ram the fat, and [q]the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and [r]the right shoulder; for it is a ram of [4]consecration:

23 And [s]one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer out of the basket of the unleavened bread that is before the LORD.

24 And thou shalt [t]put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons, and shalt wave[5] them for [u]a wave-offering before the LORD.

25 And [v]thou shalt receive them of their hands, and burn them upon the altar for a burnt-offering, [w]for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is [x]an offering made by fire unto the LORD.[6]

26 And thou shalt take the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and wave it for a wave-offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy part.

1 This was the plate of gold on which was inscribed HOLINESS TO THE LORD. This not only showed his purity and consecration to the priesthood, but his being typical of Christ, who was both a King and Priest. 'A Priest upon his throne.' 'Upon himself shall his crown flourish,' Ps. 132. 18.

2 The anointing oil was composed of the most precious materials. It was poured upon the head, ran 'down the beard,' & even to the 'skirts of the garment.' It was typical of the baptism of Christ, who fulfilled all righteousness, and more especially of his anointing by the out-pouring of the Holy Spirit, who was to be given to Christ without measure, to qualify him with all the gifts and graces to fit him for his work as Mediator, and that He might bestow the Spirit upon his followers. 2 Every sacrifice of an innocent animal, implied the sinfulness of the offerer and its being offered in his stead. In this case also, Aaron and his sons were to lay their hands on the head of the victim, to denote that their guilt was transferred to it. This sacrifice also denoted the entire surrender of the offerer to the service of God, in soul and body, in the duties to which he should be called.

3 This was, doubtless, intended to signify that they should dedicate all their faculties to the service of God; their ears to the hearing and study of his law, their hands to diligence in the sacred ministry, and to all acts of obedience, and their feet to walking in the way of God's precepts. And this sprinkling of the blood was to show that they could do all this with acceptance only thro' the blood of atonement.

1 The heaving these parts of the sacrifices upwards towards heaven, and the waving them to the right hand and left, or the four quarters of the globe, implied, that they were thus dedicated to the God of heaven and of all the earth; and were then used by his priests as given by him to them; and perhaps the right shoulder and the breast being thus presented, might intimate, that the priests and offerers also should devote themselves to the service of God, with all their power, and with their whole heart. —Scott.

3 The number seven is what is called among the Hebrews a number of perfection; and it is often used to denote the completion, accomplishment, fullness, or perfection of a thing, as this period contained the whole course of that time in which God created the world, & appointed the day of rest. As this act of consecration lasted seven days, it signified a perfect consecration; and intimated to the priest that his whole body and soul, his time and talents, should be devoted to the service of God and his people.— Clarke.

38 ¶ Now this is that which thou shalt offer upon the altar; [a]two lambs of the first year, day by day continually.

39 The one lamb[1] thou shalt offer [b]in the morning, and the other lamb thou shalt offer [c]at even:

40 And with the one lamb [d]a tenth-deal[2] of flour mingled with the fourth part of an [e]hin of beaten oil; and the fourth part of an hin of wine for [f]a drink-offering.

41 And the other lamb thou shalt [g]offer at even, and shalt do thereto according to the meat-offering of the morning, and according to the drink-offering thereof, for a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

42 This shall be a [h]continual burnt-offering throughout your generations, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,[3] before the LORD; [i]where I will meet you, to speak there unto thee.

43 And there I will meet with the children of Israel, and the [4]tabernacle shall be [k]sanctified by my glory.

44 And I will sanctify the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar; I will [l]sanctify also both Aaron and his sons, to minister to me in the priest's office.

45 ¶ And I will [m]dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God.

46 And they shall know that [n]I am the LORD their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, that I may dwell among them: I am the LORD their God.

CHAPTER XXX.

The altar of incense, 1—10. The ransom of souls, 11—16 The brazen laver, 17—21. The holy anointing oil, 22—33. The composition of the perfume, 34—38.

AND thou shalt make [a]an altar to burn incense upon; of shittim-wood[5] shalt thou make it.

2 A cubit shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, (four-square shall it be,) and two cubits shall be the height thereof; [b]the horns thereof shall be of the same.

3 And thou shalt [c]overlay it with pure gold, the top[6] thereof, and the sides[7] thereof round about, and the horns thereof: and thou shalt make unto it a crown of gold round about.

4 And two golden [d]rings shalt thou make to it under the crown of it, by the two corners[1] thereof; upon the two sides of it shalt thou make it: and they shall be for places for the staves to bear it withal.

5 And thou shalt make the [e]staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold.

6 And thou shalt put it before the vail[f] that is by the ark of the testimony, before [g]the mercy-seat that is over the testimony, where [h]I will meet with thee.

7 And Aaron shall burn thereon sweet incense[2] every morning: when he [i]dresseth the lamps, he shall burn incense upon it.

8 And when Aaron lighteth[3] the lamps at even,[4] he shall burn incense upon it; [k]a perpetual incense before the LORD throughout your generations.[5]

9 Ye shall offer no [l]strange incense thereon, nor burnt-sacrifice, nor meat-offering; neither shall ye pour drink-offering thereon.

10 And [m]Aaron shall make an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of [n]the sin-offering of atonements; once in the year shall he make atonement upon it, throughout your generations: it is most holy unto the LORD.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 When thou [o]takest the sum of the children of Israel, after their number,[6] then shall they give every man a[p] ransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou numberest them; that there be [q]no plague among them, when thou numberest them.

13 This they shall give, every one that passeth among them that are numbered, half a shekel, after the shekel of the sanctuary:[7] ([r]a shekel is twenty gerahs:) [s]an half shekel shall be the offering of the LORD.

14 Every one that passeth among them that are numbered, [t]from twenty years old and above, shall give an offering unto the LORD.

15 The [u]rich shall not give[8] more, and the poor shall not give[9] less, than half a shekel, when they give an offering unto the LORD, to make [v]an atonement for your souls.

16 And thou shalt take the atonement-money of the children of Israel, and shalt [w]appoint it for the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; that it may be [x]a memorial unto the children of Israel before the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Thou shalt also make [y]a laver of brass, and his foot also of brass, to wash withal: and thou shalt [z]put it between the tabernacle of the congregation and the altar, and thou shalt put water therein:

19 For Aaron and his sons shall [a]wash their hands and their feet thereat.

20 When they go into the tabernacle of the congregation, they shall wash with water, that they [b]die not; or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn offering made by fire unto the LORD.

21 So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not: and it shall be [c]a statute for ever to them, even to him and to his seed throughout their generations.

22 ¶ Moreover, the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Take thou also unto [d]thee principal spices,[1] of pure myrrh five hundred shekels, and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty shekels, and of sweet calamus two hundred and fifty shekels,

24 And of cassia five hundred shekels, after [e]the shekel of the sanctuary, and of oil-olive an [f]hin.

25 And thou shalt make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the apothecary:[2] it shall be [g]an holy anointing oil.

26 And thou shalt [h]anoint the tabernacle of the congregation therewith, and the ark of the testimony,

27 And the table and all his vessels, and the candlestick and his vessels, and the altar of incense,

28 And the altar of burnt-offering with all his vessels, and the laver and his foot.

29 And thou shalt sanctify [3]them, that they may be most holy: [i]whatsoever toucheth them shall be holy.

5 The daily sacrifices represented the perpetual efficacy of Christ's atonement; and the burning of incense morning and evening, typified his continual intercession for us; while the dressing and lighting of the lamps prefigured the preaching of the word, which could only be rendered effectual by that intercession, bringing down a blessing, in answer to the prayers of his people. As no grate is mentioned in this altar, nor any thing said about cleaning it, expositors generally think that a censer, with coals, was placed on it, when incense was burnt. 7 The shekel of the sanctuary, where the standard weight was kept, was nearly half an ounce troy weight; so that the sum paid by each person was about fifteen pence. Women and children, and probably aged men unfit for war, were exempted from this tax. Likewise, in all probability, the Levites, as may be gathered from the number of those who paid the tax, compared with the whole congregation, to the exclusion of the Levites, ch. 38. 26; Nu. 1. 46, 47. This institution is highly instructive. It was to be paid alike without distinction of persons; all who refused being threatened with plague. This implied that the souls of all were equally precious, equally needing redemption, and must perish without it. It is probably to this that Peter alludes, 1 Pe. 1. 18-20, 'Ye are not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold,' &c.

1 The several spices here mentioned, being the very best of those kinds, which were most highly valued at that time, and amounting in all to a hundred and twenty pounds troy-weight, with about five quarts of oil of olives added to them, doubtless of the purest sort, were formed into a rich and highly aromatic ointment, or oil, according to the methods used by the makers of unguents or perfumes. It is generally supposed that it still continued a liquid, and that the dreggy part of the spices was strained out of it. With this holy oil all the furniture belonging to the sanctuary was anointed. . . . This sacred oil, or ointment typified the Holy Spirit, especially as given to our great High Priest without measure; and all his personnl and mediatorial excellencies, as the 'well beloved Son, in whom the Father is well pleased,' & whose name is to the believer, 'as ointment poured forth.' It also intimated, that 'if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his,' not one of his holy priesthood; & that we cannot attend on any divine ordinance, or officiate in any sacred service, acceptably or usefully, without his sanctifying influences. The concluding prohibition reminds us, that hypocrisy which counterfeits, and profaneness which ridicules, the sanctifying work of the Holy Spirit, bring swift destruction on the guilty; and in general, that Christ himself and his holy gospel, are 'a savour of death to unbelievers.'—Scott.

3 The Israelites were strictly forbidden to use any otherperfumethan this in the worship of God, or to make it for any other purpose but his service. Whoever did so, was to be 'cut off' from his people; probably not merely excommunicated, but destroyed by the judgment of God, from all interest or benefit in God's promises and ordinances. And we here see with what care God guards the purity and authority of his own ordinances, forbidding alike all human inventions in religion, & all profane use of sacred things to common purposes. They that worship Him, must worship Him not only in spirit, but in truth, in his own appointed way.

4 'Every good and every perfect gift cometh from the Father of lights.' All true wisdom cometh from him, skill or genius in arts and sciences, as well as every other. Yet it is probable that there was a special bestowal of the skill necessary on the present occasion, and God, by special preparation, appointed the workmen. The sons of Aaron are not appointed to this business. The sons of Moses seem designedly left in obscurity, to prove his disinterestedness in the service of God & the people.

4 This verse determines the meaning of this phrase to have denoted more than mere forfeiture of spiritual privileges, even loss of life. 'The appointment of the weekly Sabbath was a sign, or token, of the Lord's special favour to Israel. Their strict and constant observance of it would not only distinguish them, as the worshippers of God, who created the heavens and the earth in six days and rested on the seventh, from all surrounding idolaters, but thro' successive generations, it would be a sign of their covenant relation to him. . . . It was, therefore, at this time expressly made a part of the judicial law, that every Israelite should hallow the Sabbath; if anyone violated it, he must be put to death by the magistrate, provided his crime were known; and if he kept it secret, he might expect to be cut off by some divine judgment. Other seasons were set apart, as a kind of Sabbath, but this was the principal, "a Sabbath of rest holy to the Lord," the public observance of which by the nation, and the punishment of such as violated it, formed one condition of the national covenant throughout their generations.'—Scott.

The people, in the absence of Moses, cause Aaron to make a calf, 1—6. God is angered thereby, 7—10. At the entreaty of Moses he is appeased, 11—14. Moses cometh down with the tables, 15—18. He breaketh them, 19. He destroyeth the calf, 20. Aaron's excuse for himself, 21—24. Moses causeth the idolaters to be slain, 25—29. He prayeth for the people, 30—35.

AND when the people saw that Moses [a]delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, [b]Up, [c]make us gods, which[d] shall go before us; for as for this Moses,[2] [e]the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, [f]we wot not what is become of him.

2 And Aaron said[3] unto them, Break off the [g]golden ear-rings which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me.

3 And all the people [h]brake off the golden ear-rings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron.

4 And he received them at their hand, and [i]fashioned it with [k]a graving tool, after he had made it a molten calf:[l] and they said, [m]These be thy gods, O Israel, [n]which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

5 And when [o]Aaron saw it, he built an altar before it; and Aaron [p]made proclamation, and said, To-morrow is a[q] feast to the LORD.

6 And they rose up early on the morrow, and [r]offered burnt-offerings, and brought peace-offerings: and the people [s]sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Go,[t] get thee down; for [u]thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have [v]corrupted themselves:

8 They [w]have turned aside quickly out of the way [x]which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said,[y] These be thy gods, O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, [z]I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a[a] stiff-necked people.

10 Now therefore [b]let me alone,[4] that [c]my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them; and [d]I will make of thee a great nation.

11 ¶ And Moses [e]besought the [1]LORD his God, and said, LORD, [f]why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, [g]which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand?

12 Wherefore [h]should the Egyptians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? [i]Turn from thy fierce wrath, and [k]repent of this evil against thy people.

13 [l]Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, [m]to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, [n]I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven; and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever.[2]

14 And the LORD [o]repented[3] of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.

15 ¶ And Moses [p]turned, and went down from the mount, and the two tables of [q]the testimony were in his hand: the tables were [r]written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.

16 And [s]the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables.

17 And when [t]Joshua heard the noise of the people as [u]they shouted, he said unto Moses, [v]There is a noise of war in the camp.

18 And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome;[4] [w]but the noise of them that sing do I hear.

19 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that [x]he saw the calf, and [y]the dancing: and Moses' [z]anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and [a]brake them beneath the mount.[5]

20 And he [b]took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strawed it upon the water, and [c]made the children of Israel drink[6] of it.

2 Moses, about the end of the forty days, was now about to descend, fully instructed in the will of God. The people, meanwhile, wearying, & desirous of returning to a sensual worship, notwithstanding God's displays of his power and majesty, and prohibitions of idols, seize the time of Moses' absence, & with the utmost ingratitude to him, as well as impiety to God, speak of him contemptuously, and set up idolatry.

He was permitted thus to fall to teach him, and to teach all men, that God chooses men to serve, not for their excellence, but to magnify his own grace.

21 And Moses said unto Aaron, What[d] did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin[1] upon them?

22 And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot: thou [e]knowest the people, [f]that they are set on mischief.

23 For [g]they said unto me, Make us gods which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

24 And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let him break it off.[h] So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf.[2]

25 ¶ And when Moses saw that the people were [i]naked,[3] (for [k]Aaron had made them naked unto their [l]shame among their enemies,)[4]

26 Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, [m]Who is on the LORD's side? let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

27 And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and [n]slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.

28 And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there [o]fell of the people that day about three thousand men.

29 [p]For Moses had said,[5] Consecrate[6] yourselves to-day to the LORD, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother; that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day.

30 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, Ye [q]have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; [r]peradventure I shall make an [s]atonement[7] for your sin.

31 And Moses [t]returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh! this people have sinned[u] a great sin, and have [v]made them gods of gold!

32 Yet now, [w]if thou wilt forgive their sin—: and if not, [x]blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book[1] which thou hast written.

33 And the LORD said unto Moses, Whosoever hath [y]sinned against me, him will I blot out of [z]my book.[2]

34 Therefore now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee. Behold, [a]mine angel shall go before thee: nevertheless, in [b]the day when I visit,[3] I will visit their sin upon them.

35 And the LORD plagued the people, because [c]they made the calf which Aaron made.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The Lord refuseth to go with the people, 1—3. The people mourn thereat, 4—6. The tabernacle is removed out of the camp, 7, 8. The Lord talketh familiarly with Moses out of the cloudy pillar, 9—11. Moses desireth to see the glory of God, 12—23.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, [a]Depart, and go up hence, thou and the people which [b]thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto [c]the land which I sware unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, [d]Unto thy seed will I give it:

2 And I will send [e]an angel before thee; and I will drive out [f]the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite;

3 Unto [g]a land flowing with milk and honey: [h]for I will not go up in the midst[4] of thee, for thou art [i]a stiff-necked people; [k]lest I consume thee in the way.

4 ¶ And when the people heard these evil tidings, [l]they mourned; [m]and no man did put on him his ornaments.[5]

5 For the LORD had said unto Moses, Say unto the children of Israel, Ye are a stiff-necked people; I will come up into the midst of thee [n]in a moment, and consume thee: therefore now [o]put off thy ornaments from thee, that [p]I may know what to do unto thee.

6 And the children of Israel [q]stripped themselves of their ornaments, by the mount Horeb.

7 ¶ And Moses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, [r]afar off from the camp, and called it [s]the Tabernacle of the Congregation. And it came to pass, that every one which [t]sought the LORD [u]went out unto the tabernacle of the congregation, which was without the camp.

1 There have been many conjectures about the meaning of this strong language. We may safely affirm that it is not lawful for any one to pray for eternal perdition; in other words, to be an enemy to God. This then could not be the meaning. It is very probable that all that is intended by it is as follows. Moses prays that the people might be forgiven and not cut off without entering into the promised land, and that rather than such an event should take place he himself would be willing to die, and cease to be on the record of the living, among God's people: that he would willingly be the sacrifice in their stead. Paul, Ro.9. 3, uttered a prayer similar in spirit.

8 And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the tabernacle, that all the people rose up, [v]and stood every man at his tent-door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the tabernacle.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the [w]cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the LORD [x]talked with Moses.

10 And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand at the tabernacle-door: and all the people rose up and [y]worshipped,[1] every man in his tent-door.

11 And the LORD [z]spake unto Moses face to face,[2] as a man speaketh unto his [a]friend. And he turned again into the camp: but [b]his servant Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

12 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, See, [c]thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send[3] with me: yet thou hast said, [d]I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.

13 Now therefore, I pray thee, [e]if I have found grace in thy sight, [f]shew me now thy way, [g]that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight; and [h]consider that this nation is thy people.

14 And he said, [i]My presence[4] shall go with thee, and I will give thee [k]rest.

15 And he said unto him, [l]If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence.

16 For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? Is it not [m]in that thou goest with us? So shall we be [n]separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.

17 And the LORD said unto Moses, I [o]will do this thing also that thou hast spoken; for [p]thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name.[5]

18 ¶ And he said, I beseech thee, shew[q] me thy glory.

19 And he said, I will make [r]all my goodness[6] pass before thee, and I will proclaim [s]the name of the LORD before thee; and will [t]be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy.

20 And he said, [u]Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live.[1]

21 And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock:

22 And it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee [v]in a clift of the rock, and will [w]cover thee with my hand while I pass by:

23 And I will take away mine hand, and [x]thou shalt see my back-parts;[2] but my face shall not be seen.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The tables are renewed, 1—3. The name of the LORD proclaimed, 4—7. Moses entreateth God to go with the people, 8, 9. God maketh a covenant with them, repeating certain duties of the first table, 10—26. Moses after forty days in the mount cometh down with the tables, 27, 28. His face shineth, and he covereth it with a vail, 29—35.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, [a]Hew[3] thee two tables of stone like unto the first; and [b]I will write upon these tables [c]the words that were in the first tables, [d]which thou brakest.

2 And be ready in the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me [e]in the top of the mount.

3 And no man shall [f]come up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount; neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount.

4 ¶ And he hewed two tables of stone, like unto the first: and Moses rose up[4] early in the morning, and went up unto mount Sinai, as the LORD had commanded him, and took in his hand the two tables of stone.

5 And the LORD [g]descended in the cloud, and stood with him there, and proclaimed [h]the name of the LORD.

6 And the LORD [i]passed by before him, and [k]proclaimed,[5] [l]The LORD, the LORD God, [m]merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and [n]abundant in goodness and [o]truth,

7 [p]Keeping mercy for thousands, [q]forgiving iniquity, and transgression, and sin, and that [r]will by no means clear the guilty; [s]visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation.

2 That is to say, God would place Moses in a cleft of the rock, and shelter him by his power, and would give such a display of his glory as one would have of some great one who had passed by without his face being seen. Clarke supposes that the word rendered 'back parts' signifying 'my after' (that is) appearances, had a reference to the display of his glory afterwards to be made when God was manifest in the flesh, though the clause, 'my face shall not be seen,' renders this somewhat doubtful.

8 ¶ And Moses made haste, and bowed[t] his head toward the earth, and worshipped.

9 And he said, [u]If now I have found grace in thy sight, O LORD, [v]let my Lord, I pray thee, go among us, (for[1] [w]it is [w]a stiff-necked people,) and [x]pardon our iniquity and our sin, and [y]take us for thine inheritance.

10 ¶ And he said, Behold, [z]I make a covenant: before all thy people [a]I will do marvels, such as have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation: and all the people among which thou art shall see the work of the LORD: for it is [b]a terrible thing that I will do with thee.

11 [c]Observe thou that which I command thee this day: behold, [d]I drive out before thee the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite.

12 [e]Take heed to thyself, lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land whither thou goest, [f]lest it be for a snare in the midst of thee.

13 But [g]ye shall destroy their altars, break their images,[2] and cut down their groves.

14 For thou shalt [h]worship no other god: for the LORD, [i]whose name is Jealous, is a [k]jealous God:

15 Lest thou [l]make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they go a [m]whoring[3] after their gods, and do sacrifice unto their gods, and one [n]call thee, and thou [o]eat of his sacrifice;

16 And [p]thou take of their daughters unto thy sons, and their daughters go a whoring after their gods, and make thy sons go a whoring after their gods.

17 Thou shalt make thee [q]no molten gods.[4]

18 ¶ The [r]feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month Abib: for in the month Abib thou camest out from Egypt.

19 All that [s]openeth the matrix is mine; and every firstling among thy cattle, whether ox or sheep, that is male.[5]

20 But [t]the firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb:[6] and if thou redeem him not, then shalt thou break his neck. All [u]the first-born of thy sons thou shalt redeem; and [v]none shall appear before me empty.

21 ¶ [w]Six days thou shalt work; but on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in [x]earing-time and in harvest[1] thou shalt rest.

22 ¶ And thou shalt observe [y]the feast of weeks, of the first-fruits of wheat-harvest, and the feast of in-gathering at the year's end.[2]

23 ¶ [z]Thrice in the year shall all your men-children appear before the LORD God, [a]the God of Israel.

24 For [b]I will cast out the nations before thee, and [c]enlarge thy borders; neither shall any man [d]desire thy [3]land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God thrice in the year.

25 ¶ Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with [e]leaven; neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the passover [f]be left unto the morning.

26 The [g]first of the first-fruits of thy land thou shalt bring unto the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not [h]seethe a kid in his mother's milk.[4]

27 And the LORD said unto Moses, [i]Write[5] thou these words: for after the tenor of these words [k]I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel.

28 And he was there with the LORD [l]forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water: and he [m]wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten[6] commandments.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses came down from mount Sinai with the [n]two tables of testimony in Moses' hand, (when he came down from the mount,) that Moses [o]wist not that [p]the skin of his face shone[7] while he talked with him.

30 And when Aaron and all the children of Israel saw Moses, behold, the skin of his face shone: and they were [q]afraid to come nigh him.

31 And Moses [r]called unto them: and Aaron and all the rulers of the congregation returned unto him: [s]and Moses talked with them.

32 And afterward all the children of Israel came nigh: and he [t]gave them in commandment all that the LORD had spoken with him in mount Sinai.

The gracious declaration of the character of God subdued Moses into reverential adoration, and encouraged him to solicit protection & pardon, notwithstanding their guilt; or, if we retain 'for,' as in our version, Moses pleads their perverse character as a reason why the help of God, so merciful and gracious, was necessary, and all the glory would be the Lord's.

The sabbath, 2, 3. The free gifts for the tabernacle, 4—19. The readiness of the people to offer, 20—29. Bezaleel and Aholiab are called to the work, 30—35.

AND Moses gathered all the congregation[2] of the children of Israel together, and said unto them, [a]These are the words which the LORD hath commanded, that ye should [b]do them.

2 [c]Six days shall work be done; but on the seventh day there shall be to you an holy[3] day,[4] a sabbath of rest to the LORD: [d]whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death.

3 Ye shall [e]kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the sabbath-day.

4 ¶ And Moses spake unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the LORD commanded,[5] saying,

5 Take ye from among you an offering unto the LORD:[6] [f]whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring it, an offering of the LORD; gold, and silver, and brass,

6 And [g]blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and [h]goats' hair,

7 And rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and shittim-wood,

8 And [i]oil for the light, and [k]spices for anointing oil, and for the sweet incense,

9 And [l]onyx-stones, and stones to be set for the ephod, and for the breastplate.

10 And every [m]wise-hearted among you shall come, and make all that the LORD hath commanded;

11 The [n]tabernacle, his tent, and his covering, his taches, and his boards, his bars, his pillars, and his sockets;

12 The [o]ark, and the staves thereof, with the mercy-seat, and [p]the vail of the covering;[1]

13 The [q]table and his staves, and all his vessels, and the shew-bread;

14 The [r]candlestick also for the light, and his furniture, and his lamps, with the oil for the light;

15 And [s]the incense-altar, and his staves, and the anointing oil, and the sweet incense, and [t]the hanging for the door at the entering in of the tabernacle;

16 The [u]altar of burnt-offering, with his brazen grate, his staves, and all his vessels; [v]the laver and his foot;

17 [w]The hangings of the court, his pillars, and their sockets, and the hanging for the door of the court;

18 The pins of the tabernacle, and the pins of the court, and their cords;

19 [x]The clothes of service, to do service in the holy place; [y]the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office.

20 ¶ And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses.[2]

21 And they came, every one [z]whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit[3] made willing, and they brought the LORD's offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments.

22 And they came, both men and women, as many as[4] were willing-hearted, and brought [a]bracelets, and ear-rings, and rings, and tablets, all jewels of gold: and [b]every man that offered, offered an offering of gold unto the LORD.[5]

23 And every man with whom was found [c]blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and red skins of rams, and badgers' skins, brought them.

24 Every one that did offer an offering of silver and brass, brought the LORD's offering: and every man with whom was found shittim-wood, for any work of the service, brought it.

25 And all the women that were [d]wise-hearted[6] did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun,

4 'A day of holiness.' This commandment was particularly repeated to Moses, at the end of all the directions about the building of the tabernacle, (see ch. 31. 13-15,) and now repeated to them (as it was at his late renewing the covenant with them, ch. 34. 21.) that they might not imagine any of the work here commanded to be done about the tabernacle would license them to break the Sabbath. The observation of which being the great preservative of religion, that is the reason it is so often enjoined, and particular care taken to secure it. It is hence called the Sabbath of Sabbaths. 2 When Moses had delivered his message to the people, they departed to their tents, to fetch their several oblations; & on this occasion a peculiar influence was felt, enlarging their hearts to liberality. Nothing but earrings seem to have been given to make the golden calf; but various other golden ornaments were offered on this occasion, principally of the spoils of Egypt; both men and women being willing to part with their newly acquired adornings, to beautify the sanctuary of God. A rare example! But besides these articles of manufactured gold, some of the people presented such as was unwrought, and used as money; for this is thought to be meant by the words rendered, 'Every man that offered, offered an offering of gold unto the Lord.'

both of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine linen.

26 And all the women, [e]whose heart stirred them up in wisdom,[1] spun goats' hair.

27 And the rulers brought [f]onyx-stones, and stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breastplate;

28 And [g]spice, and oil for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense.

29 The children of Israel brought a willing offering unto the LORD, every man and woman, [h]whose heart made them willing to bring, for all manner of work which [i]the LORD had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses.

30 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Israel, [k]See, the LORD hath called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah:

31 And he hath filled him with the Spirit of God,[2] in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship;

32 And to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,

33 And in the cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work.

34 And [l]he hath put in his heart that he may teach,[3] both he and [m]Aholiab the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan.

35 Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work of the engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and [n]of the weaver, even of them that do any work, and of those that devise cunning work.[4]

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The offerings are delivered to the workmen, 1—4. The liberality of the people is restrained, 5—7. The curtains with cherubims, 5—13. The curtains of goats' hair, 14—18. The covering of skins, 19. The boards with their sockets, 20—30. The bars, 31—34. The vail, 35, 36. The hanging for the door, 37, 38.

THEN wrought [a]Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise-hearted man, in whom the LORD[5] put wisdom and understanding, to know how to work all manner of work [b]for the service of the sanctuary, according to all that the LORD had commanded.

2 And Moses called Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise-hearted man, [c]in whose heart the LORD had put wisdom, even every one [d]whose heart stirred him up to come unto the work to do it:

3 And they received of Moses all [e]the offering which the children of Israel had brought for the work of the service of the sanctuary, to make it withal. And they brought yet unto him free offerings [f]every morning.

4 ¶ And all the [g]wise men, that wrought all the work of the sanctuary, came every man from his work which they made;

5 And they spake unto Moses, saying, The people bring [h]much more than enough for the service of the work which the LORD commanded to make.[1]

6 And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, Let neither man nor woman make any more work for the offering of the sanctuary. So the people were restrained from bringing.

7 For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.[2]

8 ¶ And every [i]wise-hearted man, among them that wrought the work of the tabernacle, [k]made ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with [l]cherubims[3] of cunning work[4] made he them.

9 The length of one curtain was twenty and eight[5] cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits:[6] the curtains were all of one size.

10 And he [m]coupled the five curtains one unto another; and the other five curtains he coupled one unto another.

11 And he made loops of blue on the edge of one curtain, from the selvedge in the coupling; likewise he made in the uttermost side of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

12 Fifty loops made he in one curtain, and fifty loops made he in the edge of the curtain which was in the coupling of the second: the loops held one curtain to another.

13 And he made fifty taches of gold, and coupled the curtains one unto another with the taches: [n]so it became one tabernacle.

1 Wisdom, in this connection, means skill to perform the work in the best manner. As the blue, purple, and scarlet, are distinguished from the fine linen, it has generally been thought that wool dyed of these colours was meant. But wool is not once mentioned; either in the directions given to Moses, or the execution of them; as the goats' hair and badgers' skins are. All the sacerdotal garments had fine linen in their texture; and the law forbade the people to wear linen and woollen mingled together in the same garment, Le. 19. 19; De. 22. 11. The Jews indeed say, that an exception was made to this law, in the case of the high priest alone; but the other priests also wore girdles of the same (ch. 39. 27-29;) and the scripture does not mention this exception. In Ezekiel's vision, the priests are expressly forbidden to wear wool in their ministrations, Eze. 44. 17, 18. The word rendered fine linen is used for linen of a peculiar kind, and it is allowed that several sorts were then in use; and perhaps this fine linen was woven without dyeing, and then embroidered with other linen, dyed of the several colours here mentioned.—Scott.

1 The people contributed so liberally, that Moses was obliged to make a proclamation to prevent them from bringing any more. Had Moses not been perfectly disinterested, he would have encouraged them to continue their contributions, as thereby he might have multiplied to himself gold, silver, and precious stones. But he was doing the Lord's work, under the inspiration of the divine Spirit, & sought no secular gain.

2 It is seldom, when the cause of God is concerned, that people exceed in liberality. And it has too frequently happened, and happens every day, that the reverse is the case. It is sad that superstition is more liberal than true piety. But the one springs from love to God, the other from love to ourselves.

3 What cherubim represented, we cannot determine. Josephus says they were flying animals like none of those seen by man, but such as Moses saw about the throne of God. According to Ezekiel, they were creatures with four heads and one body, compounded from animals the noblest of their kind, the lion, the bull, the eagle, and man, so that they might be, says Dr. Priestley, the representatives of all nature.

4 This probably means a sort of diaper, in which the figures appear equally perfect on both sides; this was probably formed in the loom. Another kind of curious work is mentioned, ver. 37, which we term needle-work; this was probably similar to our embroidery, tapestry, or cloth of Arras. It has been thought unlikely that these works were all manufactured in the wilderness; what was done in the loom they might have brought with them from Egypt; what could be done by hand without the use of complex machinery, the Israelitish women could readily perform with their needles during their stay in the wilderness. But still it seems probable, that they brought even their looms with them. The whole of this account shows that not only necessary, but ornamental arts, had been carried to a considerable degree of perfection, both among the Israelites & Egyptians.—Dr Clarke.

14 ¶ And he made [o]curtains of goats' hair for the tent over the tabernacle: eleven curtains he made them.

15 The length of one curtain was thirty cubits,[1] and four cubits was the breadth of one curtain: the eleven curtains were of one size.

16 And he coupled five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves.

17 And he made fifty loops upon the uttermost edge of the curtain in the coupling, and fifty loops made he upon the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

18 And he made fifty taches of brass to couple the tent together, that it might be one.

19 And he made a [p]covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering[2] of badgers' skins[3] above that.

20 ¶ And he made [q]boards[4] for the tabernacle of [r]shittim-wood, standing up.

21 The length of a board was ten cubits, and the breadth of a board one cubit and a half.

22 One board had two tenons, equally distant one from another: thus did he make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

23 And he made boards for the tabernacle: twenty boards for the south side, southward.

24 And forty sockets of silver he made under the twenty boards: two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.

25 And for the other side of the tabernacle, which is toward the north corner, he made twenty boards,

26 And their forty sockets of silver: two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

27 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward he made six boards.

28 And two boards made he for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

29 And they were coupled[5] beneath, and coupled together at the head thereof, to one ring: thus he did to both of them in both the corners.

30 And there were eight boards; and their sockets were sixteen sockets of silver, under[1] every board two sockets.

31 ¶ And he made [s]bars of shittim-wood: five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle, 32 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the tabernacle for the sides westward.

33 And he made the middle bar to shoot through the boards from the one end to the other.

34 And he overlaid the boards with gold, and made their rings of gold to be places for the bars, and overlaid the bars with gold.

35 ¶ And he made [t]a vail of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen: with cherubims made he it of cunning work.

2 The shelter and special protection that the church is under, are signified by the curtains of hair cloth, which were spread over the tabernacle, and the covering of rams' skins, and badgers' skins, over them. God has provided for his people a shadow from the heat and a covert from storm & rain, Is. 4. 6; they are armed against all weathers: the sun and moon shall not smite them; and they are protected from the storms of divine wrath, that hail which will sweep away the refuges of lies, Is. 28. 17. Those that dwell in God's house shall find, be the tempest never so violent, or the dropping never so continual, it does not rain in.—Henry.
3 Some suppose that the phrase, 'badgers' skins,' should rather be skins dyed of a purple colour.

4 The strength and stability of the Church, though it is but a tabernacle, are signified by the boards and bars, with which the curtains were borne up. The boards were coupled together, and joined by the bars which shot thro' them; for the union of the Church, and the hearty agreement of those that are its stays and supporters, contribute abundantly to its strength and establishment.—Henry. These boards and bars, it is said, ver. 34, were overlaid with gold. There has been, with some, considerable question whether this was by gilding or overlaying with plates of that metal. Considering the uses to which these boards & bars were put, we are disposed to understand the expression to denote their being covered with plates of gold. Yet we may add, from Pict. Bible, in a long note on the place, that gilding did not, in ancient times, imply so much inferiority to overlaying with plates, as at present; for the ancient gold-beaters had not the art of reducing the gold leaf to any thing like the tenuity which may now be produced, & hence the ancient gilding was thick, durable, & rich. Moreover, the art of gilding was of very high antiquity in Egypt, although it is of course impossible to say that the art existed there previous to the departure of the Israelites. Mention is made, by Herodotus, of Egyptian statues ornamented with gilding, & of a cow, in the palace at Sais, which had been made in times long anterior to his own, and richly ornamented with gilding.

A.M.2514. B.C.1490

4 In this chapter, Moses gives an account of the making of all the furniture of the tabernacle with such exactness as he describes the making of the tabernacle itself, in the foregoing chapter; to show that God's directions about the making of every thing were punctually observed, nothing being omitted or added, but all made according to the pattern in the mount, ch. 25. 9, 40. It might have been deemed unnecessary to repeat so minutely the steps taken in fulfilling the preceding directions. But we may be sure that the Scriptures use no vain repetitions, and that wise and good ends are served by this sacred narrative. The same things, both in the law and the gospels, are frequently repeated, that whenever we open them, the same great doctrines & precepts may be inculcated upon us, both to impress our minds, and to show their great importance. In the first nine verses of the chapter, 'we have an account of the making of the ark, with its glorious and most significant appurtenances, the mercy seat and the cherubim. Consider these three together, and they represent the glory of a holy God, the sincerity of a holy heart, and the communion that is between them in and by a Mediator. 1. It is the glory of a holy God, that he dwells between the cherubims. . . 2. It is the character of an upright heart, that like the ark of the testimony, it has the law of God hid and kept in it. 3. By Jesus Christ, the great propitiation, there is a reconciliation made, and a communion settled between us and God.'—Henry.

the length thereof, and one cubit and a half the breadth thereof.

7 And he made two [c]cherubims of gold, beaten out of one piece made he them, on the two ends of the mercy-seat;

8 One cherub on the end[1] on this side, and another cherub on the [2]other end on that side: out of the mercy-seat made he the cherubims on the two ends thereof.

9 And the [d]cherubims spread out their wings on high, and covered with their wings over the mercy-seat, with their faces one to another; even [e]to the mercy-seat-ward were the faces of the cherubims.

10 ¶ And he made [f]the table[3] of shittim-wood: two cubits was the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

11 And he overlaid it with pure gold, and made thereunto a crown of gold round about.

12 Also he made thereunto a border of an handbreadth round about; and made a crown of gold for the border thereof round about.

13 And he cast for it four rings of gold, and put the rings upon the four corners that were in the four feet thereof.

14 Over against the border were the rings, the places for the staves, to bear the table.

15 And he made the staves of shittim-wood, and overlaid them with gold, to bear the table.

16 And he made the vessels which were upon the table, his [g]dishes, and his spoons, and his bowls, and his covers to cover withal,[4] of pure gold.

17 ¶ And he made [h]the candlestick[5] of pure gold: of beaten work made he the candlestick; his shaft, and his branch, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, were of the same:

18 And six branches going out of the sides thereof; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side thereof, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side thereof:

19 Three bowls made after the fashion of almonds in one branch, a knop and a flower; and three bowls made like almonds in another branch, a knop and a flower: so throughout the six branches going out of the candlestick.

20 And in the candlestick were four bowls made like almonds, his knops and his flowers:

21 And a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches going out of it.

22 Their knops and their branches were of the same: all of it was one beaten work of pure gold.

23 And he made his [i]seven[1] lamps, and his snuffers, and his snuff-dishes, of pure gold.

24 Of a talent of pure gold made he it, and all the vessels thereof.

25 ¶ And he made the [k]incense-altar[2] of shittim-wood: the length of it was a cubit, and the breadth of it a cubit, (it was four-square,) and two cubits was the height of it; the horns thereof were of the same.

26 And he overlaid it with pure gold, both the top of it, and the sides thereof round about, and the horns of it: also he made unto it a crown of gold round about.

27 And he made two rings of gold for it under the crown thereof, by the two corners of it, upon the two sides thereof, to be places for the staves to bear it withal.

28 And he made the staves of shittim-wood, and overlaid them with gold.

29 ¶ And [l]he made the holy anointing oil, and the pure [m]incense[3] of sweet spices, according to the work of [n]the apothecary.[4]

3 As there is little in this chapter requiring explanation, we shall copy the following notes of Henry. Here is, 1. The making of the table on which the shew bread was to be continually placed. God is a good householder, that always keeps a plentiful table. Is the world his tabernacle? His providence in it spreads a table for all his creatures: he provides for all flesh. Is the church his tabernacle? His grace in it spreads a table for all believers, furnished with the bread of life. But observe how much the dispensation of the gospel exceeds that of the law. Though here was a table furnished, it was only with shew bread, bread to be looked upon, not to be fed upon, while it was on this table, and afterward only by the priests; but to the table which Christ has spread in the new covenant, all real Christians are invited guests; and to them it is said, Eat, O friends, come eat of my bread; what the law gave but a sight of at a distance, the gospel gives the enjoyment of, and a hearty welcome to.

5 The making of the candlestick, which was not of wood overlaid with gold, but all beaten work of pure gold only, ver. 17, 22. This signified that light of divine revelation with which God's church upon earth (which is his tabernacle among men) has always been enlightened; being always supplied with fresh oil from Christ the good olive, Zec. 4. 2, 3. God's manifestations of himself, in this world, are but candle-light compared with the day-light of the future state. The Bible is a golden candlestick. It is of pure gold, Ps. 19. 10. From it light is diffused to every part of God's tabernacle, that by it his spiritual priests may see to minister to the Lord, and to do the service of his sanctuary. This candlestick has not only its bowls for necessary use, but its knops and flowers for ornament; there are many things which God saw fit to beautify his word with, which we can no more give a reason for than for these knops and flowers, and yet we are sure they were added for good purposes.

1 Seven imports diversity and perfection, Re. 1. 12, 20; 2. 1. There were no windows in the tabernacle; but the candlestick being placed over against the table of shew-bread, each lamp would cast its light to the part of the tabernacle over against it, and the whole would thus be sufficiently lighted. This typified the light of revelation, & the teaching of the Holy Spirit thro' Christ Jesus, afforded to the church in this dark world, to direct her worship and obedience, and administer to her consolation; but in heaven, 'the Lord will be unto her an everlasting light, and God himself her glory.'

2 The incense to be burnt daily on this altar, signified both the prayers of saints, & the intercession of Christ, to which are owing the acceptableness and success of these prayers. The rings and staves, and all the appurtenances of this altar, were overlaid with gold, as all the vessels of the table and candlestick were of gold, for these were used in the holy place. God is the best, and we must serve him with the best we have; but the best we can serve him with in his courts on earth, is but as brass, compared with the gold, the sinless and spotless perfection with which his saints shall serve him in his holy place above.

4 Confectioner, or compounder. We have repeatedly seen that all things, in the service of God, were done according to exact command & rule. All this is worthy of our imitation. 'And it is never unseasonable to observe,' says Scott, 'that through the great Antitype, the Substance of all these shadows, our way being opened to the mercy seat, we should continually draw near in faith; feeding daily upon him & his fullness, as the nourishment of our souls; walking through this dark world according to the light of his word, & seeking for renewed & enlarged anointings of his Holy Spirit; that we may rejoice in him and glorify him, and at length be for ever with him in heaven.'

3 And he made all the vessels of the altar, the pots, and the shovels, and the basons, and the flesh-hooks, and the fire-pans: all the vessels thereof made he of brass.

4 And he made for the altar a brazen grate of net-work, under the compass thereof, beneath unto the midst of it.

5 And he cast four rings for the four ends of the grate of brass, to be places for the staves.

6 And he made the staves of shittim-wood, and overlaid them with brass.

7 And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the altar,[1] to bear it withal; he made the altar hollow with boards.

8 ¶ And he made [b]the laver of brass, and the foot of it of brass, [c]of the [2]looking-glasses[3] of the women assembling,[4] which assembled at the door[5] of the tabernacle of the congregation.

9 ¶ And he made [d]the court: on the south-side southward, the hangings of the court were of fine twined linen, an hundred cubits:[6]

10 Their pillars were twenty, and their brazen sockets twenty: the hooks of the pillars and their fillets were of silver.

11 And for the north side the hangings were an hundred cubits, their pillars were twenty, and their sockets of brass twenty: the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

12 And for the west side were hangings of fifty cubits, their pillars ten, and their sockets ten: the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

13 And for the east side eastward, fifty cubits.

14 The hangings of the one side of the gate were fifteen cubits, their pillars three, and their sockets three.

15 And for the other side of the court-gate, on this hand and that hand, were hangings of fifteen cubits, their pillars three, and their sockets three.

16 All the hangings of the court round about were of fine twined linen:

17 And the sockets for the pillars were of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver; and the overlaying of their chapiters of silver: and all the pillars of the court were filleted with silver.

18 And the hanging for the gate of the court was needle-work, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen; and twenty cubits was the length, and the height in the breadth was five cubits, answerable to the hangings of the court.

19 And their pillars were four, and their sockets of brass four; their hooks of silver, and the overlaying of their chapiters and their fillets of silver.

20 And all [e]the pins of the tabernacle, and of the court round about, were of brass.

21 ¶ This is the sum of the tabernacle, even of the [f]tabernacle of testimony, as it was counted, according to the commandment of Moses, for the service of the Levites, [g]by the hand of [h]Ithamar, son to Aaron the priest.

22 And [i]Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, made all that the LORD commanded Moses.

23 And with him was Aholiab, son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, an engraver, and a cunning workman, and an embroiderer in blue, and in purple, and in scarlet, and fine linen.

24 All [k]the gold that was occupied for the work, in all the work of the holy place, even the gold of the offering, was twenty and nine[1] talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary.

25 And the silver of them that were numbered of the congregation was an hundred[2] talents, and a thousand seven hundred and threescore and fifteen shekels, after [l]the shekel of the sanctuary:

26 [m]A bekah[3] for every man,[4] that is, half a shekel, after the shekel of the sanctuary, for every one that went to be numbered, from twenty years old and upward, for [n]six hundred[5] thousand, and three thousand, and five hundred and fifty men.

27 And of the hundred talents of silver were cast [o]the sockets of the sanctuary, and the sockets of the vail; an hundred sockets of the hundred talents, a talent for a socket.

Horns were much used in all ancient altars among the heathen, and some of them were entirely constructed of the horns of the beasts that had been offered in sacrifice; but such altars appear to have been erected rather as trophies in honour of their gods. On the reverses of several medals we find altars represented with horns at the corners.

3 The word maroth, from raah, to see, denotes mirrors or reflectors of any kind. That those here mentioned could not have been 'looking GLASSES' is evident, glass not being then in use; nor could the BRAZEN laver have been made of such materials. Artificial mirrors were first made of polished brass, afterwards of steel, and at a later period of silver; but the ancients had no mirrors made of glass.

5 It was usual, with the Egyptian women, to carry their mirrors with them to the temples. Dr Shaw mentions that the Arabian women carry them constantly hung at their breasts. The Israelites probably did the same. Those here mentioned might be women peculiarly devoted to the service of God, who were wont to assemble at the door of the tabernacle, where the Lord met his people. Or perhaps those who kept watch there during the night, who are alluded to, 1 Sa. 2. 22. Among the ancients women were generally employed in the office of door-keepers. Such were employed about the house of the high priest in our Lord's time; for a woman is actually represented as keeping the door of the palace of the high priest, John 18. 17; 'Then the damsel that kept the door said unto Peter,' see also Mat. 26 69. Many instances of this kind might be quoted from ancient writers. It is therefore very likely, says Clarke, that the persons mentioned here & in 1 Sa. 2. 22, were the women who guarded the tabernacle; & that they regularly relieved each other, a troop or company keeping regular watch.

3 The Hebrew word beka, from bekah to divide, separate into two, seems to signify, not a particular coin, but a shekel broken or cut in two; so, anciently, our farthing was a penny divided in the midst, and then subdivided, so that each division contained the fourth part of the penny; hence its name fourthing or fourthling, since corrupted into farthing. There appear to be three particular reasons why much riches should be employed in the construction of the tabernacle, &c. 1. To impress the people's minds with the glory & dignity of the Divine Majesty, and the importance of his service. 2. To take out of their hands the occasion of covetousness. . . . 3. To prevent pride and vain-glory, by leading them to give up to the divine service even the ornaments of their persons, which would have had too direct a tendency to divert their minds from better things. Thus God's worship was rendered august and respectable, incitements to sin & low desires were removed, & the people instructed to consider nothing valuable, but as far as it might be employed to the glory, and in the service, of God.—Clarke.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The clothes of service, and holy garments, 1. The ephod, 2—7. The breastplate, 8—21. The robe of the ephod, 22—26. The coats, mitre, and girdle of fine linen, 27—29. The plate of the holy crown, 30, 31. All is viewed and approved by Moses, 32—43.

AND of [a]the blue, and purple, and scarlet, they made [b]clothes of service, to do service in the [c]holy place, and made [d]the holy garments for Aaron; as the LORD commanded Moses.[3]

2 And he made [e]the ephod[4] of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

3 And they did beat the gold into thin plates,[5] and cut it into wires, to work it in the blue, and in the purple, and in the scarlet, and in the fine linen, with cunning work.

4 They made shoulder-pieces for it, to couple it together: by the two edges was it coupled together.

5 And the [f]curious girdle of his ephod, that was upon it, was of the same, according to the work thereof, of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen; as the LORD commanded Moses.

6 ¶ And they wrought [g]onyx-stones inclosed in ouches of gold, graven, as signets are graven, with the names of the children of Israel.

7 And he put them[6] on the shoulders of the ephod, that they should be stones for [h]a memorial to the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses.

8 ¶ And he made the [i]breastplate of cunning work, like the work of the ephod; of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

9 It was four-square; they made the breastplate double: a span was the length thereof, and a span the breadth thereof, being doubled.

10 And they set in it four rows of stones; [k]the first row was a [1]sardius, a topaz, and a carbuncle: this was the first row.

11 And the second row, an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond.[2]

12 And the third row, a ligure,[3] an agate, and an amethyst.

13 And the fourth row, a beryl, an onyx, and a jasper: they were inclosed in ouches of gold in their inclosings.

14 And the stones were according to the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet,[4] every one with his name, according to the twelve tribes.

15 And they made upon the breastplate [l]chains[5] at the ends, of wreathen work of pure gold.

16 And they made two ouches of gold, and two gold rings, and put the two rings in the two ends of the breastplate.

17 And they put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings on the ends of the breastplate.

18 And the two ends of the two wreathen chains they fastened in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulder-pieces of the ephod, before it.

19 And they made two rings of gold, and put them on the two ends of the breastplate, upon the border of it, which was on the side of the ephod inward.

20 And they made two other golden rings, and put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the fore-part of it, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

21 And they did bind the breastplate by his rings unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it might be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate might not be loosed from the ephod; as the LORD commanded Moses.

5 This mode of making wires, or threads, to be interwoven with the cloth, is most ancient, and is in conformity with the accounts which are to be found in ancient writers. The gold was beat into very thin plates, & then cut into threads or narrow slips. It is not exactly clear how the gold threads were applied to ornament the ephod of the high priest. We rather think they were not interwoven in the cloth, as in ch. 25. 34, it seems to be said that the colours in the enriched cloth, were the work of the embroiderer as distinguished from the weaver, who is afterwards mentioned. So also the robe of the ephod, which was all of blue, is said to have been of woven work (ver. 22,) probably to denote its simplicity. The same is also of the innermost coat.—See Pict. Bible. Clarke has the following note on the place. 'Apparently for the purpose of cutting it into wires, from pathal, to twist or twine. I cannot suppose that the Israelites had not then the art of making gold thread, as they possessed several arts, much more difficult; but in the present instance, figures made in a more solid form than that which could have been effected with gold thread, might have been required.

2 Yahalom, most likely the diamond so called, from halam, to smite, beat, because of its amazing hardness, by which it will break to pieces all other stones. It is a fine pellucid substance undebased with any admixture of other matter. It is the hardest and most precious of all gems; clear and transparent as the purest water, and of one simple and permanent appearance in all lights. It gives fire with steel; does not ferment with acid menstrua; nor is it calcinable by the strongest fire. And it is pre-eminently distinguished from every other substance by its vivid splendour, and the brilliancy of its reflections.

3 Ligure, the same as the Jacinth or Hyacinth. Agate, a semi-pellucid compound gem, formed of different simple minerals. Amethyst, a transparent gem composed of a strong blue and a deep red.

4 There can be no doubt but that mankind were, at this time, well acquainted with the art of polishing & engraving precious stones; and the various texts relating to the jewelled ornaments of Aaron's dress are very interesting indications of the progress which had been made in lapidary and stone engraving. It is to be observed that the shoulders of the ephod were ornamented with two onyx stones mounted on gold, and that these stones were engraved with the names of twelve tribes, six in each stone; and we may, therefore, suppose the work to have been of a rather minute character.—Pict. Bible.

5 John 10. 28; 17. 12; 1 Pe. 1. 5; Jude i.; these chains represent how fast the elect, as stationed in the church and new covenant, are fixed on Christ's heart. 'Christ is our great High Priest; when he undertook the work of our redemption, he put on the clothes of service, he arrayed himself with the gifts and graces of the Spirit, which he received not by measure, girded himself with the curious girdle of resolution, to go thro' with his undertaking, charged himself with all God's spiritual Israel, bore them on his shoulders, carried them in his bosom, laid them near his heart, engraved them on the palms of his hands, and presented them in the breastplate of Judgment to his Father.—Henry.

22 ¶ And he [m]made the robe of the ephod of woven work, all of blue.

23 And there was an hole in the midst of the robe, as the hole of an habergeon,[1] with a band round about the hole, that it should not rend.

24 And they made upon the hems of the robe pomegranates of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and twined linen.

25 And they made bells of pure gold, and put the bells between the pomegranates, upon the hem of the robe,[2] round about between the pomegranates.

26 A bell and a [n]pomegranate, a bell and a pomegranate, round about the [o]hem of the robe to minister in; as the LORD commanded Moses.

27 ¶ And they made [p]coats of fine linen,[3] of woven work, for Aaron, and for his sons;

28 And a mitre of fine linen, and goodly bonnets of fine linen, and linen breeches of fine twined linen;

29 And a girdle[4] of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, of needle-work; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 ¶ And they made [q]the plate of the holy crown of pure gold, and wrote upon it a writing, like to the engravings of a signet, [r]HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

31 And they tied unto it a lace of blue, to fasten it on high upon the mitre; as the LORD commanded Moses.

32 ¶ Thus was all the work of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation finished:[5] and the children of Israel did [s]according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.[6]

33 ¶ And they brought the tabernacle unto Moses, [t]the tent and all his furniture,[7] his taches, his boards, his bars, and his pillars, and his sockets;

34 And the covering of rams' skins dyed red, and the covering of badgers' skins, and the vail of the covering;

35 The ark of the testimony, and the staves thereof, and the mercy-seat;

36 The table, and all the vessels thereof, and the shew-bread;

37 The pure candlestick, with the lamps thereof, even with the lamps to be set in order, and all the vessels thereof, and the oil for light;

38 And the golden altar, and the anointing oil, and the sweet [1]incense, and the hanging for the tabernacle door;

39 The brazen altar, and his grate of brass, his staves, and all his vessels; the laver and his foot;

40 The hangings of the court, his pillars, and his sockets, and the hanging for the court-gate, his cords, and his pins, and all the vessels of the service of the tabernacle, for the tent of the congregation;

41 The [u]clothes of service to do service in the holy place; and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and his sons' garments, to minister in the priest's office.

42 According to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel made all the work.

43 And Moses [v]did look upon all the work, and, behold, they had done it as the LORD had commanded, even so had they done it: and Moses [w]blessed them.[2]

CHAPTER XL.

The tabernacle is commanded to be reared, 1—8. And anointed, 9—11. Aaron and his sons to be sanctified, 12—15. Moses performeth all things accordingly, 16, 17, 20, 22, 24, 28, 30, 33. A cloud covereth the tabernacle, 34—38.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 On the first day[3] of [a]the first month shalt thou set up the [b]tabernacle of the tent of the congregation;

3 And thou shalt put therein [c]the ark of the testimony,[4] and cover the ark with the vail.

4 And thou shalt bring in [d]the table, and set in order[5] the things that are to be set in order upon it; and thou shalt bring in [e]the candlestick, and light the lamps thereof.

5 And thou shalt set [f]the altar of gold for the incense before the ark of the testimony, and [g]put the hanging of the door to the tabernacle.

6 And thou shalt set [h]the altar of the burnt-offering before the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation.

7 And thou shalt set [i]the laver between the tent of the congregation

1 The habergeon or hauberk, was a small coat of mail, something in form of a half shirt; made of small iron rings curiously united together. It covered the neck & breast, was very light, and resisted the stroke of a sword. Sometimes it went over the whole head, as well as over the breast. This kind of defensive armour was used among the Asiatics, particularly the ancient Persians, among whom it is still worn. It seems to have been borrowed from the Asiatics by the Norman Crusaders.—Clarke.

7 In this and the following verses, a recapitulation is made of all the particulars mentioned in the foregoing chapter, which they brought to Moses, that they might see whether they were made according to his order. It is probable that the whole congregation, or the heads of them, accompanied Bezaleel, and the other artificers, when they brought these things to Moses for his approbation.

2 It is probable that Moses not only gave them praise for their diligence; but prayed to God that they might be prospered in all their undertakings, saved from every evil, and be brought at last to heaven. This blessing seems to have been given, to all the people. They had contributed liberally, and the workmen wro't faithfully, and the blessing of God was pronounced on them all. It is a truly delightful & noble spectacle to behold rulers and ruled cordially co-operating and liberally contributing their substance, as God hath prospered them, to advance his cause & set up his worship in the world. As Moses was a type of Christ, and the church in the wilderness a pattern of his church in the earth, and as they were fellow workers with him in the cause of God, so are believers now privileged to be fellow workers with their great Head. If they serve him willingly and faithfully, they shall receive his blessing at the great day, Mat. 25. 34.

3 On the fifteenth day of the first month the Israelites came out of Egypt; on the fiftieth day after that event the law was given; and with several intervening days, Moses spent at least eighty days upon the mount. Half the year must therefore have passed, or perhaps more, before they began to work upon the tabernacle; in half a year, or somewhat less, the whole was completed; and immediately Moses received directions for setting it up. 'The tabernacle' means the whole building; 'the tent,' the curtains by which it was covered.—Scott.

8 And thou shalt set up [k]the court round about, and hang up the hanging at the court-gate.

9 ¶ And thou shalt take [l]the anointing oil, and anoint the tabernacle, and all that is therein, and shalt hallow it, and all the vessels thereof: and it shall be holy.

10 And thou shalt anoint the altar of the burnt-offering, and all his vessels, and [m]sanctify the altar: and it shall be an altar most holy.[1]

11 And thou shalt anoint the laver and his foot, and sanctify it.

12 ¶ And thou shalt [n]bring Aaron and his sons unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and wash them with water.

13 And thou shalt put upon Aaron the holy garments, and [o]anoint him, and sanctify him; that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

14 And thou shalt bring his sons, and clothe them with coats:

15 And thou shalt anoint them, as thou didst anoint their father, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office: for their anointing shall surely be an [p]everlasting priesthood[2] throughout their generations.

16 Thus did Moses: according to all that the LORD commanded him, so did he.

17 ¶ And it came to pass in [q]the first month, in the second year, on the first day of the month, that the tabernacle was reared up.[3]

18 And Moses [r]reared up the tabernacle, and fastened his sockets, and set up the boards thereof, and put in the bars thereof, and reared up his pillars.

19 And he spread abroad [s]the tent over the tabernacle, and put the covering of the tent above upon it; as the LORD commanded Moses.

20 ¶ And he took and put [t]the testimony into the ark, and set the staves on the ark, and put the [u]mercy-seat above upon the ark.

21 And [v]he brought the ark into the tabernacle, and set up the vail of the covering, and covered the ark of the testimony;[1] as the LORD commanded Moses.

22 ¶ And [w]he put the table in the tent of the congregation, upon the side of the tabernacle [x]northward, without the vail.

23 And he [y]set the bread in order upon it before the LORD; as the LORD had commanded Moses.

24 ¶ And he put [z]the candlestick in the tent of the congregation, over against the table, on the side of the tabernacle southward.

25 And he lighted the lamps before the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

27 And he burnt sweet incense thereon; as the LORD commanded Moses.

28 ¶ And he [b]set up the hanging at the door of the tabernacle.

29 And he put [c]the altar of burnt-offering by the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation, and offered upon it the burnt-offering, and the meat-offering; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 ¶ And he set [d]the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and put water there, to wash withal.

31 And Moses, and Aaron, and his sons, [e]washed their hands and their feet thereat.

32 When they went into the tent of the congregation, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed; as the LORD commanded Moses.

33 And he reared up [f]the court round about the tabernacle and the altar, and set up the hanging of the court gate: [g]so Moses finished[2] the work.

2 In the whole of this solemn service, Moses acted as a priest and as a type of him, who unites in his own person the offices of a prophet, priest, and king. But after Aaron and his sons were fully established in their office, it does not appear that Moses performed any of the services, to which they were especially appointed. As, however, he went into the tabernacle to inquire of the Lord, it may be supposed that on these occasions, he washed his hands and feet at the laver as Aaron & his sons did in their daily ministrations.—Scott.

3 The cloud and the glory of the Lord were not two different things; but one and the same, as the pillar of cloud and of fire were. For outwardly it was a cloud, and inwardly it was a fire; and accordingly here, the external part of it covered the tabernacle without, while the internal part shone in full glory within the house. Thus it was upon mount Sinai, where Moses is said to draw near to the thick darkness where God was, ch. 20. 21; that is, the glory of the Lord was in that thick darkness. And so we read before that the glory of the Lord appeared in the cloud, ch. 16. 10. And so those words are to be interpreted, ch. 24. 16. The glory of the Lord abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it, (that is, covered the glory of the Lord, not the mount) six days. After which, on the seventh day, the glory of the Lord broke thro' it, & appeared like devouring fire in the sight of all the people, ver. 17. —Patrick.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF EXODUS.

IN the book of Genesis we have an account of the creation of the world in general, which seems intended to be only introductory to the history of the creation of man in particular, and of the special providence of God in regard to him, as a creature and as a sinner, the object of his mercy through a Redeemer. The book of Exodus takes up and carries on the continuance of this history. It relates the progress of that wonderful plan by which the promise to Abraham, that in him and his seed should all the nations of the earth be blessed, was gradually advancing to fulfilment. It exhibits such wondrous manifestations of the power, holiness, and faithfulness of Jehovah, the covenant God of Israel, as gave the sure and certain pledge that his counsel should stand, and whatever he had promised he was fully able to perform. In his miraculous judgments upon Egypt, in the overthrow of Pharaoh and his host, He gave proof that the gates of hell should not prevail against his church. In the miraculous deliverances of the Israelites, the miraculous provision for their temporal wants, manna from heaven, and water from 'the rock that followed them,' in the pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night, He gave testimony to his all-sufficiency, his abounding grace, unchanging faithfulness, and tender love which would never leave nor forsake his church and people. In the presence of the Angel of the covenant, whom we have seen repeatedly appearing unto Moses, we have the evidence that he is Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever; whose day Abraham saw afar off and was glad; who when on earth declared 'before Abraham was I AM,' and promised when he sent forth his servants to preach the gospel to every creature, 'Lo, I AM with you always, even unto the end of the world.' Divine inspiration tells us that the manna by which the Israelites were fed, and the water from the rock, were the spiritual food and drink which are to be found in all their fullness in Christ the Redeemer, by all who will repair to him. In this narration we have a picture of the care of Jehovah over his church and people, in all the stages of their journeys through the wilderness of life; not only in providing for their wants, and preserving them from the hands of those that hate them, but in correcting them for their profit, that they may be partakers of his holiness. And last of all, and not the least important, have we a revelation of that law, which is intended as our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. So that of this portion of holy writ it may be emphatically said, that it is 'profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, and instruction in righteousness.' It is in itself, viewed merely as a composition, full of incident of very singular and varied interest. It narrates events of unequalled grandeur, in the simplicity of unvarnished truth, and yet in terms of the loftiest sublimity. Witness the song of Moses. But when we reflect that Moses acted, as well as wrote, under the direct guidance and inspiration of the Almighty, and that the things which he wrote were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope; when, in other words, we hear God speaking to us, through Moses, in the bush burning and not consumed, when we see him in the cloud by day, and the pillar of fire by night, pointing the way to us to the rest that remaineth; let us turn aside and see the great sight, draw near with reverence to contemplate God's wonders recorded in this book, and in a believing and confiding spirit, go where he commands, and follow where by his signs in the heavens he points the way. As we have seen that his promises to Abraham have been so far fulfilled, that the enemies of God and his people were overcome, even when his people were very few, when the power of man seemed invincible, and the barriers of nature insurmountable, and that yet the power of Pharaoh and the 'first-born of all his strength,' sunk before the breath of the Almighty, that He clave the fountain and the flood, and made a way for them in the desert, let us rest assured that yet shall the people and church of God come forth in glorious triumph, and go forth and possess the whole earth. She shall yet enlarge her tent and dwell safely in a secure habitation. And as God appointed the passover as a memorial of his deliverance of Israel and destruction of their enemies, and a token of his mercy yet to come, so let us behold in 'Christ our passover sacrificed for us' and in the memorials of his broken body and shed blood, which he hath appointed to shew forth his death till he come again, the tokens of God's everlasting mercy, and of our final triumph over all the enemies of our souls, and the earnest of the purchased possession in the heavenly Canaan. Let not her standard-bearers faint but be of good courage, and let her sons go up to possess the land. As the Great ANGEL, He who dwelt in the bush, was with Moses, so will he be with us. He hath said, 'I will never leave thee nor forsake thee.' He that is for us is mightier than all that can be against us; he will feed his people with the heavenly manna, and guide them like a flock; and as a beast goeth down to the valley to feed and repose in the rich pastures, so shall the Spirit of God yet cause his weary church to rest, make her to lie down in green pastures, and bring her to living fountains of waters. May the Spirit of the Lord then lead us to the Rock that is higher than we. If, reader, thou dost yet stand afar off, and hast not sought shelter under the shadow of this great Rock, and seest no beauty in the Redeemer, the Holy One, who is a hiding-place from the tempest, then look at Sinai invested with 'fire and blackness, and darkness and tempest,' and hear the sound of the trumpet, and the voice of words proclaiming the terrors of God's law, and the solemnities of judgment; yet hear Him proclaiming them in the character of a redeeming God, to drive thee from Sinai to Christ; 'to mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel.'

THE THIRD BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

LEVITICUS.

ACCORDING to the custom noticed in our remarks introductory to the books of Genesis and Exodus, this book in the Hebrew Bible was called VAIYIKRA, 'and he called,' that being the word with which it commences. In the Septuagint and Vulgate, or Greek and Latin translations, it is called Leviticus, a title which is adopted by almost all modern versions. This name is descriptive of the main subject of it. It records the consecration of Aaron and his sons, who were of the tribe of Levi, to the office of the priesthood; and principally treats of the laws and regulations of the Levites and priests in general, and the directions for the various ministrations of this office. 'It contains an account of the ceremonies to be observed in the offering of burnt-sacrifices; meat, peace, and sin-offerings: the consecration of priests, together with the institution of the three grand national festivals of the Jews: the Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles, with a great variety of other ecclesiastical matters.' It contains the transactions of from eight days to a month of time. In the ritual observances which it enjoins and relates, the gospel was preached to the Israelites. The whole system was intended to point out the 'Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, pardon, reconciliation, and sanctification, through his blood. Besides certain particular appointments and predictions, such as that of the sabbatical year, with the promise attached to it, which never failed, and the prediction in the 26th chapter of the present condition of Israel, the whole may be considered prophetical, and as now fulfilled in the antitype proved to have been divinely inspired, and thus highly instructive and confirmatory of our faith in the divine Record.

CHAPTER I.

The burnt-offerings, 1, 2. Of the herd, 3—9. Of the flocks, 10—13. Of the fowls, 14—17.

A.M.2514. B.C.1490

AND the LORD [a]called unto Moses, and spake unto him [b]out of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [c]If any man of you bring an offering[1] unto the LORD, ye shall bring your offering of the cattle, even of the herd, and of the flock.

3 ¶ If his offering be [d]a burnt-sacrifice of the herd, let him offer [e]a male without blemish: he shall offer it of [f]his own voluntary will, [g]at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, before the LORD.

4 And he shall [h]put his hand upon the head of the burnt-offering; and it shall [i]be accepted for him, to make atonement[k] for him.

5 And he shall [l]kill the bullock before the LORD; and [m]the priests, Aaron's sons, shall bring the blood, and [n]sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

6 And he shall [o]flay the burnt-offering, and cut it into his pieces.

7 And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put [p]fire upon the altar, and [q]lay the wood in order upon the fire.

8 And the priests, Aaron's sons, shall [r]lay the parts, the head, and the fat, in order upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar.

9 But his [s]inwards and his legs shall he wash in water: and the priest shall [t]burn all on the altar, to be a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a [u]sweet savour unto the LORD.[1]

10 ¶ And if his offering be [v]of the flocks, namely, of the sheep, or of the goats, for a burnt-sacrifice; he shall bring it [w]a male without blemish.

11 And [x]he shall kill it[2] on the side of the altar [y]northward before the LORD: [z]and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar.

12 And he shall cut it into his pieces, with his head and his fat; and the priest shall lay them in order on the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar.

13 But he shall wash the inwards and the legs with water; and the priest shall bring it all, and burn it upon the altar: it is a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire,[3] of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if the burnt-sacrifice for his offering to the LORD [a]be of fowls, then he shall bring his offering of turtle-doves, or of young pigeons.

15 And the priest shall bring it unto the altar, and wring[4] off his head,

1 The word rendered offering is from a root signifying to approach, or draw near; and denotes that by which men draw near to God. The offering was to be of the herd, or beeve kind, or of the flock, that is, sheep or goats; creatures that were clean, useful & valuable; neither beasts nor birds of prey. Sacrifices were appointed by God, as substitutions for the life of the offerer, and intended to point out the perfect & infinitely meritorious sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ.

1 This is an expression taken from the feelings and language of men, and denotes that it was acceptable to God, well pleasing in his sight. It was pleasing to God, say some, as an expression of devotion, faith, obedience, sincerity, and gratitude in the mind of the offerer. But it was so as an expression of faith in the sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ, in whom the Father is always pleased, and through his worshippers are accepted.

3 The burnt-offering, or whole burnt-offering, was the most important. no part but the skin being left unconsumed, and no part, as in other instances, being reserved for the priests. Great tenderness was exercised as to the value of the sacrifice, that the poor might not be excluded, and if presented in the right spirit, it was accepted.

and burn it on the altar; and the blood thereof shall be wrung out at the side of the altar.

16 And he shall pluck away his crop with his feathers,[1] and cast it beside the altar, on the east part, [b]by the place of the ashes.

17 And he shall cleave it with the wings thereof, but [c]shall not divide it asunder:[2] and the priest shall burn it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire: [d]it is a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

CHAPTER II.

The meat-offering of flour with oil and incense, 1—3. Either baken in the oven, 4; or on a plate, 5, 6; or in a frying-pan, 7—11. The oblation of the first-fruits not to be burnt, 12. The salt of the meat-offering, 13. The meat-offering of the first fruits in the ear, 14—16.

AND when any will offer a [a]meat-offering[3] unto the LORD, his offering shall be of [b]fine flour; and he shall pour[c] oil upon it, and put [d]frankincense thereon.

2 And he shall bring it to Aaron's sons the priests; and he shall take thereout his handful of the flour thereof, and of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof; and the priest shall burn [e]the memorial of it upon the altar, to be an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

3 And [f]the remnant of the meat-offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': it is a thing [g]most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

4 ¶ And if thou bring an oblation of a [h]meat-offering baken in the oven, it shall be [i]unleavened cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, or unleavened wafers[k] anointed with oil.

5 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat-offering baken in a pan,[4] it shall be of fine flour unleavened, mingled with oil.

6 Thou shalt [l]part it in pieces, and pour oil thereon: it is a meat-offering.

7 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat-offering baken in the frying-pan, it shall be made [m]of fine flour with oil.

8 And thou shalt bring the meat-offering that is made of these things unto the LORD: and when it is presented unto the priest, he shall bring it unto the altar.

9 And the priest shall take from the meat-offering a memorial thereof, and shall burn it upon the altar: it is [n]an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

10 And [o]that which is left of the meat-offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

11 No meat-offering, which ye shall bring unto the LORD, shall be made with leaven: for ye shall burn [p]no leaven, nor any [q]honey, in any offering of the LORD made by fire.

12 ¶ As for [r]the oblation of the first-fruits, ye shall offer them unto the LORD; but they shall not be burnt[1] on the altar for a sweet savour.

13 ¶ And every oblation of thy meat-offering shalt thou season [s]with salt; neither shalt thou suffer [t]the salt of the covenant[2] of thy God to be lacking from thy meat-offering: with all thine offerings thou shalt offer salt.

14 And if thou offer [u]a meat-offering of thy first-fruits unto the LORD, thou shalt offer, for the meat-offering of thy first-fruits, green ears of corn dried by the fire, even [v]corn beaten out of full ears.

15 And thou shalt [w]put oil upon it, and lay frankincense thereon:[3] it is a meat-offering.

16 And the priest shall burn [x]the memorial of it, part of the beaten corn thereof, and part of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof, it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

CHAPTER III.

The peace-offering of the herd, 1—5; of the flock, 6; either a lamb, 7—11; or a goat, 12—17.

AND if his oblation be [a]a sacrifice of peace-offering,[4] if he offer it of the herd; whether it be a male or female, he shall offer it [b]without blemish before the LORD.

2 And he shall [c]lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and [d]kill it at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation; and Aaron's sons, the priests, shall sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

3 And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace-offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD; [e]the fat[5] that

2 The bird, though split up, might not be cut into two, as is particularly noticed in the sacrifice of Abraham, Ge. 15. 10. "No birds but turtle-doves or young pigeons, (the former, say some, being best when full grown, & the latter when young,) were allowed in sacrifice at the altar. Even the other tame fowls were passed by, either as feeding grossly, or as fierce in their nature; but the cleanly, gentle nature of the dove aptly typified the holy, harmless Saviour, & represented the character of his true disciples. As the blood of this sacrifice also must be sprinkled or poured out by the priest, he was ordered to kill it, lest the blood should be wasted, being but little in all. The priest was also required to prepare it for the altar, in which great exactness was needful. It was the sacrifice of the poor, and as acceptable as more costly oblations, when brought in a right spirit; it was therefore proper the priests should attend particularly to it, though neither splendid in itself, nor attended with any perquisites to them, ch. 7. 8; to teach them, that the souls of the poor were to be as carefully watched over as those of the wealthy."—Scott.

3 These seem to be an entirely different kind of offerings from the burnt sacrifice. Though some writers think they might be accepted in their stead from those who were too poor to offer the latter; yet the oil, frankincense, &c., with which they required to be offered, would render them as costly as a young pigeon. It is probable, therefore, that they were offerings of thanksgiving, & typified Jesus Christ as the Bread of Life that came down from heaven, and giveth himself for the life of the world.

But the peace-offering was divided between the altar, the priests, and the offerer, intimating, therefore, a feast of communion between God & his people. It denoted peace and reconciliation thro' the sacrifice of Christ; peace of conscience, and joy in the Holy Ghost, and the intimate communion of believers with Christ their head, & with one another thro' Him.

When these appointments had been complied with, the priests had a portion of the peace-offerings assigned them, and then the offerer and his friends religiously feasted on the remainder.

2 Christ is eminently our peace-offering. Thro' his sacrifice, pardon, acceptance, and purification are obtained. We thus have peace with God, peace of conscience, peace with all men. Peace was the precious legacy he bequeathed to his followers. Even when in tribulation in the world, they have peace in him, for he overcame it thro' the blood of his cross; see John 14. 27; Ep. 2. 13-17; Ga. 1. 4.

3 'The large fat tail entire, taken off close to the rump.' — Boothroyd. This rendering makes the meaning of this direction plain. The large or fat-tailed sheep is particularly abundant in Syria and Palestine. Dr Russel, in his Natural History of Aleppo, says that their tails are of a substance between fat and marrow, and are not eaten separately, but mixed with the lean meat in many of their dishes, and also often used instead of butter; that a common sheep of this kind, without the head, fat, skin, and entrails, weighs from sixty to seventy English pounds, of which the tail usually weighs fifteen pounds and upwards; but that those of the largest breed, when fattened, will weigh one hundred and fifty pounds, and their tails fifty. To prevent their tails being injured when in the fields, the shepherds fix under them a piece of board, which to enable the creatures to drag it along the more easily, is often supplied with little wheels. The tail was the most valuable, and deemed the most delicate part of the animal, and therefore fit to be offered as a sacrifice.

4 This part of the offering fed the sacred fire, which was emblematical of the divine justice, and typified the satisfaction made for sin by the death of Christ. Communion with God, as reconciled to believers thro' this atonement, is in this ceremonial constantly represented as a feast in which God meets with his worshippers; and therefore that portion of the sacrifice, which was consumed on the altar, is often called the bread, or food, of God.—Scott.

CHAP. IV.

The sin-offering of ignorance for the priest, 1—12; for the congregation, 13—21; for a ruler, 22—26; for any of the people, 27—35.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a soul shall sin [a]through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD, concerning things [b]which ought not to be done, and shall do against any of them:

3 If [c]the priest that is anointed do sin according to the sin[2] of the people: then let him bring, for his sin which he hath sinned, [d]a young bullock without blemish unto the LORD [e]for a sin-offering.

4 And he shall [f]bring the bullock unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD; and shall [g]lay his hand upon the bullock's head,[3] and kill the bullock before the LORD.

5 And the priest that is anointed shall [h]take of the bullock's blood, and bring it to the tabernacle of the congregation.

6 And the priest shall [i]dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle of the blood [k]seven times before the LORD, before the vail of the sanctuary.

7 And the priest shall put some of the blood upon [l]the horns of the altar of sweet incense before the LORD, which is in the tabernacle of the congregation; and shall pour [m]all the blood of the bullock at the bottom of the altar of the burnt-offering, which is at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

8 And he shall take off from it [n]all the fat of the bullock for the sin-offering; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

9 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

2 The sin in question is that 'thro' ignorance.' Tho' it was committed through ignorance it was still sin and required an atonement. 'The priest that is anointed,' is supposed to mean the high priest. If he, thro' carelessness, or ignorance of the law of God, in any particular instance, was guilty of its violation, the whole nation was interested, and his sin was more heinous. The common priests, if not included in the description of the priest 'that is anointed,' were under the same law as the common Israelites. We may from this observe, that no countenance is here given to the nation, that even the high priest was God's infallible vicegerent on earth. Even he was liable to sins of ignorance.

1 The skin and the flesh of the sin-offerings in general were the perquisite of the priests; (ch. 7. 7, 8; 10. 16, 17;) but when the high priest offered the sin-offering for himself, or for the congregation, the whole was burnt; as a more effectual expression of the greatness of the offence, & the abhorrence in which he held it.—Scott.

2 Thus the guilt was typically conveyed away from the whole congregation, who were otherwise liable to suffer for it. Christ, who was made sin, or a sin-offering, for us, suffered without the gate of Jerusalem, as bearing away the sin of his people; that when it is sought for, it may no where be found, He. 13. 9-14. This was also expressive of the nature of true repentance, which expels sin with abhorrence, drives it to a distance out of the camp, and refuses to have any thing more to do with it.—Scott.

1 The word nasi, rendered "ruler," frequently denotes the head of a tribe; but the Jews understand it to mean the president of the sanhedrim, or national council. When the nation had judges, or kings, or any ruler distinct from the high priest; he, as well as those next under him in authority over the several tribes, would be concerned in this law. Yet the sin-offering to be offered for him, when he discovered his offence, was not only of less value than that appointed for the high priest or congregation, but it was sacrificed with very different rites; for it was not expected, that the civil magistrates should understand the ordinances of religion so well as the high priests; nor was he so absolutely the representative of the nation before God, as this typical mediator. As the ruler's sacrifice was a sin-offering of a distinct nature from those before mentioned, it was slain in the same place where the burnt-offerings were; whereas the other sacrifices were killed in any part of the court. Any priest, as far as it appears from the text, might officiate; the blood was not carried into the sanctuary, nor the body burnt without the camp, but eaten by the priests.—Scott.

4 In the margin, 'people of the land;' any one who was neither a priest nor ruler among the people; or as our version has it, 'any of the common or ordinary class of the people;' such as were not distinguished by any public official station. The sin-offering for them was of something less value, though presented with the same rites. The sin of the high priest, or of the whole congregation, brought a typical pollution on the interior part of the sanctuary, endangering the very essence of religion; the blood of the sin-offering was therefore applied to the altar of incense, for without expiation, the typical intercession could no longer be accepted.

CHAPTER V.

The trespass-offering of one that sinneth in concealing his knowledge, in touching an unclean thing, or in making an oath; from the flock, 1—6; or of fowls, 7—10; or of flour, 11—13. The trespass-offering in sacrilege, 14—16; and in sins of ignorance, 17—19.

AND if [a]a soul sin, and [b]hear the voice of swearing,[2] and is a witness, whether he hath seen or known of it; if he do not utter it, then he shall bear[c] his iniquity.

2 Or if a soul [d]touch any unclean thing, whether it be a carcase of an unclean beast, or a carcase of unclean cattle, or the carcase of unclean creeping things, and if it be [e]hidden from him; he also shall be unclean, [f]and guilty.

3 Or if he touch [g]the uncleanness[3] of man, whatsoever uncleanness it be that a man shall be defiled withal, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty.

4 Or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips [h]to do evil, or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these.

5 And it shall be, when he shall be guilty in one of these things, that he shall [i]confess[1] that he hath sinned in that thing.

6 And he shall bring his [k]trespass-offering[2] unto the LORD, for his sin which he hath sinned, [l]a female from the flock, a lamb, or a kid of the goats, for a sin-offering; and [m]the priests shall make an atonement for him concerning his sin.

7 And [n]if he[3] be not able to bring a lamb, then he shall bring, for his trespass which he hath committed, [o]two turtle-doves, or two young pigeons,[4] unto the LORD; [p]one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering.

8 And he shall bring them unto the priest, who shall offer that which is for the sin-offering first, and [q]wring off his head from his neck, but shall not divide it asunder.

9 And he shall [r]sprinkle of the blood of the sin-offering upon the side of the altar; and the [s]rest of the blood shall be wrung out at the bottom of the altar: it is a sin-offering.

10 And he shall offer the second for a burnt-offering, according to the manner;[5] and the priest [t]shall make an atonement for him, for his sin which he hath sinned, and it shall be forgiven him.

11 But [u]if he be not able to bring two turtle-doves, or two young pigeons; then he that sinned shall bring for his offering [v]the tenth part of an ephah of [w]fine flour for a sin-offering: he shall put [x]no oil upon it, neither shall he put any frankincense thereon; [y]for it is a sin-offering.

12 Then shall he bring it to the priest, and the priest shall take his handful of it, even [z]a memorial thereof, and burn it on the altar, [a]according to the offerings made by fire unto the LORD: it is a sin-offering.

13 And [b]the priest shall make an atonement for him, as touching his sin that he hath sinned in one of these, and it shall be forgiven him: and the remnant [c]shall be the priest's, as a meat-offering.

1 It is observable that the words, 'a sweet savour to the Lord,' are added to none of these sin-offerings, but that of the private Israelite; which might imply an encouragement to offenders to present their offerings, when conscious of having sinned, though their sin was not known by others; for, though less costly than those appointed for other orders, they would be equally acceptable to God. In all the cases, however, it is implied, that the atonement would be accepted and the offence pardoned.—Scott. It is especially worthy of notice, that we are not permitted to plead ignorance as a sufficient excuse for any sin. It is, when not wilful and deliberate, an alleviation of the guilt; but in all cases sin is contrary to the will of God, and cannot be pardoned by him without an atonement. It is an universal proposition, that without shedding of blood there is no remission. We have always need of the prayer, 'cleanse thou me from secret faults,' 'keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins.'

1 Confession of sin was necessary to forgiveness. A man might outwardly bring his offering, and yet not acknowledge his guilt. Or perhaps this voluntary confession of his sin, before it was discovered, was necessary to preserve him from the temporal punishment of his sin; and certainly as the typical sacrifices could only make ceremonially clean, humble confession of sin was absolutely necessary to obtaining salvation through the sacrifice of the promised Redeemer.

2 Scott states, generally, the difference between the 'trespass-offering' and the 'sin-offering' thus: the sin-offering seems to have been the expiation of offences committed in matters of religion, from a mistake or inadvertency respecting the law. But the trespass-offerings were required for the casual deviations from the ritual law, when known, thro' inattention or surprise; or for crimes committed against the moral precepts which implied injustice to men.

But with that tenderness for the condition of his people, which characterizes all the laws of God, a less expensive sacrifice is appointed for the poor, that they might be encouraged to confess their sins, and seek for pardon in the appointed way. Christ came especially to preach the gospel to the poor, and salvation is offered without money and without price.

sin through ignorance, [e]in the holy things[1] of the LORD; then he shall bring for his trespass unto the LORD, [a]a ram without blemish out of the flocks, with [g]thy estimation[2] by shekels of silver, after [h]the shekel of the sanctuary, for a trespass-offering.

16 And he shall [i]make amends for the harm that he hath done in the holy thing, and shall add [k]the fifth part thereto, and give it unto the priest: and [l]the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass-offering, and it shall be forgiven him.

17 ¶ And if [m]a soul sin, and commit any of these things which are forbidden to be done by the commandments of the LORD; [n]though he wist it not,[3] yet is he guilty, [o]and shall bear his iniquity.

18 And he [p]shall bring a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, [q]for a trespass-offering, unto the priest: and [r]the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his ignorance wherein he erred, and wist it not; and it shall be forgiven him.

19 It is a trespass-offering: he hath certainly [s]trespassed against the LORD.

CHAPTER VI.

The trespass-offering for sins done wittingly, 1—7. The law of the burnt-offering, 8—13; and of the meat-offering, 14—18. The offering at the consecration of a priest, 19—23. The law of the sin-offering, 24—30.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 If a soul sin, and [a]commit a trespass against the LORD, and [b]lie unto his neighbour [c]in that which was delivered him to keep, or in fellowship,[4] or in a thing taken away by violence, or hath [d]deceived his neighbour;

3 Or [e]have found that which was lost, and lieth concerning it, and [f]sweareth falsely; in any of all these that a man doeth, sinning therein:

4 Then it shall be, [g]because he hath sinned, and is guilty, that he shall restore that [h]which he took violently away, or the thing which he hath deceitfully gotten, or that which was delivered him to keep, or the lost thing which he found,

5 Or all that about which he hath sworn falsely; he shall even [i]restore it in the principal, and shall add the fifth part more thereto, and give it unto him to whom it appertaineth, in the day of his trespass-offering.[1]

6 And he shall bring his trespass-offering unto the LORD, [k]a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass-offering, unto the priest.

7 And the priest shall [l]make an atonement for him before the LORD; and it shall be forgiven him, for any thing of all that he hath done, in trespassing therein.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

9 Command Aaron and his sons,[2] saying, This is the law of [m]the burnt-offering:[3] it is the burnt-offering, because[4] of [n]the burning upon the altar all night[5] unto the morning, and the fire of the altar shall be burning in it.

10 And the priest shall put on his [o]linen garment, and his linen breeches shall he put upon his flesh, and take up the ashes which the fire hath [p]consumed with the burnt-offering on the altar, and he shall put them [q]beside the altar.

11 And he shall [r]put off his garments, and put on other garments, and carry forth the ashes [s]without the camp unto a clean place.

12 And [t]the fire upon the altar shall be burning in it; it shall not be put out: and the priest shall [u]burn wood on it every morning, and lay the burnt-offering in order upon it; and he shall burn thereon the fat of the peace-offerings.

13 The fire shall ever be burning upon the altar; it shall never go out.

14 ¶ And this is the law of [v]the meat-offering: the sons of Aaron shall offer it before the LORD, before the altar.

15 And he shall take of it his handful, of the flour of the meat-offering, and of the oil thereof, and all the frankincense which is upon the meat-offering, and shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour, even [w]the memorial of it, unto the LORD.

16 And [x]the remainder thereof shall Aaron and his sons eat: with [y]unleavened bread [z]shall it be eaten in the

1 This law related to the case of a person who had kept back any part of his tithes, first-fruits, or other oblations, or any part of the price of things dedicated to the Lord, or had eaten of any of the holy things of which none but the priests had a right to eat; and such like.

2 The meaning seems to be that the priest was to estimate the value of that which was kept back in the standard-money of the sanctuary, which the offerer was to pay, adding a fifth part more to it, and bringing besides a ram for a trespass-offering.

3 This case seems to be distinguished from the former only by the circumstance that it was done unwittingly. But if it came to his knowledge or recollection, or even had the suspicion that it was so, he must not suffer guilt upon his conscience, nor must God be deprived of what is his due. Even when he was in doubt, though he had not actually been guilty, still he must give the decision in favour of the claims of the Almighty. It is on the same general principle that it is laid down in Ro. 14.22-23. 'Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that which he alloweth: and he that doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for whatsoever is not of faith is sin.'

2 In the preceding part of this book, directions have been given to the people respecting several sacrifices to be offered by them; here Moses is directed to command the priests respecting their official services. At this place the Jews begin the 25th section of the law; and here, undoubtedly, the 6th chapter should commence, as it does in some of the best editions of the Hebrew Bible. It is to be remembered that the division of chapters is not a matter of any authority.

3 This law properly refers to that burnt-offering which was daily made in what was termed the morning and evening sacrifice: and as he had explained the nature of this burnt-offering in general, with its necessary ceremonies, as far as the persons who brought them were concerned, now takes up the same in relation to the priests who were to receive them from the hands of the offerer; and present them to the Lord on the altar of burnt-offerings.—Clarke.

n ver. 12, 13.

5 It is generally thought that the stated evening burnt-offering was laid upon the altar by successive pieces, so as to keep burning all night till the time of the stated morning burnt-offering, which was consumed more speedily, to make way for other sacrifices that might be brought. Nothing more, however, can be gathered from the text, than that the fire was kept constantly burning and not to be permitted to go out. From this, doubtless, was borrowed the custom of the heathen of maintaining perpetual fire in their temples. But they were ignorant that this perpetual fire typified the eternal justice of God, consuming the atoning sacrifice for sin.

holy place; in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation they shall eat it.

17 It shall not be [a]baken with leaven. I have given it unto them for their portion of my offerings made by fire: [b]it is most holy, as is the sin-offering, and as the trespass-offering.

18 [c]All the males among the children of Aaron shall eat of it. [d]It shall be a statute for ever in your generations concerning the offerings of the LORD made by fire: [e]every one that toucheth them shall be holy.

19 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

20 This is [f]the offering of Aaron, and of his sons, which they shall offer unto the LORD, in the day when he is anointed;[1] [g]the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for [h]a meat-offering perpetual, half of it in the morning, and half thereof at night.

21 In [i]a pan it shall be made with oil; and when it is baken, thou shalt bring it in: and the baken pieces of the meat-offering shalt thou offer for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

22 And the priest of his sons, that is[k] anointed in his stead,[2] shall offer it: it is a statute for ever unto the LORD; it shall be [l]wholly burnt.

23 For every meat-offering for the priest shall be wholly burnt: [m]it shall not be eaten.[3]

24 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

25 Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, saying, This is [n]the law of the sin-offering: [o]in the place where the burnt-offering is killed shall the sin-offering be killed before the LORD: [p]it is most holy.

26 The [q]priest that offereth it for sin shall eat it;[4] in the holy place shall it be eaten, [r]in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation.

27 Whatsoever shall [s]touch the flesh thereof shall be holy: and when there is sprinkled of the blood thereof upon any garment, thou shalt [t]wash that whereon it was sprinkled in the holy place.

28 But [u]the earthen vessel[5] wherein it is sodden shall be broken: and if it be sodden in a brazen pot, it shall be both scoured, and rinsed in water.

29 All [v]the males among the priests shall eat thereof: it is most holy.

30 And [w]no sin-offering, whereof any of the blood is brought into the tabernacle of the congregation, to reconcile withal in the holy place, shall be eaten; it shall be burnt in the [1]fire.

LIKEWISE this is [a]the law of the trespass-offering; [b]it is most holy.

2 In [c]the place where they kill the burnt-offering shall they kill the trespass-offering: and [d]the blood thereof shall he sprinkle round about upon the altar.

3 And he shall offer of it [e]all the fat thereof; the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards,

4 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul that is above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

5 And the priests shall [f]burn them upon the altar for an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a trespass-offering.

6 Every [g]male among the priests shall eat thereof: it shall be eaten in the holy place: it is most holy.

7 As the sin-offering is, so is [h]the trespass-offering:[2] there is one law for them: the priest that maketh atonement therewith shall have it.

8 And the priest that offereth any man's burnt-offering, even the priest shall have to himself [i]the skin of the burnt-offering which he hath offered.

9 And all [k]the meat-offering that is baken in the oven, and all that is dressed in the frying-pan, and in the [3]pan, [l]shall be the priest's[4] that offereth it.

10 And every meat-offering mingled with oil, and dry, shall all the sons of Aaron have, [m]one as much as another.

11 ¶ And this is the law of [n]the sacrifice of peace-offerings, which he shall offer unto the LORD.

12 If he offer it for a [o]thanksgiving,

4 From the expostulation of Moses with Aaron, ch. 10. 17, we learn that the priest, by eating the sin-offering of the people, was considered as bearing their sin, and typically removing it from them; and besides, this was part of their maintenance, or what the scripture calls their inheritance; see Eze.44.27-30. This was afterwards greatly abused; for improper persons endeavoured to get into the priests' office merely that they might get a secular provision, which is a horrible profanity in the sight of God. 1 This is an additional law concerning the sin-offerings for the high priest, or the whole congregation; and it was also a general rule for the stated sin-offerings. These seem to have been a more explicit type of Christ's suffering without Jerusalem, as devoted to a death pronounced accursed in the law, than any other of the Mosaic institutions; while the priest at the same time carrying the blood into the sanctuary, applying it to the golden altar, and sprinkling it before the vail, most aptly represented the Redeemer, rising, ascending, and appearing in the presence of God for us; and, in virtue of his atonement and by his intercession, rendering our persons and services accepted.

13 Besides the cakes, he shall offer for his offering [q]leavened bread[1] with the sacrifice of thanksgiving of his peace-offerings.

14 And of it he shall offer one out of the whole oblation, for [r]an heave-offering unto the LORD, and it shall be [s]the priest's that sprinkleth the blood of the peace-offerings.

15 And the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings for thanksgiving shall [t]be eaten the same day that it is offered; he shall not leave any of it until the morning.[2]

16 But if the sacrifice of his offering [u]be a vow, or [v]a voluntary offering, it shall be eaten the same day that he offereth his sacrifice; and on the morrow [w]also the remainder of it shall be eaten.

17 But the remainder of the flesh of the sacrifice [x]on the third day shall be [y]burnt with fire.

18 And if any of the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings be eaten at all on the third day, [z]it shall not be accepted, neither shall it [a]be imputed unto him that offereth it: it shall be an [b]abomination, and the soul that eateth of it shall [c]bear his iniquity.

19 And the flesh that [d]toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten, it shall be burnt with fire: and as for the flesh, all that be clean shall eat thereof.

20 But the soul that eateth of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings that pertain unto the LORD, [e]having his uncleanness upon him, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

21 Moreover, the soul that shall touch any unclean thing, as [f]the uncleanness of man, or any [g]unclean beast, or any [h]abominable unclean thing, and eat of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings which pertain unto the LORD, even that soul shall be cut[i] off from his people.

24 And the fat of the beast[2] that dieth of itself, and the fat of that which is torn with beasts, may be used in any other use; but ye shall in no wise eat of it.

25 For whosoever eateth the fat of the beast, of which men offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, even the soul that eateth it [l]shall be cut off from his people.

26 Moreover, [m]ye shall eat no manner of blood, whether it be of fowl or of beast, in any of your dwellings.

27 Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even [n]that soul shall be cut off from his people.

28 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

30 [p]His own hands shall bring the offerings of the LORD made by fire; the fat, with the breast, it shall he bring, that [q]the breast may be waved for a wave-offering[4] before the LORD.

35 ¶ This is the portion [w]of the anointing of Aaron, and of the anointing of his sons,[5] out of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, in the day when [x]he presented them to minister unto the LORD in the priest's office;

1 As a cheerful feast expressive of peace, joy and gratitude was to be celebrated, leavened bread might be used, as well as the unleavened bread or cakes that accompanied the other sacrifices. Unleavened bread was a token not only of purity, but of abstinence and self-denial. The heave-offering was so called from its being lifted up or presented to the Lord.

2 Harmer supposes that the law here refers to the custom of drying flesh which had been devoted to religious purposes and preserving it for superstitious uses. It might be to prevent putrifaction, which would have been inconsistent with the typical purposes intended. Scott says on the place, 'In this prohibition of any part of the sacrifices being kept unto the third day, when it would begin to putrify, there might be a reference to Christ, who rose again in about the same time, and saw no corruption. But, more evidently, the Israelites were thus cautioned against procrastination in rendering thanks, in paying vows, or in seeking spiritual blessings; against superstition; and against distrust and covetousness. And they were taught to use hospitality to their friends and to the poor, without grudging... If these laws were wilfully broken, the offender would "bear his iniquity;" nor was any sacrifice appointed: but an inadvertent violation of them must be expiated by a trespass-offering.'

1 This prohibition, as appears from ver. 23, relates to beasts offered in sacrifice, and only when so offered. The fat of others might be eaten. The prohibition of blood related to all kinds of land animals. The blood was the life, and had especial respect to the atoning blood of Christ. Various reasons have been assigned for the prohibition of the fat of these animals, independently of their connection with the altar. Michaelis supposes that it was intended to force the Israelites upon the cultivation of the soil, and especially to cultivate the olive for its oil, being prohibited the use of animal fat, and thus they would be prevented from falling back into the pastoral life & wandering from place to place. It was intended also to prevent familiar intercourse with idolators in the religious feasts.

4 The offerer was required, with his own hands to bring these parts of the sacrifice to the priest, that the oblation of them might appear his own voluntary action. The breast, (which seems to have included the whole of what is at present, in cutting up slaughtered animals, divided into the two breasts) having been solemnly waved to and fro, as devoted to God, was eaten by the priests in general; but the right shoulder, having been heaved upwards, as in like manner given to the Lord, was the perquisite of the officiating priest. This might intimate, that as Christ, with his whole heart & all his power, serves the interest of his church, so ought the priests to serve God and the congregation.—Scott.

36 Which the LORD commanded to be given them of the children of Israel, in the day that he anointed them, by a statute for ever throughout their generations.

37 This is [y]the law of the burnt-offering, [z]of the meat-offering, [a]and of the sin-offering, [b]and of the trespass-offering, and [c]of the consecrations, and of [d]the sacrifice of the peace-offerings,

38 Which the Lord commanded Moses in mount Sinai, in the day that he [e]commanded the children of Israel to offer their oblations[1] unto the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai.

CHAPTER VIII.

Moses consecrateth Aaron and his sons, 1—13. Their sin-offering, 14—17. Their burnt-offering, 18—21. The ram of consecration, 22—30. The place and time of their consecration, 31—36.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Take [a]Aaron, and his sons[2] with him, and [b]the garments, and the anointing[c] oil, and [d]a bullock for the sin-offering, and two rams, and a basket of unleavened bread;

3 And [e]gather thou all the congregation together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And Moses [f]did as the LORD commanded him; and the assembly was gathered together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

5 And Moses said unto the congregation, This is the thing which the LORD [g]commanded to be done.

6 And Moses brought Aaron and his sons, and [h]washed them with water.[3]

7 And [i]he put upon him the coat, and girded him with the girdle, and clothed him with the robe, and put the ephod upon him, and he girded him with the curious girdle of the ephod, and bound it unto him therewith.

8 And he put [k]the breastplate upon him: also he put in the breastplate the [l]Urim and the Thummim.

9 And he put [m]the mitre upon his head; also upon the mitre, even upon his fore-front, did he put the golden plate, the holy crown; as the LORD commanded Moses.

10 And Moses took [n]the anointing oil, and anointed the tabernacle, and all that was therein, and sanctified them.

11 And [o]he sprinkled thereof upon the altar seven times, and anointed the altar, and all his vessels, both the laver and his foot, to sanctify them.

12 And [p]he poured of the anointing oil upon Aaron's head,[1] and anointed him, to sanctify him.

13 And Moses [q]brought Aaron's sons, and put coats upon them, and girded them with girdles, and put[2] bonnets upon them; as the LORD commanded Moses.

14 ¶ And [r]he brought the bullock for the sin-offering: and Aaron and his sons [s]laid their hands upon the head of the bullock for the sin-offering.

15 And [t]he slew it; and [u]Moses took the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about with his finger, and purified the altar, and poured the blood at the bottom of the altar, and sanctified it, [v]to make reconciliation upon it.

16 And he took [w]all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and Moses burned it upon the altar.

17 But [x]the bullock, and his hide, his flesh and his dung, he burnt with fire without the camp; as the LORD commanded Moses.

18 ¶ And he brought [y]the ram for the burnt-offering: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

19 And he killed it; and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

20 And he cut the ram into pieces; and Moses burnt the head, and the pieces, and the fat.

21 And he washed the inwards and the legs in water; and Moses burnt the whole ram upon the altar: it was a burnt-sacrifice for [z]a sweet savour, and an offering made by fire unto the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

22 ¶ And he brought the other ram, [a]the ram of consecration: and Aaron and his sons[3] laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

23 And he slew it; and Moses [b]took

1 The word rendered oblations, is a general name for all sorts of offerings or oblations to God. The root of the word is Karab, to approach or bring near; & the term therefore denotes any thing brought nigh to be offered or dedicated to the Lord, to whom also the offerer himself was, as it were, brought nigh, having access in the way appointed by the law. The comprehensive term is thus very appropriately introduced here at the conclusion of the account of the different offerings & sacrifices.

3 Here the ceremonies of consecration commence with ablutions, and we have seen that the priests were required to bathe their hands & feet whenever they entered the tabernacle. This doubtless was not merely to insure physical cleanness, but also to symbolize that spiritual purity with which men should appear before God. The present washing is, however, distinguished from the daily ablution, inasmuch as the whole person seems now to have been washed, but only the hands & feet on common occasions. The idea of the fitness of such a practice is so obvious, that it has been more or less in use in most religious systems. Pict. Bible. When it was confessedly typical, it is plainly preposterous in Christians to retain it as a part of religious worship.

1 This anointing with oil was typical of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit. It was conferred on priests and kings, if not on prophets, to qualify them for their office. It specially pointed out the anointing with the Holy Ghost of Him who in his own person sustains all these offices to his Church; and who was 'anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows,' to whom the Holy Spirit was given 'without measure,' or limit, and upon whom He rested, Is. 61. 1, as compared with Lu. 4. 18. The anointing with oil conferred peculiar sacredness, and it was considered peculiarly heinous to injure the 'Lord's anointed.' Speedy and terrible destruction is denounced upon all who oppose Him who was thus especially typified and styled, Ps. ii.

3 Calmet informs us that 'among the Romans the consecration of the high priest bore a close resemblance to that of the Jewish high priest; the Roman high priest, clothed in his pontificals, was conducted into a subterraneous place covered with a floor of boards pierced thro' with many holes. On this floor a bullock was sacrificed, whose blood running thro' the holes fell upon the priest who stood underneath to receive this sacred aspersion. Being completely covered with this sanguineous shower, he ascended & was acknowledged and adored by the people as Pontifex Maximus, or supreme high priest.' These rites, which were in all probability originally borrowed from the Jewish ritual, and mixed & disguised with their own superstitions, are described minutely by Aurelius Prudentius.

herein, and of the blood of it, and put it upon the tip of Aaron's right ear, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

24 And he brought Aaron's sons, and Moses put of the blood upon the tip of their right ears, and upon the thumbs of their right hands, and upon the great toes of their right feet;[1] and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

25 And he took [c]the fat, and the rump, and all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and the right shoulder:

26 And out of the basket of unleavened bread that was before the LORD, he took one unleavened cake, and a cake of oiled bread, and one wafer, and put them on the fat, and upon the right shoulder:

27 And he put oil upon Aaron's hands, and upon his sons' hands, [d]and waved them for a wave-offering before the LORD.

28 And Moses took them from off their hands, and burnt them on the altar upon the burnt-offering: [e]they were consecrations for a sweet savour; it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

29 And Moses took [f]the breast, and waved it for a wave-offering before the LORD: for of the ram of consecration it was Moses' part; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 And Moses took of [g]the anointing oil, and of the blood which was upon the altar, and sprinkled it upon Aaron,[2] and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon his sons' garments with him; and sanctified Aaron, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

31 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron and to his sons, [h]Boil the flesh at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and there [i]eat it with the bread that is in the basket of consecrations, as I commanded, saying, Aaron and his sons shall eat it.

32 And that which [k]remaineth of the flesh and of the bread shall ye burn with fire.[3]

33 And ye shall not go out of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation in seven days, until the days of your consecration be at an end: for [l]seven days[1] shall he consecrate you.

34 As [m]he hath done this day, so the LORD hath commanded to do, to make an atonement for you.

35 Therefore shall ye abide at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation day and night seven days, and [n]keep the charge of the LORD, that ye die not: for so I am commanded.

36 So [o]Aaron and his sons did all things which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

CHAPTER IX.

The first offerings of Aaron for himself and for the people, 1—7. The sin-offering, 8—11: and the burnt-offering for himself, 12—14. The offerings for the people, 15—22. Moses and Aaron bless the people, and fire cometh out from the Lord upon the altar, 23, 24.

AND it came to pass on [a]the eighth day, that Moses called Aaron and his sons, and the elders of Israel;

2 And he said unto Aaron, Take thee [b]a young calf[2] for a sin-offering, and [c]a ram for a burnt-offering, without blemish, and offer them before the LORD.

3 And unto the children of Israel thou shalt speak, saying, [d]Take ye a kid of the goats for a sin-offering; and [e]a calf and a lamb, [f]both of the first year, without blemish, for a burnt-offering;

4 Also [g]a bullock and a ram for peace-offerings, to sacrifice before the LORD;[3] [h]and a meat-offering mingled with oil: for to-day the LORD will appear unto you.

5 ¶ And they brought that which Moses commanded before the tabernacle of the congregation; [i]and all the congregation drew near, and stood before the LORD.

6 And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commanded that ye should do: and [k]the glory of the LORD shall appear unto you.

7 And Moses said unto Aaron, Go unto the altar, and [l]offer thy sin-offering, and thy burnt-offering, and make an atonement for thyself,[4] and for the people: and [m]offer the offering of the people, and make an atonement for them; as the LORD commanded.

A.M.2514. B.C.1490

1 This represented the entire consecration of all their powers and faculties to the service of God; typifying Christ, entirely sanctifying or consecrating himself and his people to God. 'The sin-offering implied that Aaron and his sons deserved to have their blood shed; and, after death, to be made a sacrifice to the offended justice of God; instead of being able to bear or atone for the sins of the people, & being honoured as intercessors for them, and typical representatives of the Saviour. The burnt-offering denoted, that, being pardoned and accepted through the atonement of Christ, they willingly and thankfully dedicated themselves without reserve, to be consecrated unto God for this sacred ministry. The ram of consecration was their peace-offering; and represented that, as reconciled unto God, they had fellowship with him, and delighted in his service and in being wholly employed in it; that he would accept & honour their services and ministrations; that they were thankful for past and present benefits, and confided in him for future sufficiency and acceptance.'—Scott.

2 Thus we find that the high priest himself must be sprinkled with the blood of the sacrifice; and our blessed Lord, of whom Aaron was a type, was sprinkled with his own blood. 1. In his agony in the garden. 2. In his being crowned with thorns. 3. In the piercing of his hands and his feet. 4. In his side being pierced with the spear. All these were so many acts of atonement performed by the high priest.—Clarke.

3 Moses, as the priest, had the breast, and Aaron and his sons the remainder, except the right shoulder, which was laid on the altar with the fat. This, in all other peace-offerings, belonged to the officiating priest, but as Moses was the only priest till Aaron & his sons were fully consecrated, & as the whole breast belonged to him; so it seems to have been appointed on this occasion, that the shoulders should be laid on the altar, rather than left to be burnt with the residue in some other place, according to the law of the peace-offerings.

1 For seven days they waited at the door of the tabernacle & were not permitted to enter. They did so day and night, probably watching by turns. Each day a sin-offering, a burnt-offering, & a peace-offering of consecration were presented, the same rites were performed; and they were forbidden to neglect any part of this service on pain of death. This denoted the inefficacy of these sacrifices, and the ceremonies continuing seven days (the perfect number) denoted the necessity of a perfect Priest yet to come.

3 Aaron having offered sacrifices for himself, the children of Israel are next commanded to offer a sin-offering for themselves; not a young bullock, but a kid of the goats as on the great day of atonement. The people offering peace-offerings or offerings of thanksgiving & communion, of which the priests partook, they did not require to offer any for themselves. The Lord was to appear unto them, to come down by fire to own their sacrifice, and to testify his acceptance of Aaron's typical priesthood; perhaps also to give some special manifestation of the divine presence.

8 ¶ Aaron therefore went unto the altar, [n]and slew the calf of the sin-offering, which was for himself.

9 And the sons of Aaron brought the blood unto him; and [o]he dipt his finger in the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar, and poured out the blood at the bottom of the altar:

10 But [p]the fat, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver of the sin-offering, he burnt upon the altar;[1] [q]as the LORD commanded Moses.

11 And [r]the flesh and the hide he burnt with fire without the camp.[2]

12 And he slew [s]the burnt-offering; and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled round about upon the altar.

13 And they presented the burnt-offering unto him, with the pieces thereof, and the head; and he burnt them upon the altar.

14 And he did wash the inwards and the legs, and burnt them upon the burnt-offering on the altar.

15 ¶ And he brought the people's offering, and took [t]the goat which was the sin-offering for the people, and slew it, and offered it for sin, as the first.[3]

16 And he brought the burnt-offering, and offered it according to the manner.[4]

17 And he brought [u]the meat-offering, and took[5] an handful thereof, and burnt it upon the altar, [v]beside the burnt-sacrifice of the morning.[6]

18 He slew also the bullock and the ram for [w]a sacrifice of peace-offerings which was for the people: and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled upon the altar round about,

19 And [x]the fat of the bullock and of the ram, the rump, and that which covereth the inwards, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver:

20 And [y]they put the fat upon the breasts, and he [z]burnt the fat upon the altar:

21 And [a]the breasts and the right shoulder Aaron waved for a wave-offering before the LORD; as Moses commanded.

22 And Aaron [b]lifted up his hand toward the people, and blessed [1]them: and came down from offering of the sin-offering, and the burnt-offering, and peace-offerings.

23 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle of the congregation, and [c]came out, and blessed the people: and [d]the glory of the LORD [2]appeared unto all the people.

24 And [e]there came a fire out from before the LORD, and consumed upon the altar the burnt-offering and the fat: which when all the people saw, [f]they shouted,[3] and fell on their faces.

CHAPTER X.

Nadab and Abihu, for offering strange fire, are burnt by fire, 1—5. Aaron and his sons are forbidden to mourn for them. 6, 7. The priests are forbidden wine when they are to go into the tabernacle, 8—11. The law of eating the holy things, 12—15. Aaron excuse for transgressing thereof, 16—20.

AND [a]Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took either of them his [b]censer, and put fire therein, and [c]put incense thereon, and offered [d]strange fire before the LORD, [e]which he commanded them not.

2 And there went out [f]fire from the LORD, and devoured them; and [g]they died before the LORD.

3 Then Moses said unto Aaron, This is it that the Lord spake, saying, [h]I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me, and [i]before all the people I will be glorified. And [k]Aaron held his peace.

4 And Moses called Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of [l]Uzziel, the uncle of Aaron, and said unto them, Come near, [m]carry your brethren from before the sanctuary out of the camp.

5 So they went near, and carried them in their coats out of the camp; as Moses had said.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons, [n]Uncover not your heads, neither rend your clothes, lest ye die, and lest [o]wrath come upon all the people: but let your brethren, the whole house of Israel, bewail the burning which the LORD hath kindled.

7 And [p]ye shall not go out from the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: for [q]the anointing oil of the LORD is upon you. And they did according to the word of Moses.

2 It seems evident from the narrative, that Aaron personally, (tho' assisted by his sons,) slew his own sacrifices; and also those of the people as their representative, though perhaps the elders assisted in this part of the service. The Levites were not yet set apart for their work; and the most laborious part of such offices afterwards devolved on them, or on the Nethinims. On this occasion, however, Aaron and his sons took the lead, as well in killing and preparing the sacrifices, as in burning the sin-offerings. It does not appear that the blood, either of the sin-offerings described in the preceding chapter, or of this for Aaron, was brought into the sanctuary; yet the bodies were burned without the camp. The priests ate the sin-offerings of the people, as typically bearing their iniquity; but they could not bear their own sin; and therefore they ate no part of any sin-offerings sacrificed for themselves, but the whole was carried forth out of the camp, as taken quite away by Christ the great Antitype.—Scott.

t ch. 4. 27-31; Is. 53. 10; He. 2. 17.
3 Aaron prepared the sin-offering of the people as his own; but it is not certain whether it was then burnt without the camp, or afterwards on the altar. It ought not to have been burnt at all, but eaten by him and his sons.

1 Blessing the people was a part of the priestly office, eminently typical of the Lord Jesus Christ, who intercedes for his people, & richly blesses them with all spiritual blessings, purchased by his blood, & treasured up in his inexhaustible fullness. The form of blessing by Aaron was in praying for them, pronouncing a blessing in the name of God, and encouraging them to hope for acceptance. We have an instance in Nu. 6. 23, 'The Lord bless thee & keep thee,' &c. c Lu. 1. 21, 22; He. 9. 24-28.
d ver. 6; Nu. 14. 10; 16. 19, 42.
2 Having descended from the altar, which was raised above the rest of the court, Moses and Aaron entered into the tabernacle, and came out as from holding communion with God, and united in again blessing the people, and in token of the divine presence & approval of what had been done on this solemn occasion, the glory of the Lord descended and rested on the tabernacle, his typical dwelling place.

f Ge. 17. 3; 1 Ki. 18. 39; Ezr. 3. 11.
3 This was truly a cause of great joy & exultation. God thus declared that he accepted the sacrifice offered in place of the people; that the fire of his vengeance consumed the victim and let the believing sinner go free.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, saying,

9 Do [r]not drink wine nor strong drink,[1] thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: [s]it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations:

10 And that ye may [t]put difference between holy and unholy, and between unclean and clean;

11 And [u]that ye may teach the children of Israel all the statutes which the LORD hath spoken unto them by the hand of Moses.

12 ¶ And Moses spake unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons that were left, [v]Take the meat-offering that remaineth of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and eat it without leaven beside the altar: [w]for it is most holy.

13 And ye shall eat it in the holy place, because it is thy due, and thy sons' due, of the sacrifices of the LORD made by fire: for so I am commanded.

14 And [x]the wave-breast and heave-shoulder shall ye eat in a clean place;[2] thou, and thy sons, and thy daughters with thee: for they be thy due, and thy sons' due, which are given out of the sacrifices of peace-offerings of the children of Israel.

15 The heave-shoulder and the wave-breast shall they bring, with the offerings made by fire of the fat, to wave it for a wave-offering before the LORD; and it shall be thine, and thy sons with thee, by a statute for ever; as the LORD hath commanded.

16 ¶ And Moses diligently sought the [y]goat of the sin-offering, and, behold, it was burnt:[3] and he was [z]angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron which were left alive, saying,

17 Wherefore have ye not eaten the sin-offering in the holy place, seeing it is most holy, and God hath given it you to[a] bear the iniquity of the congregation, to make atonement for them before the LORD?

18 Behold, [b]the blood of it was not brought in within the holy place: ye should indeed have eaten it in the holy place, [c]as I commanded.

19 And Aaron said unto Moses, Behold, [d]this day have they offered their sin-offering and their burnt-offering before the LORD; and such things have befallen me:[1] and if I had eaten the sin-offering to-day, [e]should it have been accepted in the sight of the LORD?

20 And when Moses heard that, [f]he was content.

CHAPTER XI.

What beasts may, 1—3, and what may not be eaten, 4—8. What fishes, 9—12. What fowls, 13—28. The creeping things which are unclean, 29—47.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying unto them,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, [a]These are the beasts which ye shall eat among all the beasts that are on the earth.

3 Whatsoever [b]parteth the hoof, and is cloven-footed, and [c]cheweth the cud, among the beasts, that shall ye eat.

4 Nevertheless, these shall ye not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the hoof: as the camel, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.[2]

5 And [d]the coney, because he cheweth the cud, [e]but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

6 And the [f]hare, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

7 And the [g]swine, though he divide the hoof, and be cloven-footed, yet he cheweth not the cud; he is unclean to you.

8 Of their flesh shall ye not eat, and their carcase shall ye not touch; [h]they are unclean to you.

9 ¶ These shall ye eat of all that are in the waters: [i]whatsoever hath fins and scales in the waters, in the seas, and in the rivers, them shall ye eat.

10 And all that have not fins and scales in the seas, and in the rivers, of all that move in the waters, and of any living thing which is in the waters, [k]they shall be an abomination unto you:

11 They shall be even an abomination unto you; ye shall not eat of their flesh, but ye shall have their carcases in abomination.

1 This prohibition, so immediately following the death of Nadab & Abihu, it is supposed that they had committed their rash act when heated with wine. This prohibition was given also that their judgment might be clear & sound, to determine aright in the matters affecting the holy service of God. 'It concerns the Lord's ministers to put a difference between holy and unholy, both things & persons, that they may separate between the precious and the vile, Je. 15. 9-2. That they might be able to teach the people, ver. 11, for that was a part of the priest's work, De. 33. 10, and those that are addicted to drunkenness, are very unfit to teach God's statutes, both because they that live after the flesh, can have no experimental acquaintance with the things of the Spirit, and because such teachers pull down with one hand what they build up with the other.'

[y] ch. 6. 26, 30; 9. 3, 15.

3 The goat here spoken of was a sin-offering for the people, ch. 9. 15. It ought to have been eaten by the priests and the remaining flesh to have been consumed in the same manner as the remaining flesh of the other sacrifices. In the confusion, probably arising from the death of Nadab & Abihu, it seems to have been burnt without the camp, or upon the altar. Moses is therefore angry at this deviation from the divine precept. He therefore expostulates, not with Aaron, already borne down by distress, but with his two sons, Eleazar and Ithamar, who by eating the sin-offering were typically to bear and take away the sin of the people.

1 Though Eleazar and Ithamar were addressed, Aaron alone replied; conscious perhaps that the sin-offering had been burnt by his directions, or that he had not been sufficiently careful that it should be rightly disposed of. He acknowledged that, in this respect, the rule had not been exactly observed: but he intimated that, in other things, his surviving sons had been very attentive to their duty, & had offered the sin-offering and burnt-offering for the people (for so he seems to mean) with much circumspection. Indeed, the deviation which had been made, was by no means the effect of a presumptuous disregard to the divine command; and such things had befallen him, that he could not have eaten the sacred feast with calmness & cheerfulness, though he had submitted to the will of God in the awful dispensation. In such a state of mind he could not suppose his service would have been accepted.

2 The command in this and the succeeding chapters, down to the 22d inclusive, addressed not only to Moses but to Aaron, as relating to things now committed to his charge, respecting the various kinds of unclean animals, persons, relations, or things. Every creature of God, as pronounced at the creation, is good. Yet the distinction of clean and unclean was very early made. The laws respecting it served many important purposes; they served as a trial of obedience; to teach self-denial and restraint; to keep the Israelites from mingling in the idolatrous practices and superstitions of the heathen; to cultivate holiness in their enjoyments and society, and to cherish those dispositions and habits that were gentle, pure, and useful.

18 And the swan, and the pelican, and the gier-eagle, 19 And the stork, the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat.

20 All fowls that [o]creep, going upon all four, shall be an abomination unto you.

21 Yet these may ye eat, of every flying creeping thing that goeth upon all four, which have legs above their feet, to leap withal upon the earth;

22 Even these of them ye may eat; the[p] locust after his kind,[1] and the bald locust after his kind, and the beetle after his kind, and the grasshopper after his kind.

23 But all other flying creeping things, which have four feet, shall be an abomination unto you.

24 And for these ye shall be unclean: whosoever [q]toucheth the carcase of them shall be unclean until the even.

25 And whosoever beareth ought of the carcase of them shall [r]wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

26 The carcases of every beast which divideth the hoof, and is not cloven-footed, nor cheweth the cud, are unclean unto you: every one that toucheth them shall be unclean.

1 Or, 'all creatures of this kind, which are so many species of locusts.' 'Insects, reptiles, and worms, are generally prohibited; but a previous exception is here made in favour of those insects, which besides four walking legs, have also two longer springing legs, (pedes saltatorii), and which, under the name of "locusts," are declared clean. Those particularly enumerated seem to indicate the four leading genera of the locust family, of which the domestic cricket, the mole cricket, the green grasshopper & the locust, may be taken as representatives. . . The vast swarms of the migratory locusts which occasionally lay waste the oriental plantations and fields, do themselves, in some measure, furnish an antidote to the evils they occasion. The Nomades, in particular, who look not beyond the day, and have little immediate interest in cultivation, witness their arrival without regret; and they, as well as the poor inhabitants of villages & towns, collect them in great quantities, not only for their own eating, but for sale in the bazaars; for these insects are highly relished by all classes of people. In some towns there are shops exclusively for the sale of locusts. They are so prepared as to be kept for use a considerable time. There are different processes; but the most usual in Western Asia, is to throw them alive into a pot of boiling water, mixed with a good quantity of salt. After boiling a few minutes they are taken out, and the heads, feet, and wings being plucked off, the trunks are thoroughly dried in the sun and then stowed away in sacks. They are usually sold in this condition, & are either eaten without further preparation, or else are boiled, or stewed or fried in butter. They are very commonly mixed with butter, and so spread on thin cakes of bread, which we have previously described, & thus eaten, particularly at breakfast.—Pict. Bible.

2 A person might touch animals of the class considered unclean, when alive, but persons who touched them when dead, were thereby rendered unclean. The carcases of clean animals did not defile, except they died in any way by which the blood was not separated from them. The constant watchfulness against contracting defilement in any of these ways, and the necessity of constant purifications when it was contracted, pointed out very significantly the necessity of watching against sin, of repentance and sanctification by the Spirit of God, in the various temptations and pollutions of the world. The following is a very curious note from the Pict. Bible, which contains much that is interesting on the manners and customs and natural history of the East. 'The great inconvenience which the law connected with this & other defilements, necessarily obliged the Israelites to pay great attention to cleanliness, and this was probably what the laws on this subject had principally in view. The importance of regulations on such points is not so fully appreciated in this country as in the East, where all kinds of reptiles, many of them poisonous, find their way into the most private apartments, & conceal themselves in recesses, crevices, vessels, and boxes. The greatest caution must be observed in examining a box or vessel which had not very recently been disturbed, lest a scorpion or other noxious reptile might be concealed within it. On this subject, Michaelis observes, 'that this law was well calculated to prevent accidents from poisoning.' He gives instances of such accidents from toads, or rats, or mice. These observances must have been very burdensome; and we ought now, in this as well as other respects, highly to prize the liberty with which Christ has made us free. 'We ought as industriously to preserve our precious souls from the pollutions of sin, and as speedily to cleanse them when they are polluted, as they were to preserve and cleanse their bodies & household goods from those ceremonial pollutions.'—Henry.

29 ¶ These also shall be unclean unto you among the [s]creeping things that creep upon the earth; the weasel, and [t]the mouse, and the tortoise after his kind,

30 And the ferret, and the chameleon, and the lizard, and the snail, and the mole.

31 These are unclean to you among all that creep: whosoever doth touch them, when they be dead, shall be unclean until the even.

32 And upon whatsoever any of them, when they are dead, doth fall, it shall be unclean: whether it be any vessel of wood, or raiment, or skin, or sack, whatsoever vessel it be wherein any work is done, [u]it must be put into water, and it shall be unclean until the even; so it shall be cleansed.

33 And every earthen vessel whereinto any of them falleth, whatsoever is in it shall be unclean; and [v]ye shall break it.

34 Of all meat which may be eaten, that on which such water cometh shall be unclean; and all drink that may be drunk in every such vessel shall be unclean.

35 And every thing whereupon any part of their carcase falleth shall be unclean; whether it be oven, or ranges for pots, they shall be broken down: for they are unclean, and shall be unclean unto you.

36 Nevertheless a fountain or pit, wherein[1] there is plenty of water, shall be clean: but that which toucheth their carcase shall be unclean.

37 And if any part of their carcase fall upon any [w]sowing-seed which is to be sown, it shall be clean.

38 But if any water be put upon the seed, and any part of their carcase fall thereon, it shall be unclean unto you.

39 And if any beast of which ye may eat die; he that [x]toucheth the carcase thereof shall be unclean until the even.

40 And he that [y]eateth of the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean[2] until the even: he also that beareth the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

41 And every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth shall be an abomination;[1] it shall not be eaten.

42 Whatsoever [z]goeth upon the belly, and whatsoever goeth upon all four, or whatsoever hath[2] more feet among all creeping things that creep upon the earth, them ye shall not eat; for they are an abomination.

43 Ye [a]shall not make yourselves[3] abominable with any creeping thing that creepeth, neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby.

44 For [b]I am the LORD your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and [c]ye shall be holy; for I am holy:[4] neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

45 For I am the LORD [d]that bringeth you up out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: ye shall therefore [e]be holy; for I am holy.

CHAPTER XII.

The purification of a woman after child-birth, 1—5. Her offerings for her purifying, 6—8.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, [a]If a woman have conceived seed, and born a man-child: then she shall be unclean[5] seven days; [b]according to the days of the separation for her infirmity shall she be unclean.

3 And in the [c]eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised.[6]

4 And she shall then continue [d]in the blood of her purifying three and thirty days: she shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled.

5 But if she bear a [e]maid-child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation; and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore and six days.

6 ¶ And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled, for a son, or for a daughter, she shall bring [f]a lamb [1]of the first year for a burnt-offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtle-dove, for a sin-offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest:

7 Who shall offer it before the LORD, and [g]make an atonement[2] for her; and she shall [h]be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that hath born [i]a male or a female.

8 And if she[3] be not [k]able[4] to bring a lamb, then she shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons; the one for the burnt-offering, and the other for a sin-offering: and the priest shall [l]make an atonement for her, and she shall be clean.

CHAPTER XIII.

The laws and tokens whereby the priest is to be guided in discerning the leprosy, 1—59.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, saying,

2 When a man shall have in the skin of his flesh a rising,[b] [a]a scab, or bright spot, and it be in the skin of his flesh like [b]the plague of leprosy;[6] then [c]he shall be brought unto Aaron the priest, or unto one of his sons the priests.

3 And the priest [d]shall look on the plague in the skin of the flesh: and when the hair in the plague is turned white, and the plague in sight be [e]deeper than the skin of his flesh, it is a plague of leprosy: and the priest shall look on him, and [f]pronounce him unclean.

4 If the bright spot be white in the skin of his flesh, and in sight be not deeper than the skin, and the hair thereof be not turned white; then the priest shall [g]shut up him that hath the plague seven days.

5 And the priest shall look on him the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague in his sight be at a stay, and the plague spread not in the skin; then the priest shall shut him up seven days more.

6 And the priest shall look on him

1 The serpent, by which the devil tempted Eve, was condemned to move on his belly, and to eat dust: and deceivers, liars, slanderers, and murderers, of every description, with all who hate God, and diffuse the poison of impiety among men, are in Scripture called the seed of the serpent, and the children of the devil, Ge. 3. 14, 15. Other reptiles aptly represent the earthly-minded & sensual; and probably this was the implied instruction of the prohibition. The word abomination, denotes an union of hatred and terror.

This was enjoined to Abraham as the seal of the covenant made with him, Ge. xvii.; Ro. 4. 9-17; and it was also incorporated with the law, as distinguishing the worshippers of Jehovah from idolaters. It was significant of the purification of the heart, the 'putting away of the filth of the flesh,' & where there was not this circumcision of the heart in the spirit, the commandment profited nothing.

They had small buckets in their hands to receive the alms, their touch being still held infectious, or at least unclean. The distemper as I saw it on them, not only defiles the whole surface of the body with a foul scurf, but also deforms the joints of the body, particularly the wrists and ancles, making them swell with a gouty scrofulous substance, very lothesome to look on. I thought their legs like those of the old battered horses, often seen in drays in England. The whole distemper, indeed, was so noisome, that it might well pass for the utmost corruption of the human body on this side the grave. And certainly the inspired penman could not have found out a fitter emblem whereby to express the uncleanness and odiousness of vice.'

7 But if [l]the scab spread much abroad in the skin, after that he hath been seen of the priest for his cleansing, he shall be seen of the priest again.

8 And if the priest see that, behold, the scab spreadeth in the skin; then the priest shall [m]pronounce him unclean:[1] it is a leprosy.

9 ¶ When the plague of leprosy is in a man, then he shall be brought unto the priest;

10 And the priest [n]shall see him; and, behold, if the rising be white in the skin, and it have turned the hair white, and there be quick[2] raw flesh[3] in the rising,

11 It is an old leprosy in the skin of his flesh: and the priest shall pronounce him unclean, and shall not shut him up; for he is unclean.

12 And if a leprosy break out abroad in the skin, and the leprosy [o]cover all the skin of him that hath the plague, from his head even to his foot, wheresoever the priest looketh;

13 Then the priest shall consider: and, behold, if the leprosy have covered all his flesh, he shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague; it is all turned white: he is clean.

14 But when [p]raw flesh appeareth in him, he shall be unclean.

15 And the priest shall see the raw flesh, and pronounce him to be unclean; for the raw flesh is unclean: it is a leprosy.

16 Or if the raw flesh [q]turn again, and be changed unto white, he shall come unto the priest;

19 And in the place of the bile there be a white rising, or a bright spot, white, and somewhat reddish,[1] and it be shewed to the priest;

20 And if, when the priest seeth it, behold, it be [s]in sight lower than the skin, and the hair thereof be turned white, the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague of leprosy broken out of the bile.

21 But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hairs therein, and if it be not lower than the skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days.

22 And if it spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague.

23 But if the bright spot [t]stay in his place, and spread not, it is a burning bile; and the priest shall pronounce him clean.[2]

1 If the case were doubtful, the priest must shut up the person for a week or two, if needful. If then the disease appeared to be stopped, and no peculiar symptoms of leprosy were seen, it was concluded to be some other disorder, and the priest pronounced him clean; yet, having been considered as a leper, he must wash his clothes, before he went into society, or to the courts of the Lord. On the other hand, the spreading of the disease was proof it was a leprosy.

3 That the partial lepers should be pronounced unclean, and the person totally covered with the disease clean, seems at first sight not a little strange; the reason probably was that the partial was contagious, the total not. In the latter the patient was covered with a white enamelled scurf, in the former there was a quick raw flesh in the risings which would naturally communicate the disease more readily than the hard dry scurf of the latter. See Dr Mead's Med. Sac.

4 The principal symptoms to be noted in these verses, (9-17) are 'the quick raw flesh in the tumour,' indicating a sharp, corrosive humour, breaking through the skin in a particular part. It was thus distinguished from a disorder, called indeed the leprosy, but of another nature, which freely broke out in a white scurf all over the body, but without the raw flesh. The former indicated an inveterate leprosy, and whenever it appeared rendered the person unclean; but the latter did not. 'As these are thus contrasted, the latter aptly represents that consciousness of sin which produces unreserved ingenuous confessions, and patience of reproof; and the former may perhaps denote the disposition of unhumbled sinners to resist conviction, & amidst the clearest evidence of criminality, to be angry with the mildest reproof.

1 Here the priests are directed how to distinguish between any ordinary malady which might follow an old ulcer after it had been healed, and the leprosy breaking out on the spot. The word rendered 'reddish' probably signifies 'very shining', and seems distinguished from a dusky white, as a symptom of leprosy.

2 In 1759, a violent leprosy broke out in the island of Barbadoes, where measures of the same sort here recommended were adopted. The patient was shut up seven days, at the end of which it was generally ascertained whether it was really leprosy, or only a coarser African itch. If it was supposed to be the latter, the spots were rubbed with oleum tartari per deliquium, after which they generally disappeared. If they remained, or returned soon, it was confirmed leprosy. In the island of Guadaloupe, on occasion of a leprosy raging there, the adoption of the same rules became necessary. But, after all, it is very doubtful whether the leprosy here spoken of was not of a peculiar kind. Scott observes, ver. 34-53, 'that this plague is expressly spoken of, as immediately inflicted by the hand of God; and it is very probable it was one method in which he rebuked the idolatry or iniquity which men committed in their houses, & the dishonest gain which they brought into them, when the magistrate did not detect and punish them.' And he adds, 'that there is not the most remote intimation in these laws, or any where in Scripture, that the disorder was at all infectious.'

3 Heb. a burning of fire, Is. 3. 24. This is supposed to state the case of such as had been hurt by fire; which would leave a scar, in which the leprosy might appear, and which was distinguished by the rules here laid down.

4 The priests were here taught to distinguish the leprosy among the hair on the head or beard, from other disorders which might resemble it. The yellow thin hair, instead of the white, was here the symptom of leprosy in connection with the marks before laid down, and the black hair of the contrary.

shall pronounce him unclean: it is a dry [y]scall, even a leprosy upon the head or beard.

31 And if the priest look on the plague of the scall, and, behold, it be not in sight deeper than the skin, and that there is no black hair in it; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague of the scall seven days.

32 And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the plague: and, behold, if the scall spread not, and there be in it no [z]yellow hair, and the scall be not in sight deeper than the skin;

33 He shall be shaven, but the scall shall he not shave; and the priest shall shut up him that hath the scall seven days more.

34 And in [a]the seventh day the priest shall look on the scall: and, behold, if the scall [b]be not spread in the skin, nor be in sight deeper than the skin; then the priest shall pronounce him clean: [c]and he shall wash his clothes, and be clean.

35 But if the scall [d]spread much in the skin after his cleansing;

36 Then the priest shall look on him: and, behold, if the scall be spread in the skin, the priest shall not seek for yellow hair; he is unclean.

37 But if the scall be in his sight at a stay, and that there is black hair grown up therein; the scall is healed, he is clean: and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

38 ¶ If a man also or a woman have in the skin of their flesh bright spots, even white bright spots;

39 Then the priest shall look: and, behold, [e]if the bright spots in the skin of their flesh be darkish white; it is a freckled spot[1] that groweth in the skin: he is clean.

40 And the man whose hair[2] is fallen off his head, he is bald:[3] yet is he clean.

41 And he that hath his hair fallen off from the part of his head toward his face, he is forehead-bald: yet is he clean.

42 And if there be in the bald head, or bald forehead, a white reddish sore, it is a leprosy sprung up in his bald head, or his bald forehead.

1 This is distinguished from the other leprosies by the term bohak, which imports brightness, but in a subordinate degree being a dull white spot. This disorder is not contagious, & did not render a person unclean, or make it necessary that he should be shut up. The Arabs call this disorder by the same name as the Hebrews, and its characters are precisely analogous to those here stated. This variety is strictly a cutaneous eruption. and rarely, if ever, affects the constitution. Forskal, in one of the notes to Niebuhr's Travels, gives an illustration of this sort of leprosy. He says, 'May 15,1763, I myself saw a case of bohak leprosy in a Jew at Mocha. The spots in this disease are of unequal size. They have no shining appearance, nor are they perceptibly elevated above the skin, and they do not change the colour of the hair. Their colour is an obscure white or somewhat reddish. The rest of the skin of this patient was blacker than that of the rest of the people of the country is in general; but the spots are not so white as the skin of an European when not sun burnt. The spots in this species of leprosy do not appear on the hands nor on the abdomen, but on the neck and face, not, however, on that part of the head where the hair grows very thick. They gradually spread, & continue sometimes only about two months, but in some cases, indeed, as long as two years, & then disappear by degrees of themselves. This disorder is neither infectious nor hereditary, nor does it occasion any inconvenience.' We thus see why it wasdeclared clean. Michaelis well remarks on this case, 'That all this should be found to hold at thedistance of 3500 years from the time of Moses, ought certainly to gain some credit for his laws, even with those who will not allow them to be of divine authority.'—Pict. Bible.

2 Heb. head is pilled.

3 The leprosy in the bald head is here distinguished from mere baldness. The word rendered 'reddish,' here also means very shining. It is observable that he that was leprous in the head was pronounced 'utterly unclean.' This denoted the great danger of bad principles.

1 Michaelis, with the assistance of the principal woollen manufacturer in Hanover, threw so much light on the subject, as far as relates to woollen, as may give some general ideas on the whole subject, and furnish a clue to further inquiries as it regards linen and leather. In his German translation of the Bible, he hazarded a conjecture, which was confirmed afterwards by the manufacturer in question, who told him that a disease in woollen cloth, similar to that here described, proceeds from the use of what is called dead wool, that is, the wool of sheep that have died by disease, not by the knife. If the disease has been of short duration, such wool is not altogether useless; but in a sheep that has long been diseased, it becomes extremely bad and looses the points. He also stated, that according to the established usage among honest manufacturers, it was unfair to manufacture dead wool into any article worn by man, because vermin are so apt to establish themselves in it, particularly when worn close to the body and warmed by it. Frauds were, however, sometimes committed with this wool, in being sold for good wool; in consequence of which the stuffs made with it not only became soon bare, but full of little depressions, and then of holes. We see such bare spots mentioned in the text, and we thus observe how the disease, as there described, might sometimes appear in the warp, and sometimes in the woof, according as the dead wool happened to be employed in the one or the other. The manufacturer whom Michaelis consulted, expressed a wish that there were some statute inflicting a punishment upon those who either sold dead wool, or knowingly manufactured it into human clothing.—Pict. Bible. This may denote the evil and danger of attempting compromises between good&evil, serving God and Mammon.

CHAPTER XIV.

The rites and sacrifices in cleansing of the leper, 2—32. The signs of leprosy in a house, 33—47. The cleansing of that house, 48—57.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 This shall be [a]the law of the leper[2] in[b] the day of his cleansing: [c]he shall be brought unto the priest.

3 And the priest shall go forth [d]out of the camp: and the priest shall look, and, behold, if the plague of leprosy be[e] healed in the leper;

4 Then shall the priest command to take for him that is to be cleansed two[f] [3]birds[4] alive and clean, and [g]cedar-wood,[5] and [h]scarlet, and [i]hyssop.

5 And the priest shall command that one of the birds be killed in an [k]earthen vessel over running water.

6 As for [l]the living bird, he shall take it, and the cedar-wood, and the scarlet, and the hyssop, and shall [m]dip them and the living bird in the blood of the bird that was killed over the running water:

7 And he shall [n]sprinkle upon him that is to be cleansed from the leprosy seven[o] times, and shall [p]pronounce him clean, and shall [q]let the living bird loose into the open field.[1]

8 And he that is to be cleansed shall [r]wash his clothes, and shave off all his hair, and [s]wash himself in water, that he may be clean; and after that he shall come into the camp, and shall tarry abroad out of his tent [t]seven days.

9 But it shall be on the seventh day, that he shall [u]shave all his hair off his head, and his beard, and his eye-brows, even all his hair he shall shave off: and he shall wash his clothes, also he shall wash his flesh in water, and he shall be clean.[2]

10 And on the [v]eighth day he shall [w]take two [x]he-lambs without blemish, and one [y]ewe-lamb[3] of the first year without blemish, and [z]three tenth-deals of fine flour for [a]a meat-offering, mingled with oil, and one [b]log of oil;

11 And the priest that maketh him clean shall [c]present the man that is to be made clean, and those things, before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

12 And the priest shall take one he-lamb, and offer him for [d]a trespass-offering, and the log of oil, and [e]wave them for a wave-offering before the LORD.

13 And he shall slay the lamb [f]in the place where he shall kill the sin-offering and the burnt-offering,[4] in the holy place: for [g]as the sin-offering is the priest's, so is the trespass-offering: [h]it is most holy.

14 And the priest shall take some of the blood of the trespass-offering, and the priest shall put it [i]upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

15 And the priest shall take some of the log of [k]oil, and pour it into the palm of his own left hand:

16 And the priest shall dip his right finger in the oil that is in his left hand, and shall sprinkle of the oil with his finger seven times [l]before the LORD.

3 Or, sparrows.
4 Jerome, and many succeeding interpreters, render the word zippor'im, used in the law, (Le. 14. 4.) sparrows. But it is evident from an attentive perusal of the fourth verse, that it signifies birds in general. 'Then shall the priest command to take for him that is to be cleansed, two birds alive and clean.' Now, if the sparrow was a clean bird, there could be no use in commanding a clean one to be taken; but if it was unclean by law, then it could not be called clean. The term here must therefore signify birds in general, of which some were ceremonially clean, and some unclean; which rendered the specification in the command proper and necessary. From the terms of the law, it appears that any species of cleanbirds might be taken on such occasions, domestic or wild; provided only they were clean, & the use of them conceded by the law of Moses to the people.—Paxton's Illustrations.

2 The healed leper, who was about to cleanse himself from ceremonial pollution, was required to wash his clothes, and, after 'shaving off all his hair,' to wash his body also. Then he was admitted into the camp; but it is supposed he was obliged there to lodge in some hut, apart from his family and all society, during seven days; & then having again shaved, and washed his clothes & his body, he was restored, as clean, to his family and the congregation of God. Thus the penitent, having in private conference with the ministers of Christ, and in the secret exercises of faith and prayer, got some comfortable hope of acceptance, proceeds to put away all the remainder of his sins; and seriously to prepare himself for a more solemn profession of his faith, in the public ordinances of the gospel, and in communion with the Lord's people.

4 A trespass-offering, a sin-offering, and a burnt-offering, must be presented by him; perhaps the trespass-offering for thedeviations from the prescribed rules, which might have been fallen into during his leprosy; the sin-offering for the offence which exposed him to this plague; and the burnt-offering as a renewed dedication of himself to the Lord. Peace-offerings might indeed afterwards be accepted as voluntary oblations, but they did not suit a leper's condition, till fully restored to communion with the people of God. Meat-offerings for each of these sacrifices were also required, & a small quantity of oil, the emblem of the sanctifying Spirit. A log was about three quarters of a pint.—Scott.

1 'The blood,' says Patrick, 'seems to have been a token of forgiveness, the oil, of healing,' Ps. 103. 3, 'who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases.' Forgiveness is procured through the blood of Christ, but it must be applied by the Spirit of God, both to pacify and purify the conscience. The one is an inseparable attendant of the other. 'Being justified by faith, we have peace with God, thro' our Lord Jesus Christ.'

2 The ceremonies, observed on this occasion, are exceedingly similar to those used in consecrating the priests. The principal difference was, that common oil was sprinkled seven times before the Lord, and put over the blood on the right ear, the thumb, and the great toe of the leper, & also poured on his head; whereas, the holy anointing oil was sprinkled with the blood on the garments of the priests, and poured only on the head of the high priest. But, in the former case, the blood was that of a sin-offering, taking away the guilt of crimes, in which the members of the body had been instruments, and thus, typically preparing them in general for the Lord's service; in the latter, it was the blood of 'the ram of consecration,' by which the priests were set apart to their special service. This similarity was very instructive. For every true penitent is, through Christ, a spiritual priest; and no priest except the Saviour himself, was ever any better than a cleansed leper.—Scott.

5 The turtle or ring dove is particularly defenceless and exposed to rapine and violence. The dove has been universally allowed to be one of the most beautiful objects in nature. To the showy whiteness of wings and the golden hues that adorn her neck the psalmist alludes in the most elegant strains, Ps. 68.13. Her manners are as engaging as her form is elegant and her plumage rich and beautiful. She is the chosen emblem of simplicity, gentleness, chastity, and feminine timidity: and for this reason as well as from their abounding in the east they were probably chosen as offerings by Jehovah.

1 Not one ceremony was omitted in the poor man's cleansing, though the sacrifices were cheaper. Even in this case, one lamb was absolutely necessary; which may intimate, that no sinner could ever have been saved, had it not been for 'the Lamb that was slain, and hath redeemed us to God with his blood.' It is remarkable that the priest, in putting the oil upon the head of him that was to be cleansed, is said to 'make an atonement for him;' which may imply, that the work of the Spirit seals our interest in the great atonement, as well as enables us to apply it.—Scott.

2 Some have thought the leprosy in the house was typical of the idolatry of the Jewish church, which did strangely cleave to it; for tho' some of the reforming kings took away the infected stones, yet still it broke out again, till by the captivity of Babylon, God took down the house, and carried it to an unclean land; and that proved an effectual cure of their inclination to idols & idolatrous worships. A place and a name in the visible church will not secure wicked people from God's judgments. The 'holy land' was no security from the leprosy.—Henry.

4 Or, 'for not any thing which is in the house shall be unclean.' Geddes contends, that the last part of this verse has been misunderstood both by ancient and modern translators. For how could the priest's going into the house make anything in it unclean? The meaning is, that altho' the walls of the house might be infected, yet its contents were not for that defiled. These were therefore ordered to be brought out previously to the priest going in, that the bare walls might be more accurately examined, & from the appearance a proper judgment formed. —Boothroyd.

1 The house leprosy here described has occasioned much perplexity to inquirers; and the difficulty has probably arisen from being led by the name to look upon this 'leprosy,' as well as that in clothes, as something akin to the human disease so called. Men, clothes, & stones, have not the same diseases, but from some analogous circumstances, real or fanciful, the diseases of men may be, & have been, by a figure of speech, applied to diseases in other things. Indeed, to this day, there are certain disorders of trees in Egypt and Palestine, to which the name of leprosy is given. In Switzerland also, they speak of a cancer in buildings on the same principle, and why should we not understand the leprosy in buildings of the present text as something of a similar description? If we believe that the house leprosy was any thing related to the disorder of the same name in man, it is extremely difficult to account for the symptoms & mode of treatment; and we cannot do better than agree with the Rabbins and some of the early Christian fathers, who believed that this leprosy was not natural, but was sent by God as an extraordinary punishment upon evil doers, to compel them to the public acknowledgment and atonement of some understood crime whereby others had been injured. —Pict. Bible. Various attempts have been made to explain this subject from infection from man, & other natural causes; but there is no intimation whatever that the house leprosy was infectious to man.

3 The houses of Israelites are said to be dedicated, De. 20.5; for they were a holy nation, and therefore they ought to keep their houses free from all ceremonial pollutions, that they might be fit for the service of that God to whom they were devoted. And the same care should we take to reform whatever is amiss in our families, that we and our houses may serve the Lord. Ge. 35. 2.—Henry.

1 The methods to be taken in respect of the leprosy in houses, are very similar to those prescribed in the other cases; and also the ceremonies of purification, when the plague was removed; only no sacrifices were in this case brought to the altar. It might represent the prevalence of sin in families, churches, and nations; and it very aptly described the state of Israel, when idolatry had so infected the whole nation, that it must, as unclean, be demolished, and carried captive to Babylon, the unclean metropolis of idolatry. The rules prescribed seem to imply the care, with which they who fear God, should protest against prevailing iniquities, and separate from them; and the attention and pains which magistrates, ministers, and masters of families should employ, in checking, restraining, censuring, & punishing sin, in preventing its progress, and in promoting reformation. They may also be emblems of the methods which the Lord takes with nations and churches, before he proceeds to extremities; and of the certain, shameful, & miserable destruction, which awaits them, when these methods prove unsuccessful; & they likewise intimate that the Lord frequently gives men up to that filthiness, in which they have delighted.—Scott. The sinner who obstinately resists all attempts to remove his iniquity, must expect to have his clay tabernacle taken down by death, & himself, soul and body, to be consigned to destruction.

1 A similar command as to earthen vessels, is given in ch. 6. 38, where it is also directed that vessels of brass should be scoured. Michaelis devotes several pages to what he calls 'the singular preference shown to copper vessels, and dislike to earthen ones.' He asks why earthen vessels could not be as well cleansed, by washing, as those of wood and copper, for although such vessels are doubtless of less value than those of copper, still the loss by repeatedly breaking them, must be a serious inconvenience to the poor? Did Moses wish to wean them from earthen vessels, which by their continual breaking, occasion a greater loss in the long run than the more costly ones of copper, and to habituate them to the latter, as constituting substantial wealth? Might he not also have had the less favour for them as constituting one of the principal manufactures of Egypt, with which country it was his wish that no familiar intercourse should arise? Many such questions might be asked; but Michaelis confesses we can arrive at no satisfactory conclusion till we are acquainted with the earthen vessels of these times. . . . . Pict. Bible. The writer shows that in Egypt and Western Asia, they have light, thin earthen vessels, very porous, which they use for various purposes, & which were probably in use in the time of Moses, and adds, 'Assuming then that such were their vessels, the direction to break them when defiled is easy to be understood, because from their remarkable porous nature, whatever spot, stain, or other impurity they receive, is at once absorbed into their mass, either immediately, or thro' the agency of the water, and it becomes impossible to clean them entirely by any common process. In fact we have with our own hands broken many jugs & drinking cups of this description, when they received some accidental contamination, from the spontaneous feeling that they had become wholly defiled, and could not be cleansed.'

1 'When this was done in presumption,' observes Mr Scott, 'it was to be punished with death if detected; and if not, the offenders might expect to be cut off by the judgment of God, (ch.20.18,) but when inadvertently, this purification was to be observed. Nor must this restriction be considered as merely ceremonial; for the nature of the case, & the punishment denounced against wilful transgressors, combine to prove it to be of perpetual moral obligation.

2 In the cases of uncleanness here specified, even where they are properly called infirmities, yet springing from natural corruption, moral pollution is implied, and sacrifices for atonement and purification must therefore be offered; and in this case the woman must present both a sin-offering and a burnt-offering.

3 1. By these laws they were taught their privilege and honour, that they were purified unto God, a peculiar people, and were intended by the holy God for a kingdom of priests; a holy nation, for that was a defilement to them which was not so to others. 2. They were also taught their duty, which was to preserve the honour of their purity, & to keep themselves from all sinful pollutions. It was easy for them to argue, that if those pollutions which were natural, unavoidable, involuntary, their affliction and not their sin, rendered them for the time so odious, that they were not fit for communion either with God or man, much more abominable & filthy were they, if they sinned against the light and law of nature, by drunkenness, adultery, fraud, and the like sins, which defile the very mind and conscience.—Henry.

Aaron, when they offered before the LORD, and died;[1]

2 And the LORD said unto Moses, Speak unto Aaron thy brother, that he[b] come not at all times into the holy place within the vail, before the mercy-seat, which is upon the ark, [c]that he die not:[2] for I will appear [d]in the cloud upon [e]the mercy-seat.

3 Thus shall [f]Aaron come into the holy place; with [g]a young bullock for a sin-offering, and [h]a ram for a burnt-offering.

4 He shall put on the [i]holy linen coat, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with a linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired: these are holy garments; [k]therefore shall he wash his flesh in water,[3] and so put them on.

5 And he shall take of the congregation of the children of Israel [l]two kids of the goats for a sin-offering, and one ram for a burnt-offering.

6 And Aaron shall offer his bullock of the sin-offering, [m]which is for himself, and make [n]an atonement for himself, and for his house.

7 And he shall take the two goats, and [o]present them before the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

8 And Aaron shall [p]cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the LORD, and the other lot for the scape-goat.[4]

9 And Aaron shall bring the goat upon[5] which the LORD's lot fell,[5] and offer him for a sin-offering:

10 But the goat, on which the lot fell to be [r]the scape-goat, shall be presented alive before the LORD, [s]to make an atonement with him, and to [t]let him go for a scape-goat into the wilderness.

11 ¶ And Aaron shall bring [u]the bullock of the sin-offering which is for himself, and shall make an atonement for himself, and for his house, and shall kill the bullock of the sin-offering which is for himself.

12 And he shall take a censer full of burning coals of fire [v]from off the altar before the LORD, and his hands full of [w]sweet incense beaten small, and bring it within the vail.

13 And he shall put the incense upon the fire before the LORD, that [x]the cloud of the incense may cover the mercy-seat that is upon the testimony, that he die not.

14 And he shall take of [y]the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it with his finger upon the mercy-seat eastward: and before the mercy-seat shall he sprinkle of the blood with his finger seven times.

15 ¶ Then [z]shall he kill the goat of the sin-offering that is for the people, and [a]bring his blood within the vail, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it upon the mercy-seat, and before the mercy-seat.

16 And he shall make [b]an atonement for the holy place,[1] because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and because of their transgressions in all their sins: and so shall he do for the tabernacle of the congregation that remaineth[2] among them in the midst of their uncleanness.

17 And there shall be [c]no man[3] in the tabernacle of the congregation when he goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out, [d]and have made an atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the congregation of Israel.

18 And he shall [e]go out unto the altar that is before the LORD, and make an atonement for it; and shall take of the blood of the bullock, and of the blood of the goat, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about.

19 And he shall sprinkle of the blood upon it with his finger seven times, and cleanse it, and [f]hallow it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel.

20 ¶ And when he hath made an end of [g]reconciling[4] the holy place, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar, he shall bring the [h]live goat:

21 And Aaron shall [i]lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and [k]confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, [l]putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man[5] into the wilderness.

2 The ordinary priests went into the sanctuary, where the golden candlestick & the table of shew-bread were placed; and there, without 'the vail, before the mercy-seat,' they burnt incense upon the golden altar, one at a time: but they went no further, Ex. 30. 7,8; Lu. 1. 8; He. 9. 6, 7. The high priest alone went within the vail into the holy of holies, where the ark of the covenant was; & that only in one day in the year: & it was at the peril of his life, if at any other time, or in any other manner on ordinary occasions, he ventured into the presence of the Lord, of which the cloud of glory above the mercy-seat was the symbol; for the visible glory seems to have shone from the midst of the cloud. When the tabernacle was to be removed, & on some other occasions, deviations from this strict rule became indispensable, Nu.4. 5; 2 Ch. 39. 12-19.

1 The priest had not only to make an atonement for himself, ver. 11, and for his household and for all the congregation, ver. 17, but for the holy place, because of the sins and transgressions of the people, which defiled even the tabernacle and all its furniture, and all things were therefore purged with blood, Heb. 9. 22. Whereas the people by their sins had provoked God to take away those tokens of his favourable presence with them, & rendered even that holy place unfit to be the habitation of the holy God, atonement was thereby made for sin, that God being reconciled to them, might continue with them. He must then do the same for the outward part of the tabernacle, that he had done for the inner room, by sprinkling the blood of the bullock first, and then of the goat, without the vail, there where the table & incense altar stood, eight times each as before. The reason intimated is, because the tabernacle remained among them in the midst of their uncleanness, ver. 16. God would hereby show them how much their hearts needed to be purified, when even the tabernacle, only by standing in the midst of such an impure & sinful people, needed this expiation.—Henry.

3 The high priest was the most eminent type of Christ, & the sacrifices on this the great day of atonement the most striking representation of the sufferings of Christ on earth, and of his intercession in heaven. It is interesting to observe, that all other persons, even the priests, were strictly prohibited from entering within the tabernacle while the high priest officiated; intimating that no other could share the honours of Christ's mediatory office.

22 And the goat shall [m]bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not [1]inhabited: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness.

23 And Aaron shall come into the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall [n] put off the linen garments which he put on when he went into the holy place, and shall leave them there:

24 And he shall [o]wash his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on [p]his garments, and come forth, and offer his [q] burnt-offering, and the burnt-offering of the people, [r]and make an atonement for himself, and for the people.

25 And [s]the fat of the sin-offering shall he burn upon the altar.

26 And [t]he that let go[2] the goat for the scape-goat shall [u]wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward come into the camp.

27 And the bullock for [v]the sin-offering, and the goat for the sin-offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall one carry forth [w]without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung.

28 And he that burneth them [x]shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp.

29 ¶ And this shall be a statute for ever unto you, that [y]in the seventh month, on the tenth day of the month, ye [z]shall afflict your souls, and [a]do no work at all, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you:

30 For on that day shall the priest make an atonement for you, [b]to cleanse you, that you may be clean from all your sins before the LORD.

31 It shall be [c]a sabbath of rest unto you, and ye shall afflict your souls, by a statute for ever.[3]

32 And [d]the priest whom he shall anoint, and whom he shall consecrate[4] to [e]minister in the priest's office in his father's stead, shall make the atonement, and shall [f]put on the linen clothes, even the holy garments.

33 And he shall make [g]an atonement for the holy sanctuary, and he shall make an atonement for the tabernacle of the congregation, and for the altar, and he shall make an atonement for the priest, and for all the people of the congregation.

34 And this shall be [h]an everlasting statute unto you, to make an atonement for the children of Israel, for all their sins, [i]once a year. And he did as the LORD commanded Moses.

2 Both the priest who had touched the scape-goat, and the person who led it away, were considered unclean, till they washed themselves with water, because the goat himself was now considered unclean, being loaded with the sins of the whole congregation, typically transferred to him. How strikingly does all this contrast with Jesus Christ, our great high priest, who needed not to offer for his own sins. He was holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners; and though he bare the sins of the guilty, and carried them away, yet contracted no pollution, but ever remains the 'Holy One.'

3 The Israelites, all over the camp at this time, and all over the land afterward in Canaan, were required to spend this day in solemn humiliation before God for their sins; in godly sorrow, penitent confessions, and devotional exercises, either in secret, or in their families and assemblies; & for this purpose all other business was laid aside. Fasting is not expressly mentioned; but it is generally supposed to be implied, with several other expressions of contrition, and instances of self-denial. The day must also be observed as a most solemn sabbath, on which no work might be done, either by an Israelite or a stranger; for 'afflicting their souls' for sin would be sufficient employment. Various reasons are assigned, why the tenth day of the seventh month was particularly appointed; but there seems no certainty in any of them.—Scott.

1 In this passage the Israelites were prohibited from killing any of the animals usually offered as sacrifices even for food, any where else than at the door of the tabernacle, that they might be offered as peace-offerings, the blood being sprinkled & the fat consumed, and the portion being eaten by the offerer as commanded in such offerings. Clean animals, not appointed for sacrifice, might be eaten any where without being brought to the door of the tabernacle. This prohibition seems to have been intended to honour the divine institutions, that they might not be viewed as common things, offered 'in the open field.' It was intended also, and perhaps mainly, to prevent idolatry, ver. 7th. While the Israelites were encamped in the wilderness, it was comparatively easy to prevent all abuses of this divine institution; and therefore they were all commanded to bring the oxen, sheep, and goats, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, that they might be slain there, and their blood sprinkled upon the altar of the Lord. But when they became settled in the promised land, and the distance in many cases rendered it impossible for them to bring the animals to be slain for domestic uses to the temple, they were permitted to pour out the blood in a sacrificial way unto God at their respective dwellings, and to cover it with dust. ver. 13; Deu. 12. 20, 21.—Clarke.

CHAPTER XVII.

The blood of all slain beasts must be offered to the Lord at the door of the tabernacle, and no sacrifices made to devils, 1—9. All eating of blood is forbidden, 10—14; and all that dieth alone, or is torn, 15, 16.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto Aaron, and unto his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, saying,

3 What man soever there be [a]of the house of Israel [b]that killeth an ox, or lamb, or goat, in the camp, or that killeth it out of the camp,

4 And [c]bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer an offering unto the LORD before the tabernacle of the LORD, [d]blood shall be imputed unto that man; [e]he hath shed blood: and that man shall [f]be cut off from among his people;[1]

5 To the end that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices which they offer [g]in the open field, even that they may bring them unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest, [h]and offer them for peace-offerings unto the LORD.

6 And the priest shall [i]sprinkle the blood upon the altar of the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and [k]burn the fat for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

7 And they shall no more offer their sacrifices [l]unto devils,[2] after whom they have [m]gone a whoring. This shall be a statute for ever unto them throughout their generations.

8 ¶ And thou shalt say unto them, Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, [n]that offereth a burnt-offering or sacrifice,

9 And bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer it unto the LORD, even that man shall be cut off from among his people.

10 ¶ And whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, that[o] eateth any manner of blood; [p]I will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people.

11 For the life of the flesh is in the blood; and [q]I have given it to you upon the altar, to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul.[1]

12 Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, No soul of you shall eat blood, [r]neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood.

13 And whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, which hunteth[2] and catcheth[3] any beast or fowl that may be eaten; he shall even pour[s] out the blood thereof, and cover it with dust.

14 For it is [t]the life of all flesh; the blood of it is for the life thereof: therefore I said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall eat the blood of no manner of flesh: for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof; whosoever eateth it shall be cut off.

15 ¶ And [u]every soul that eateth that[4] which died of itself, or that which was torn with beasts, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger, he shall [v]both wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even; then shall he be clean.

16 But if he wash them not, nor bathe his flesh, then [w]he shall bear his iniquity.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, I [a]am the LORD your God.

3 After [b]the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, shall ye not do; and [c]after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do; neither shall ye walk in their ordinances.

4 Ye shall [d]do my judgments, and keep mine ordinances, to walk therein: I am the LORD your God.

5 Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments; [e]which if a man do, he shall live in them:[1] [f]I am the LORD.

6 ¶ None of you shall approach to any that is near[2] of kin[3] to him, [g]to uncover their nakedness: I am the LORD.

7 The nakedness of thy father, or the nakedness of thy mother, shalt thou not uncover: she is thy mother; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

2 Heb. hunteth any hunting.

3 This law (of abstaining from eating blood) extended even to clean animals taken in hunting, or wild fowl, as well as all tame land animals; and the covering of the blood with dust taught the people, that some great mystery was implied in the atonement of blood, and tended to create a reverence of it; for the same reason they were forbidden to eat the animals which died of themselves; for the blood was in them also. Yet this is not forbidden in such energetic language as the eating of blood in other cases; and a ceremonial purification was appointed, in case of failure, which is generally understood of inadvertent transgressions. The stranger was included in this statute also; and yet the Israelites might give that which died of itself, to the 'strangers within their gates,' or sell it to aliens, (De. 14. 21.) This seems to establish a distinction among strangers, according as they had in some degree embraced the religion of Israel, or the contrary. It also marked a distinction between directly eating the blood, either as actually separated from the flesh, or as wilfully retained in it; and eating it with the flesh when it was unavoidably combined with it. The former was expressly forbidden to all the sons of Noah, the latter only to Israel; but after the use of blood in sacrifice ceased, the reason of the restriction in both cases was taken entirely away.—Scott.

2 Heb. remainder of his flesh

3 On the verses from the 6th to the 17th inclusive, we quote from the valuable notes of Scott. 'As these laws forbad marriage betwixt near relations, they certainly prohibited unchastity between them, and every approach to it; and this may account in part, for the singular manner in which they are expressed. The marriage of parents and children, or grandchildren, &c. in all the variations here spoken of, has something in it at first glance unnatural; and would be destructive of all authority & subordination, which are of the greatest importance to society. In the marriages of nephews with aunts, somewhat of the same kind may be perceived, and it is observable that the marriage of uncles with their nieces is not prohibited, though, from the supposed parity of the case, it is included in our laws. . . It is elsewhere enjoined, that if a man died without issue, his surviving brother should marry his widow, De. 25. 5-10. But, as this appointment respected special purposes under the Mosaic dispensation, the prohibition of marrying a brother's wife is absolute to us; and, by parity of reason, that of a woman marrying the husband of her deceased sister.' As no other laws are given by Christ on these points, they are still obligatory on us, as well in regard to cases implied by parity of reason, as in regard to those expressly mentioned.

are her near kinswomen: [p]it is wickedness.

18 Neither shall thou take a wife[1] to her sister,[2] [q]to vex her, to uncover her nakedness, besides the other in her life-time.

19 ¶ Also thou shalt not approach unto a woman to uncover her nakedness [r]as long as she is put apart for her uncleanness.

20 Moreover, [s]thou shalt not lie carnally with thy neighbour's wife, to defile thyself with her.

21 And thou shalt not let any of thy seed [t]pass through the fire [u]to Molech, neither shalt thou [v]profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD.

22 Thou shalt not lie with [w]mankind as with womankind: it is abomination.

23 Neither shalt thou lie with any beast,[x] to defile thyself therewith; neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lie down thereto; it is [y]confusion.

24 [z]Defile not ye yourselves in any of these things: [a]for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out before you.

25 And [b]the land is defiled: [c]therefore I do visit the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land itself [d]vomiteth[2] out her inhabitants.

26 Ye shall therefore [e]keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of these abominations; neither any of your own nation, [f]nor any stranger that sojourneth among you;

27 (For all these [g]abominations have the men of the land done which were before you, and the land is defiled;)

28 That the land [h]spue not you out also, when ye defile it, as it spued out the nations that were before you.

29 For whosoever shall commit any of these abominations, even the souls that commit them shall be [i]cut off from among their people.

30 Therefore shall ye keep mine ordinance, that ye commit not any one of these [k]abominable customs, which were committed before you, and that ye defile not yourselves therein: [l]I am the LORD your God.

p ch. 20. 14.

1 Or, one wife to another, Ge. 4. 19; 29. 28.

2 The text prohibits the marrying of two sisters together. This conduct in Jacob proved a source of vexation both to Leah and Rachel; who were more jealous of each other, than of the handmaidens whom they willingly gave to their husbands; and perhaps it would be found on trial, that those who before had lived together in the intimate equality of this near relationship, would be more apt to rival each other, if married to the same man, than strangers would be; at least their jealousies & bickerings would be more unseemly & distressing. As a woman might not in ordinary cases marry the brother of her deceased husband, it can hardly be supposed, that it was allowable for a man to marry the sister of his wife, even after her decease; though this verse seems not to contain a prohibition of it. These are all the restrictions on marriage which are contained in the divine law; & such as pride, covetousness, or human policy have superadded, do not seem to have proved beneficial to mankind.—Scott.

1 The word rendered holy, signifies originally, 'to separate or set apart.' Holiness is a separation from sin, and a setting apart to the service of God. The rule of it is the word, the motive theholiness, of God. The means are the blood of atonement, through the instrumentality of the word of God, and the sanctification of the Holy Spirit; see 1 Pe. 1. 13-25.

2 In order to understand most of these precepts, an attentive mind and an obedient heart, in the reader, are more requisite, than the labour of the expositor. 'Every man,' whatever his age, wisdom, orwealth may be, is commanded 'to fear his mother,' (here placed first,) 'and his father.' That is, to treat them with respect and tenderness, fearing to grieve or offend them, & reverencing their authority and commands. Children are apt to feel most love for their mother, and fear of the father; and when arrived at maturity they are apt to treat the authority of their mothers with neglect, though they may be kind to them. Hence this precept.

CHAPTER XIX.

A repetition of sundry laws, 1—37.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, and say unto them, [a]Ye shall be holy:[1] for I the LORD your God am holy.

3 ¶ Ye shall [b]fear every man his mother and his father, and [c]keep my sabbaths:[2] I am the LORD your God.

4 Turn ye [d]not unto idols, nor make to yourselves [e]molten gods: I am the LORD your God.

5 ¶ And if ye offer [f]a sacrifice of peace-offerings unto the LORD, [g]ye shall offer it at your own will.

6 It [h]shall be eaten the same day ye offer it, and on the morrow: and if ought remain until the third day, it shall be burnt in the fire.

7 And if it be eaten at all on the third day, it is [i]abominable; [k]it shall not be accepted.

8 Therefore every one that eateth it shall bear his iniquity, because he hath profaned the hallowed thing of the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

9 ¶ And when [l]ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest.

10 And thou shalt not [m]glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather every grape of thy vineyard; [n]thou shalt leave them for the poor and stranger: I am the LORD your God.

11 ¶ Ye [o]shall not steal, neither deal falsely, neither [p]lie one to another.

12 ¶ And [q]ye shall not swear by my name falsely, neither shalt thou [r]profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD.

13 ¶ Thou shalt not [s]defraud thy neighbour, neither rob him: [t]the wages of him that is hired shall not abide with thee all night until the morning.

14 ¶ Thou shalt not [u]curse the deaf, nor put a stumbling-block before the blind, but shalt [v]fear thy God: I am the LORD.

15 ¶ Ye shall do [w]no unrighteousness in judgment; thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty: but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour.

16 ¶ Thou shalt not go up and down as[x] a tale-bearer[1] among thy people; neither shalt thou [y]stand against the blood of thy neighbour: I am the LORD.

17 ¶ Thou shalt not [z]hate thy brother in thine heart: thou shalt in any wise [a]rebuke thy neighbour, and[2] not suffer sin upon him.[3]

18 ¶ Thou shalt not [b]avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people; but [c]thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself:[4] I am the LORD.

19 ¶ Ye shall keep my statutes. Thou shalt not let [d]thy cattle gender with a diverse kind. Thou shalt not sow thy field with [e]mingled seed: neither shall a garment mingled of linen and woollen come upon thee.[5]

20 ¶ And whosoever lieth carnally with a woman that is a bondmaid, betrothed[6] to an husband, and not at all redeemed, nor freedom given her; she[7] shall be scourged: [f]they shall not be put to death, because she was not free.

21 And he shall bring his [g]trespass-offering unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, even a ram for a trespass-offering.

22 And the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass-offering before the LORD, for his sin which he hath done; [h]and the sin which he hath done shall be forgiven him.

23 ¶ And [i]when ye shall come into the land, and shall have planted all manner of trees for food, then ye shall count the fruit thereof as uncircumcised:[8] three years shall it be as [k]uncircumcised unto you; it shall not be eaten of.

24 But in the fourth year [l]all the fruit thereof shall be holy,[9] to praise the LORD withal.

25 And in the fifth year shall ye eat of the fruit thereof, [m]that it may yield unto you the increase thereof: I am the LORD your God.

26 ¶ Ye shall not eat any thing with[n] the blood; neither shall ye [o]use enchantment, [p]nor observe times.

27 ¶ Ye shall not [q]round the corners of your heads, neither shalt thou mar the corners of thy beard.

1 These practices forbidden in the 27th and 28th verses, had all reference to certain superstitious practices of the heathen in honour of their false deities, and marks of their dedications to them, and which the Israelites are expressly prohibited from imitating. See a learned note of Clarke on the place. On the 29th verse, Scott remarks, 'And perhaps the prohibition of the 29th verse has also relation to the very common practices of idolaters in honour of their infamous deities; and indeed nothing could so promote lewdness as to make it a part of religion. But, alas, numbers even in Christian countries, are guilty of violating this prohibition, to a degree not in general known or suspected.'

29 ¶ Do not prostitute[2] thy daughter, [t]to cause her to be a whore; lest the land fall to whoredom, and the land become full of wickedness.

30 ¶ Ye shall [u]keep my sabbaths, and [v]reverence my sanctuary:[3] I am the LORD.

31 ¶ Regard not them that have [w]familiar spirits, neither seek after[4] wizards, to be defiled by them: I am the LORD your God.

32 ¶ Thou shalt [x]rise up before the hoary head, and honour the face of the old man, and fear thy God: I am the LORD.

33 ¶ And [y]if a stranger sojourn with thee in your land, ye shall not [z]vex him.

34 But the stranger that dwelleth with you shall be unto you as one born among you, and [a]thou shalt love him as thyself; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

35 ¶ Ye shall do [b]no unrighteousness in judgment, [c]in mete-yard, in weight, or in measure.

36 Just balances, just weights,[6] a just ephah, and a just hin, shall ye have: I [d]am the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt.

37 Therefore shall ye [e]observe all my statutes, and all my judgments, and do them: I am the LORD.

CHAPTER XX.

Of him that giveth of his seed to Molech, 2. 3. Of him that favoureth such an one, 4, 5. Of going to wizards, 6. Of sanctification, 7, 8. Of him that curseth his parents, 9. Of adultery, 10. Of incest, 11—19. Of sodomy, 13. Of beastiality, 15—17. Of uncleanness, 18—21. Obedience is required with holiness, 22—26. Wizards must be put to death, 27.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Again, thou shalt say to the children of Israel, [a]Whosoever he be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn in Israel, that [b]giveth any of his seed unto Molech, he shall surely be put to death: [c]the people of the land shall stone him with stones.

file my sanctuary, and to [f]profane my holy name.

4 ¶ And if the people of the land do any ways [g]hide their eyes from the man, when he giveth of his seed unto Molech, [h]and kill him not:

5 Then I will set my face against that man, and [i]against his family, and will cut him off, and all that go a whoring [k]after him, to commit whoredom with Molech,[1] from among their people.

6 ¶ And the soul that turneth after such as have [l]familiar spirits, and after wizards, to [m]go a whoring after them, I will even set my face against that soul, and will [n]cut him off from among his people.

7 ¶ [o]Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy: for I am the LORD your God.

8 And [p]ye shall keep my statutes, and do them: I am the LORD which sanctify[q] you.

9 ¶ For every one that [r]curseth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death: he hath cursed his father or his mother; [s]his blood shall be upon him.

10 ¶ And the man that committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbour's wife, [t]the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.

11 And the man that [u]lieth with his father's wife hath uncovered his father's nakedness: both of them shall surely be put to death; [v]their blood shall be upon them.

12 And if a man [w]lie with his daughter-in-law, both of them shall surely be put to death: they have wrought [x]confusion; their blood shall be upon them.

13 ¶ If a man also [y]lie with mankind, as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

14 And if a man take [z]a wife and her mother, it is wickedness: they shall be [a]burnt with fire, both he and they; that there be no wickedness among you.

15 And if a man [b]lie with a beast, he shall surely be put to death; and ye shall slay the beast.

1 The mode of offering their children to Molech in sacrifice was truly Satanic. An image of an enormous size, made of metal & hollow, was heated with great fires beneath; & when it was sufficiently hot, they put the children into its arms, (how like was the image called the Virgin, full of spikes, used in the Inquisition, which embraced the victim and pierced him thro',) where they were burned to death; meantime their cries were drowned in the noise of drums or trumpets, and of musical instruments sounded for that purpose. Even the Israelites fell into this unnatural and diabolical practice. 'Committed by them, it was the highest imaginable contempt of the Name, sanctuary, and worship of God; and a shameful violation of their national covenant! So that the very strangers, who were allowed to sojourn among them, must pay such respect to the sanctuary of JEHOVAH, who dwelt among his people, and to his holy name, as to stand aloof from these abominations, on the same penalty as native Israelites; and if the criminal escaped the sword of the magistrate, thro' a wicked connivance, God determined to execute vengeance on him, on his family, and on all who abetted this spiritual whoredom. Ten thousands of sacrifices equally horrible are offered in India annually, & connived at by British rulers!'—Scott. Of late years some governors have safely put down the practice.

1 Heb. made naked.
2 The enormities forbidden in the 18th chapter, are here declared punishable with death. This punishment, it is supposed, was in many cases inflicted by strangling; in other cases, stoning is appointed, and where the death is declared to be by burning, it is supposed, not burning alive, but consuming the body by fire, after death by stoning. In the case of Achan, he was first stoned to death, though the punishment ordered was that of burning, Jos. 7. 25, 26. The punishment of adultery by death, was not peculiar in eastern countries to the law of Moses. On the contrary, it seems to have been universal among them. Besides the greatness of the crime itself, it led, in the jealous and revengeful passions which it excited, to assassinations & bloody quarrels.

4 This striking personification, see ch. 18. 25, strongly expresses the lothesome vileness of the Canaanites, and that the 'cup of their iniquities was full.' 'From the accounts,' says Clarke, 'we have of the abominations both of Egypt and Canaan, we may blush for human nature; for wherever it is without cultivation, and without the revelation of God, it is every thing that is vile in principle, and detestable in practice. Nor would any part of the habitable globe materially differ from Egypt and Canaan, had they not that rule of righteousness, the revealed LAW of God, and had not life and immortality been brought to light by the gospel. From these accounts, for which we could easily find parallels in ancient Greece & Italy, we may see the absolute need of a divine revelation, without which man, even in his best estate, differs little from the brute.

CHAPTER XXI.

Of the priests' mourning, 1—5. Of their holiness, 6. Of their marriages, 7, 13. Of a priest's daughter convicted of playing the harlot, 9—15. The priests that have blemishes must not minister in the sanctuary, 16—24.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, [a]Speak unto the priests the sons of Aaron, and say unto them, [b]There shall none be defiled for the dead[2] among his people:

2 But for his [c]kin, that is near unto him, that is, for his mother, and for his father, and for his son, and for his daughter, and for his brother;

3 And for his sister a virgin, that is nigh unto him, which hath had no husband; for her may he be defiled.

4 But he[3] shall not defile himself, being a chief man[4] among his people, to profane himself.

5 They shall [d]not make baldness upon their head, neither shall they shave off the corner of their beard,[5] nor make any cuttings in their flesh.

6 ¶ They shall be [e]holy unto their God, and not [f]profane the name of their God: for the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and the [g]bread of their God, they do offer: therefore they shall be holy.

7 ¶ They shall not take a wife [h]that is a whore, or profane; neither shall they take a woman [i]put away from her husband: for he is holy unto his God.

8 Thou shalt [k]sanctify him therefore; for he offereth the bread of thy God: he shall be holy unto thee: [l]for I the LORD, which sanctify you, am holy.

9 ¶ And [m]the daughter of any priest, if she profane herself by playing the whore, she profaneth her father: she shall be [n]burnt with fire.[6]

10 ¶ And he that is the high priest among his brethren, [o]upon whose head the anointing oil was poured, and that is [p]consecrated to put on the garments, shall not [q]uncover his head, [r]nor rend his clothes;

11 Neither shall he go in to any dead body, nor defile himself for [s]his father, or for his mother;

12 Neither shall he [t]go out of the sanctuary,[1] nor profane the sanctuary of his God; [u]for the crown of the anointing oil of his God is upon him: I am the LORD.

13 ¶ And he shall take a wife in her virginity.

14 A widow, or a divorced woman, or profane, or an harlot, these shall he not take; but he shall take [v]a virgin of his own people to wife.

15 Neither shall he [w]profane his seed among his people: for I the LORD do sanctify him.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 Speak unto Aaron, saying, Whosoever he be of thy seed in their generations that hath any [z]blemish, [y]let him not approach to offer the bread[2] of his God:

18 For whatsoever man he be that hath a blemish, he shall not approach; [z]a blind man, or a lame, or he that hath a flat nose, or any thing superfluous,

19 Or a man that is broken-footed, or broken-handed,

20 Or crook-backed, or a [3]dwarf, or that hath a blemish in his eye, or be scurvy, or scabbed, or [a]hath his stones broken:

21 No man that hath a blemish of the seed of Aaron the priest shall come nigh to offer the offerings of the LORD made by fire: he hath a blemish;[4] he shall not come nigh [b]to offer the bread of his God.

22 He shall eat the bread of his God, both [c]of the most holy, and [d]of the holy;

23 Only he shall not [e]go in unto the vail, nor come nigh unto the altar, because he hath a blemish;[5] that he [f]profane not my sanctuaries: for I the LORD do sanctify them.

24 And Moses told it unto [g]Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel.

1 Whenever the high priest was attending or officiating in the sanctuary, he must not go out on any occasion whatever to leave the service of the living God; nor profane himself by engaging in common employments, or such as would render him ceremonially unclean. The reason assigned, viz. that the crown of the anointing oil of his God is upon him, intimates that more is expected from the Lord's high priest than from others, because his 'anointing' was typical of the gifts & graces of the Holy Spirit, and was a crown of glory & diadem of beauty, & might denote being an anointed priest; also his prophetic and regal character as a type of Christ.

There seems to be no ground for this imagination, unless the defect or deformity be to such a degree as to operate as an impediment, or naturally to be an offence, or to excite ridicule or contempt in the minds of men; in which case there is an obvious reason for such laws. The priests in their uncleanness must abstain from the holy things, 1—5. How they shall be cleansed, 6—9. Who of the priest's house may eat of the holy things, 10—16. The sacrifices must be without blemish, 17—25. The age of the sacrifice, 26—28. The law of eating the sacrifice of thanksgiving, 29—33.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, that they [a]separate themselves[1] from the holy things of the children of Israel, and that they [b]profane not my holy name in those things which they hallow[c] unto me: I am the LORD.

3 Say unto them, Whosoever he be of all your seed, among your generations, that goeth unto the holy things, which the children of Israel hallow unto the LORD, [d]having his uncleanness upon him, that soul shall be cut off [e]from my presence:[2] I am the LORD.

4 What man soever of the seed of Aaron is [f]a leper, or hath a running[3] issue, he shall not eat of the [g]holy things, [h]until he be clean. And whoso toucheth any thing that is [i]unclean by the dead, or a man [k]whose seed goeth from him;

5 Or [l]whosoever toucheth any creeping thing, whereby he may be made unclean, [m]or a man of whom he may take uncleanness, whatsoever uncleanness he hath;

6 The [n]soul[4] which hath touched any such shall be unclean until even, and shall not eat of the holy things, unless he wash his flesh with water.

7 And when the sun is down, he shall be clean, and shall afterward eat of the holy things, [o]because it is his food.

8 That which [p]dieth of itself, or is torn with beasts, he shall not eat, to defile himself therewith: I am the LORD.

9 They shall therefore keep mine ordinance, lest they [q]bear sin for it, and die therefore, if they profane it:[5] I the LORD do sanctify them.

10 ¶ There shall [r]no stranger eat of the holy thing: a sojourner of the priest, or an hired servant, shall not eat of the holy thing.

11 But if the priest buy any soul with his money,[6] he shall eat of it, and he that is born in his house: they shall eat of his meat.

12 If the priest's daughter also be married unto a stranger,[1] she may not eat of an offering of the holy things.

13 But if the priest's daughter be a widow, or divorced, and have no child, and is [s]returned unto her father's house, [t]as in her youth, she shall eat of her father's meat; but there shall no stranger eat thereof.[2]

14 ¶ And if a man [u]eat of the holy thing unwittingly, then he shall put the fifth part thereof unto it, and shall give it unto the priest with the holy thing.

15 And they shall not [v]profane the holy things of the children of Israel, which they offer unto the LORD;

16 Or suffer[3] them [w]to bear the iniquity of trespass when they eat their holy things:[4] [x]for I the LORD do sanctify them.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, [y]Whatsoever he be of the house of Israel, or [z]of the strangers in Israel, that will offer his oblation for all his [a]vows, and for all his [b]free-will offerings, which they will offer unto the LORD for a burnt-offering;

19 Ye shall offer at your own will [c]a male without blemish, of the beeves, of the sheep, or of the goats.

20 But whatsoever [d]hath a blemish, that shall ye not offer; for it shall not be acceptable for you.

21 And whosoever offereth a sacrifice [e]of peace-offerings unto the LORD [f]to accomplish his vow, or a free-will-offering in beeves or sheep,[5] it shall be perfect to be accepted: there shall be no blemish therein.

22 [g]Blind, or broken, or maimed, or having a wen, or scurvy, or scabbed, ye shall not offer these unto the LORD, nor make an offering by fire of them upon the altar unto the LORD.

23 Either a bullock or a lamb[6] that hath any thing superfluous or lacking in his parts, that mayest thou offer for a free-will-offering; but for a vow it shall not be accepted.

24 Ye shall not offer unto the LORD that which is bruised, or crushed, or [h]broken, or cut; neither shall ye make any offering thereof in your land.

CHAP. XXII. A.M.2514. B.C.1490 Nu. 6. 3-8.

1 That is to say, when they have contracted any defilement, they must separate themselves from, and not touch, any 'holy things.' The 'holy things' were the sacrifices given to the priests, the shew-bread, and whatever was presented to the Lord. 'When under any uncleanness contracted by their own fault, they must not so much as eat of those things. The priests, or those of the family of the priests, who had a natural blemish, tho' they could not serve as priests, yet were allowed, as their maintenance, to eat of the 'holy things.'

2 Some interpret this of being 'cut off' from officiating in the priest's office; others, of being cut off by an immediate divine judgment, as in the case of Nadab and Abihu.

4 These rules about eating the 'holy things,' related to females as well as males. But as the 'holy things' formed a principal part of the maintenance of the priests and their families, the uncleanness, in some of the cases mentioned, was easily and speedily removed, though wilful and presumptuous neglect was visited with the divine displeasure.

5 They are again warned of their danger if they eat the holy thing in their uncleanness, ver. 9, 'lest they bear sin, and die therefore.' Note, 1. Those contract great guilt who profane sacred things by touching them with unhallowed hands. Eating the holy things signified an interest in the atonement; but if they ate of them in their uncleanness, they were so far from lessening their guilt, that they increased it; they shall 'bear sin.' 2. Sin is a burden which, if infinite mercy prevent not, will certainly sink those that bear it; they shall 'die therefore.'—Henry.

4 If any one inadvertently ate of the holy things, who was not of the priest's stated family, he was required to make restitution, adding a fifth part more, doubtless as a warning and motive to guard against such inconsideration. If it was done presumptuously, then was he liable to the judgment of God for his offence. The priests were charged not to suffer them thus to bring guilt upon themselves by so acting in violation of the divine law. Or it may mean that strangers as above described, were not to be permitted to eat of the holy things, as typically bearing the iniquity of trespass. This could be done only by the priests, as the types of the great mediator and high priest Jesus Christ. It appears from the case of David and those that were with him, who ate the shew-bread, 1 Sa. 21. 6, that this law might be dispensed with in a case of necessity, as we learn from the words of our Saviour, Mat. 12. 3-7, who declared as an abiding principle, that 'God will have mercy and not sacrifice.' 'Those that are scandalously ignorant or profane, are strangers to the family of the Lord's priests, (that is believers). And it is not meet to take the children's bread and to cast it to such. Holy things are for holy persons, for those who are holy, at least, in profession,' Mat. 7. 6. —Henry.

1 It is here implied, that strangers, even Gentiles, might offer sacrifices with acceptance, & if in faith, might hope in the mercy of God, but they must be perfect and free of blemish. Neither Jew nor Gentile could obtain the mercy of God but through faith in the perfect sacrifice of Christ. Neither can any expect to be accepted of God in their spiritual sacrifices, in the service of God, unless they serve Him in the most faithful, constant, and lively manner they can.

2 By the time of 'the feast of weeks,' or the Pentecost, (or feast at the end of fifty days) the barley harvest, which was eared & nearly ripe at the feast of the passover, would be gathered in; and the wheat harvest ripe, and in part reaped. Of this latter, therefore, the people must make another acknowledgment 'out of their habitations,' as the first-fruits were from the field; in fine flour made into bread, and leavened as for food, not for sacrifice. This was to be accompanied with burnt-offerings, a sin-offering, and peace-offerings; all denoting their unworthiness in themselves, their acceptance thro' Christ, devotedness to God, consequent comfortable use of their substance, & communion with God and with their brethren. Two bullocks and but one ram are mentioned in Numbers; but the reason of this difference is not evident; perhaps it was left to the option of the priests or rulers, (Nu. 28. 27). The feast is supposed to have been held in remembrance of the giving of the law, fifty days after the departure of the people out of Egypt; and to have looked forward to the pouring out of the Holy Spirit, fifty days after the resurrection of Christ, (Ex. 19.1; Ac.2.1.) Having finished & presented his perfect obedience and acceptable sacrifice, as the first-fruits unto the Father; he, thro' the gift of the Holy Ghost to the apostles, and by the conversion of three thousand souls at once, presented the other first-fruits of the Christian church, as an earnest of that harvest of innumerable multitudes to be gathered to the end of time.

first year, and one young bullock, and two rams: they shall be for a burnt-offering unto the LORD, [z]with their meat-offering and their drink-offerings, even an offering made by fire, of sweet savour unto the LORD.

19 Then ye shall sacrifice [y]one kid of the goats for a sin-offering, and two[z] lambs of the first year for a sacrifice of peace-offerings.

20 And the priest shall wave [a]them, with the bread of the first-fruits, for a wave-offering before the LORD, with the two lambs: they shall be [b]holy to the LORD for the priest.

21 And ye shall [c]proclaim on the self-same day, that it may be an holy convocation unto you: ye shall do no servile work therein: it shall be [d]a statute for ever in all your dwellings, throughout your generations.

22 ¶ And when ye reap the harvest of your land, [e]thou shalt not make clean riddance of the corners of thy field when thou reapest, neither shalt thou gather any gleaning of thy harvest; thou shalt leave them unto the poor, and to the stranger: I am the LORD your God.

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, [f]In the seventh month, in the first day of the month, shall ye have a sabbath, a memorial of blowing of trumpets,[1] an holy convocation.

25 Ye shall do no servile work therein; but ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

27 Also on [g]the tenth day of this seventh month there shall be a day of atonement;[2] it shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall [h]afflict your souls,[3] and [i]offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

28 And ye shall do no work in that same day; for it is [k]a day of atonement, to make an atonement for you before the LORD your God.

29 For whatsoever soul it be [l]that shall not be afflicted in that same day, he shall be cut off from among his people.

30 And whatsoever soul it be that doeth any work in that same day, [m]the same soul will I destroy from among his people.

32 It shall be unto you [n]a sabbath of rest, and ye shall [o]afflict your souls: in the ninth day of the month at even, from even unto even, shall ye celebrate[1] your sabbath.

35 On the first day shall be [q]an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work therein.

1 The feast of trumpets was instituted on the first day of the seventh month, both because the civil new year began at that time, and because of the other solemnities observed in that month, which were thus announced. Some suppose it to be a memorial of the sound of the trumpet at mount Sinai, when the law was given. Others that it was a memorial of the creation of the world, which is supposed to have been at this season of the year. The blowing of trumpets especially represented the preaching of the gospel; by which men are called to repent of sin, and accept the salvation of Christ, which was signified by the day of atonement; and to rejoice in God, and become strangers and pilgrims upon earth, which was denoted by the feast of tabernacles, both of which were observed in this month.
g ch. 16. 29, 30; 25.9; Nu. 29. 7-11.
2 On the tenth day after the feast of trumpets, and five days before the feast of tabernacles; and though the Israelites were not required to attend on that day at the temple or tabernacle, yet many of them might. They were required, however, to observe the day strictly as a day of holy rest, of mortification and self-denial, on pain of being subjected to the judgment of God.

3 That is to say, they must mortify the body, and exercise self-denial in the indulgence of their bodily appetites in token of the affliction of their souls, to excite humility and contrition, and to subdue the corruption of their nature. Every soul must be thus afflicted for himself, because every soul hath sinned, and become guilty before God. Besides every soul must be thus afflicted for the common sins of all.

2 This feast was observed for seven days together. It was to commemorate the dwelling of the Israelites in tents in their wanderings in the wilderness; very aptly representing the condition of man as a stranger and sojourner in the earth. The eighth day was observed as a day of thanksgiving for the gathering in of the fruits of the earth. Hence the whole of the eight days was sometimes called the feast of ingathering.

4 These extraordinary feasts were to be carefully observed with all solemnity; but they were not to supersede the stated days of rest which occurred during their observance; and they did not preclude the free-will offerings, which the people might, out of a grateful & devout heart, be disposed to offer over and above. We are not permitted to offer 'will-worship' of our own devising, but God is well pleased with the free repetition of his own, or with that which is in accordance with its spirit.

6 It was a typical feast. It is supposed by many that our blessed Saviour was born much about the time of this feast; then he left his mansions of light above to 'tabernacle among us,' John 1.14: and he dwelt in booths. And the worship of God under the New Testament is prophesied of under the notion of keeping the feast of tabernacles, Zec. 14. 16. For, 1. The gospel of Christ is 'to dwell in tabernacles,' to sit loose to this world as those who 'have here no continuing city,' . . . 2. It teaches us to 'rejoice before the Lord our God.' Those are the circumcision, Israelites indeed, that always 'rejoice in Christ Jesus,' Phil. 3.3. And the more we are taken off from this world, the less liable we are to the interruption of our joys.—Henry.

42 Ye shall dwell [b]in booths seven days; all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths:

43 That [c]your generations may know[1] that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

44 And Moses [d]declared[2] unto the children of Israel the feasts of the LORD.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The oil for the lamps, 1—4. The shew-bread, 5—9. Shelomith's son blasphemeth, 10—12. The law of blasphemy, 13—16. Of murder, 17. Of damage, 18—22. The blasphemer is stoned, 23.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, that[a] they bring unto thee pure oil-olive[3] beaten for the light, to cause the[b] lamps to burn[4] continually.

3 Without the vail of the testimony, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall Aaron order it from the evening unto the morning before the LORD continually: it shall be a statute for ever in your generations.

4 He shall order the lamps upon the pure[c] candlestick before the LORD continually.

5 ¶ And thou shalt take fine flour, and bake [d]twelve cakes thereof: two tenth-deals shall be in one cake.[5]

6 And thou shalt set them [e]in two rows, six on a row, upon the [f]pure table before the LORD.

7 And thou shalt put [g]pure frankincense upon each row, that it may be on [h]the bread for [i]a memorial, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

8 Every [k]sabbath he shall set it in order before the LORD continually, being taken from the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant.

9 And it shall be [l]Aaron's and his sons'; and [m]they shall eat it in the holy place: for it is most holy unto him of the offerings of the LORD made by fire by a perpetual statute.

10 ¶ And the son of an Israelitish woman, whose [n]father was an Egyptian, went out among the children of Israel; and this son of the Israelitish woman and a man of Israel strove together in the camp:

11 And the Israelitish woman's son [o]blasphemed the name of the LORD, and [p]cursed. And they [q]brought him unto Moses: (and his mother's name was Shelomith, the daughter of Dibri, of the tribe of Dan:)

12 And they put him in ward, [1]that [r]the mind of the LORD might be shewed them.

13 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

14 Bring forth him that hath cursed [s]without the camp, and let [t]all that heard him lay their hands upon his head, and [u]let all the congregation stone him.

15 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Whosoever curseth his God shall [v]bear his sin.

16 And he that blasphemeth the name of the LORD, he shall surely be put to death,[2] and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he [w]blasphemeth the name of the LORD, shall be put to death.

17 ¶ And [x]he that killeth[3] any man shall surely be put to death.

18 And he [y]that killeth a beast shall make it good; beast[4] for beast.

19 And if a man cause a blemish in his neighbour; as he hath done, so shall it be done to him;

20 [z]Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth: as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again.

21 And he that killeth a beast, he shall restore it; and he that killeth a man, he shall be put to death.

22 Ye shall have [a]one manner of law, as well for the stranger,[5] as for one of your own country: for I am the LORD your God.

23 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, [b]that they should bring forth him that had cursed out of the camp, and stone him with stones: and the children of Israel did as the LORD commanded Moses.

1 This striking and significant observance is an evidence of the truth of the history of Moses, a constant, successive, and uninterrupted memorial to all their generations of the great deliverance that God had wrought for them; reminding them of their lowly origin, of the grace of God in calling and separating them from the rest of the nations and visiting them with his special favour.

2 Moses declared them to the children of Israel. He let them know what God appointed, and neither more nor less. Thus St Paul delivered to the churches what he had received from the Lord. We have reason to be thankful, that the feasts of the Lord, declared unto us, are not so numerous, nor the observance of them so burdensome and costly as theirs then were, but more spiritual, and significant, & surer, sweeter earnests of the everlasting feast at the last ingathering which we hope to be celebrating to eternity.—Henry.

2 By the express command of God himself, all who heard the blasphemy were required to lay their hands on the head of the blasphemer; as solemnly persevering in their testimony, and as devoting him to death, that the guilt of such a crime might not rest on Israel; and avowing that his blood was upon his own head, & that all the rest were clear. This was done after he had been brought without the camp, as in the case of the sin-offering, on which the guilt & merited curse of Israel was laid; & he was stoned to death, by the general act of the congregation. This event occasioned the giving of a law against speaking in a reviling and opprobrious manner of the God of Israel, or blaspheming his sacred name; in which all strangers dwelling in the land were included. It is a vain imagination of the Jews, that the very mention of the word JEHOVAH was the crime intended; for it certainly is implied that the criminal mentioned it with contempt and enmity, nay, malignant execration.—Scott.

5 Strangers, as well as native Israelites, were to receive the benefit of the law declared in the 21st verse, if they suffered wrong, and should suffer its penalty if they did the wrong. It seems also intended here, that strangers as well as native Israelites, should suffer the punishment due to blasphemy. Henry here says, 'God would hereby show what provision he had made for man's safety, in punishing those which are enemies to him (God), which should be an argument with magistrates to be jealous for his honour, and to punish those that blasphemed his name.'

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [b]When ye come into the land which I give you, then shall the land keep[1] a sabbath unto the LORD.[2]

3 Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof;

4 But [c]in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a sabbath for the LORD; thou shalt neither sow thy field, nor prune thy vineyard.

5 That which [d]groweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes of [3]thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land.

6 And the sabbath of the land shall be meat for you; [e]for thee, and for thy servant, and for thy maid, and for thy hired servant, and for thy stranger that sojourneth with thee,

7 And for thy cattle, and for the beast that are in thy land, shall all the increase thereof be meat.

8 ¶ And thou shalt number [f]seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years.

9 Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of [4]the [g]jubilee to sound, on the tenth day of the seventh month; in [h]the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land.

10 And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and [i]proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubilee unto you; and ye shall return [k]every man unto his possession, and [l]ye shall return every man unto his family.

11 A [m]jubilee shall that fiftieth year be unto you; [n]ye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed.

12 For it is the jubilee; it shall be holy unto you: ye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field.

13 In the year of this jubilee ye shall return every man unto his possession.[5]

14 ¶ And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, ye shall not [o]oppress one another.

15 According [p]to the number of years after the jubilee thou shalt buy of thy neighbour, and according unto the number of years of the fruits he shall sell unto thee.

16 According to the multitude of years thou shalt increase the price thereof, and according to the fewness of years thou shalt diminish the price of it: for according to the number of the years of the fruits doth he sell unto thee.

17 Ye shall not therefore [1]oppress one another; but thou shalt [q]fear thy God: for I am the LORD your God.

18 ¶ Wherefore [r]ye shall do my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; and [s]ye shall dwell in the land in safety.

19 And [t]the land shall yield her fruit, and ye shall eat your fill, and dwell therein in safety.

20 And if ye shall say, [u]What shall we eat[2] the seventh year? behold, we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase:

21 Then [v]I will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for [w]three years.

22 And ye shall sow the [x]eighth year, and eat yet of [y]old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in ye shall eat of the old[3] store.

23 ¶ The land [z]shall not be sold [4]for ever: [a]for the land is mine; for [b]ye are strangers and sojourners with me.[5]

24 And in all the land of your possession ye shall grant a [c]redemption for the land.

25 ¶ If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and [d]if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold.

26 And if the man have none to redeem it, and himself[6] be able to redeem it;

27 Then [e]let him count the years of the sale thereof, and restore the overplus unto the man to whom he sold it, that he may return unto his possession.

5 After seven returns of the sabbatical year had been completed, notice was ordered to be given throughout the land, on the evening of the great day of atonement, for the observance of the year of jubilee; and while the people were seeking forgiveness of their own sins from God, it might be hoped, that they would be more disposed to kindness to each other. Thus the proclamation of liberty and salvation by the gospel results from the atoning sacrifice of the Redeemer; and is intended to cheer the hearts of the humble and penitent. This notice was given by a peculiarly sonorous and animated sound of trumpets; for this seems to be the meaning of the word rendered jubilee. The language, used by the sacred writer, absolutely decides that the year of jubilee was not the same as the seventh sabbatical year, but the year afterwards, that is, the fiftieth, and not the forty-ninth year; and similar language concerning the day of Pentecost is always thus explained, (ch. 23. 15, 16; De. 16. 9, 10.) The only objection of any weight, which can be urged against this opinion, namely, the difficulty of the nation subsisting for two years without sowing their ground, is afterwards expressly obviated, (ver. 20-22.) This institution would form a suitable trial of the people's faith, and served to illustrate the power and faithfulness of God, whenever they observed it; but we read scarcely any thing of the year of jubilee after its institution. —Scott.

bought it until the year of jubilee: and in the jubilee it shall go out, and [f]he shall return unto his possession.

29 ¶ And if a man sell a dwelling-house in a walled city,[1] then he may redeem it within a whole year after it is sold: within a full year may he redeem it.

30 And if it be not redeemed within the space of a full year, then the house that is in the walled city shall be established for ever to him that bought it, throughout his generations: it shall not go out in the jubilee.

31 But the houses of the villages, which have no walls round about them, shall be counted as the fields of the country; they[2] may be redeemed, and they shall go out in the jubilee.

32 Notwithstanding [g]the cities of the Levites,[3] and the houses of the cities of their possession, may the Levites redeem at any time.

33 And if a[4] man purchase of the Levites, then the house that was sold, and the city of his possession, shall go out in the year of jubilee: [h]for the houses of the cities of the Levites are their possession[5] among the children of Israel.

34 But [i]the field of the suburbs of their cities may not be sold; for it is their perpetual possession.

35 ¶ And if [k]thy brother be waxen poor, and fallen[6] in decay with thee, then[l] thou shalt relieve[7] him; yea, though he be [m]a stranger, or a sojourner: that he may live with thee.

36 Take thou no [n]usury of him, or increase: but [o]fear thy God; that thy brother may live with thee.

37 Thou shalt not give him thy money upon usury, nor lend him thy victuals for increase.[8]

38 I am the LORD your God, [p]which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, to give you the land of Canaan, and[q] to be your God.

39 ¶ And if thy brother that dwelleth by thee be waxen poor, and [r]be sold unto thee; thou shalt not compel[9] him to serve as a bond-servant:

40 But as an hired servant, and as a sojourner, he shall be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the year of jubilee:

1 A distinction is here made between houses in the city, & houses in the country. The former might be redeemed any time within the course of one year, but not after a longer period. The latter might be redeemed at any time, and if not redeemed went out at the Jubilee. The reason of this is sufficiently evident. Houses in the country were built upon the inheritance which God had divided to the respective families. It was therefore necessary that the same laws should apply to the house as to the inheritance; but houses in the city were built for the purposes of trade; and it might have been utterly ruinous for the purchaser to have been compelled to remove after he had established his business.

5 These houses of the Levites in the cities afterwards allotted to them, with the gardens and pastures in the suburbs were the only inheritance for the tribe of Levi; and therefore were subjected to the same law as other estates. It is supposed that a Levite though ne way related to one of the tribe who sold such property, might nevertheless redeem it.

8 How tender this law. If an Israelite was reduced to poverty, and lived among his brethren as a stranger and sojourner, they must not take interest or increase upon any thing they lent him; and must treat him as a brother and lend unto him liberally. The same law was extended to a stranger sojourning among them.

4 When a man was sold for some debt or fraud for which he could not make restitution, he was liberated at the end of seven years, Ex. 21. 1-6. But if he voluntarily, through poverty, sold himself without limitation of time; or from love to his master, and his wife and children, had refused liberty at the end of seven years; and perhaps if he had been sold for some larger debt, or greater crime, he continued a servant for life, unless the year of jubilee intervened; but then he was set at liberty, and returned with his family to his inheritance. In the meantime his master must not treat him with rigour as a slave, but with kindness as a hired servant. 'For what cause, or after what sort soever he hath been sold, the jubilee released him, which was a figure of the time of grace, whereby Christ hath freed us from the servitude of sin and satan, John 8. 32, 36; Ro. 6. 14, 18.'—Ainsworth.

5 This was a very equitable law, both for the sojourner to whom the man was sold, and to the Israelite who had been thus sold. The Israelite might redeem himself, or one of his kindred might redeem him; but this must not be done to the prejudice of his master the sojourner. They were therefore to reckon the years he must have served from that time till the jubilee; and then taking the current wages of a servant per year at that time, multiply the remaining years by that sum, and the aggregate was the sum to be given to his master for his redemption. The Jews hold that the kindred of such a person were bound to redeem him, lest he should be swallowed up among the heathen; and we find from Ne. 5. 8, that this was done by the Jews on their return from the Babylonish captivity. We, after our ability, have redeemed our brethren the Jews, who were sold unto the heathen.

41 And [s]then shall he depart from thee, both he and his children with him, and [t]shall return unto his own family, and unto the possession of his fathers shall he return.[1]

42 For they are [u]my servants, which I brought forth out of the land of Egypt: they shall not be sold as[2] bond-men.

43 Thou shalt not [v]rule over him with rigour, [w]but shalt fear thy God.

44 Both [x]thy bond-men and thy bond-maids, which thou shalt have, shall be of the heathen that are round about you; of them shall ye buy bond-men and bond-maids.

45 Moreover, [y]of the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy, and of their families that are with you, which they begat in your land; and they shall be your possession:

46 And ye shall take them as an inheritance for your children after you, to inherit them for a possession; [3]they shall be your bond-men for ever: but over your brethren the children of Israel, ye shall not rule one over another with rigour.

47 ¶ And if a[4] sojourner or stranger wax rich by thee, and thy brother that dwelleth by him wax poor, and sell himself unto the stranger or sojourner by thee, or to the stock of the stranger's family:

48 After that he is sold he may be redeemed again; [z]one of his brethren may redeem him:

49 Either his uncle, or his uncle's son, may redeem him, or any that is nigh of kin unto him of his family may redeem him; or, [a]if he be able, he may redeem himself.

50 And he shall [b]reckon with him that bought him, from the year that he was sold to him, unto the year of jubilee: and the price of his sale[5] shall be according unto the number of years, [c]according to the time of an hired servant shall it be with him.

51 If there be yet many years behind, according unto them he shall give again the price of his redemption out of the money that he was bought for.

52 And if there remain but few years unto the year of jubilee, then he shall count with him, and according unto his years shall he give him again the price of his redemption.

53 And as a yearly hired servant shall he be with him: [d]and the other shall not rule with rigour over him in thy sight.

54 And if he be not redeemed in[1] these years, then [e]he shall go out in the year of jubilee, both he, and his children with him.

55 For unto me the children of Israel are servants; they are [f]my servants, whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

Against idolatry, 1. Religiousness, 2. A blessing is promised to them that keep the commandments, 3—13. A curse is denounced against those that break them, 14—39. God promiseth to remember those that repent, 40—46.

YE shall [a]make you no idols nor graven image, neither rear you up a standing[2] image, neither shall ye set up any image[3] of stone[4] in your land, to bow down unto it: for I am the LORD your God.

2 Ye shall [b]keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the LORD.

3 ¶ [c]If ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, and do them;

4 Then [d]I will give you rain in due season, and [e]the land shall yield her increase,[5] and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit.

5 And your [f]threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing-time;[6] and ye shall [g]eat your bread to the full, and dwell[h] in your land safely.

6 And [i]I will give peace in the land, and [k]ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid: and I will rid[7] evil beasts out of the land, neither [l]shall the sword go through your land.

7 And ye shall chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.

8 And [m]five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight: and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword.

9 For [n]I will have respect unto you, and [o]make you fruitful, and multiply you, and [p]establish my covenant with you.

10 And ye shall [q]eat old store, and bring forth the old because of the new.

11 And I will [r]set my [1]tabernacle among you: and my soul shall not [s]abhor you.

12 And [t]I will walk among you, and [u]will be your God, and ye shall be my people.

13 [v]I am the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, that ye should not be their bondmen; and [w]I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go upright.

14 ¶ But [x]if ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments;

15 And if ye shall [y]despise my statutes, or if your [z]soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye [a]break my covenant:

16 I also will do this unto you; I will even [b]appoint over[2] you [c]terror, [d]consumption, and the burning ague, that shall [e]consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and [f]ye shall sow your seed in vain; for your enemies shall eat it.

17 And I will [g]set my face against you, and [h]ye shall be slain before your enemies: they that hate you shall reign over you; and ye shall [i]flee when none pursueth you.

18 And if ye will not yet for all this hearken unto me, then I will punish you [k]seven times more for your sins.

19 And [l]I will break the pride of your power; and [m]I will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass.[3]

20 And [n]your strength shall be spent in vain: for [o]your land shall not yield her increase, neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits.

21 And if ye walk contrary[4] unto me, and will not hearken unto me; I will bring seven times more plagues upon you, according to your sins.

22 I will also send [p]wild beasts among you, which shall [q]rob you of your children, and destroy your cattle, and make you few in number; and [r]your high-ways shall be desolate.

23 And if [s]ye will not be reformed by me by these things, but will walk contrary unto me;

24 Then [t]will I also walk contrary unto you, and will punish you yet seven times for your sins.

25 And [u]I will bring a sword upon you, that shall [v]avenge the quarrel of my covenant: and when ye are gathered together within your cities,[1] [w]I will send the pestilence among you; and ye shall be delivered into the hand of the enemy.

26 And when [x]I have broken the staff of your bread, ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, and they shall deliver you your bread again by weight: and ye shall eat, and not be satisfied.

27 And if ye will not for all this hearken unto me, but walk contrary unto me;

28 Then I will walk contrary unto you also [y]in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins.

29 And [z]ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat.

30 And [a]I will destroy your high places, and cut down your images, and cast your carcases upon the carcases of your idols,[2] and [b]my soul shall abhor you.

31 And [c]I will make your cities waste, [d]and bring your sanctuaries[3] unto desolation, and [e]I will not smell the savour of your sweet odours.

32 And [f]I will bring the land into desolation; and [g]your enemies which dwell therein shall be astonished at it.

33 And [h]I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you; and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste.

34 Then [i]shall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies' land; even then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths.

35 As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; [k]because it did not rest in your sabbaths, when ye dwelt upon it.

36 And upon them that are left alive of you, [l]I will send a faintness into their hearts in the land of their enemies; and [m]the sound of a shaken[4] leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth.

37 And [n]they shall fall one upon another, as it were before a sword, when none pursueth: and [o]ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.

38 And [p]ye shall perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.

39 And they that are left of you [q]shall pine away in their iniquity in your enemies' lands; [r]and also in the iniquities of their fathers shall they pine away with them.[1]

40 ¶ If [s]they shall confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their trespass which they trespassed against me, [t]and that also they have walked contrary unto me;

41 And that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies; if then [u]their uncircumcised hearts be [v]humbled, and [w]they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity:

42 Then [x]will I remember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and [y]I will remember the land.

43 The land also shall be left of them, and [z]shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them: [a]and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity; because, even because they [b]despised my judgments, and because [c]their soul abhorred my statutes.

44 And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, [d]I will not cast them away, neither will [e]I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and [f]to break my covenant[2] with them: for I am the LORD their God.

45 But I will [g]for their sakes remember the covenant of their ancestors,[3] [h]whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt [i]in the sight of the heathen, that I might be their God: I am the LORD.

46 These are [k]the statutes, and judgments, and laws, which the LORD made between him and the children of Israel [l]in mount Sinai, [m]by the hand of Moses.

CHAPTER XXVII.

He that maketh a singular vow must be the Lord's, 1, 2. The estimation of the person, 3—8. Of a beast given by vow, 9—13. Of a house, 14, 15. Of a field, and the redemption thereof, 16—27. No devoted thing may be redeemed, 28, 29. The tithe is holy and may not be changed, 30—34.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [a]When a man shall make a singular vow,[1] the persons shall be for the LORD by thy estimation.

3 And [b]thy estimation shall be of the male from twenty years old even unto sixty years old, even thy estimation shall be fifty shekels of silver, [c]after the shekel of the sanctuary.

4 And if it be a female, then thy estimation shall be [d]thirty shekels.

5 And if it be from five years old even unto twenty years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male twenty shekels, and for the female ten shekels.

6 And if it be [e]from a month old even unto five years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male five shekels of silver, and for the female thy estimation shall be three shekels of silver.

7 And if it be [f]from sixty years old and above, if it be a male, then thy estimation shall be fifteen shekels, and for the female ten shekels.

8 But if he be [g]poorer than thy estimation, then he shall present himself before the priest, and the priest shall value him; according to his ability that vowed shall the priest value him.

9 ¶ And if it be a beast, whereof men bring an offering unto the LORD, all that any man giveth of such unto the LORD shall be holy.

10 He [h]shall not alter it, nor change it, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good: and if he shall at all change beast for beast, then it and the exchange thereof shall be holy.

11 And if it be any [i]unclean beast,[2] of which they do not offer a sacrifice unto the LORD, then he shall present the beast before the priest;

12 And the priest shall value it, whether it be good or bad: as[3] thou valuest it, who art the priest, so shall it be.

13 But if he will at all redeem it, [k]then he shall add a fifth part thereof unto thy estimation.[1]

14 ¶ And when a man shall [l]sanctify his house to be holy unto the LORD, then the priest shall estimate it, whether it be good or bad: [m]as the priest shall estimate it, so shall it stand.

15 And if he that sanctified it will redeem his house, [n]then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be his.

16 And if a man shall sanctify unto the LORD some part[2] [o]of a field of his possession, then thy estimation shall be according to the seed thereof: an [p]homer[3] of barley-seed shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver.

17 If he sanctify his field from the year of jubilee, according to thy estimation it shall stand.

18 But if he sanctify his field [q]after the jubilee, then the priest shall reckon unto him the money according to the years that remain, even unto the year of the jubilee, and it shall be abated from thy estimation.

19 And if he that sanctified the field will in any wise redeem it, [r]then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be assured to him.

20 And if he will not redeem the field, or if he have sold the field to another man, it shall not be redeemed any more.

21 But the field, [s]when it goeth out in the jubilee, shall be holy unto the LORD, as a field [t]devoted; the possession thereof shall be the [u]priest's.

22 And if a man sanctify unto the LORD a field which he hath bought, which is not of the fields of [v]his possession;

23 Then the priest shall reckon unto him the worth of [w]thy estimation, even unto the year of the jubilee: and he shall give thine estimation in that day, as a holy thing unto the LORD.

24 In the year of the jubilee the field shall return unto him of whom it was bought, even [x]to him to whom the possession of the land did belong.

25 And [y]all thy estimations shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary:[4] [z]twenty gerahs shall be the shekel.

CHAP. XXVII.

A.M.2514. B.C.1490

[a] Ge. 28. 20-22; Nu. 6. 2; 21. 2; De. 23. 21-23; Ju. 11. 30, 31; 1 Sa. 1. 11.

1 The Israelites, from an extraordinary zeal and love to the worship of God, would sometimes, by a solemn vow, dedicate themselves, or their children, to the immediate service of the Lord in the sanctuary for life; but as the priests and Levites were set apart, by God himself, for that service, and none were allowed to interfere with their work, these persons could only be employed in the lowest and most laborious services; & if too great numbers thus devoted themselves, they would be an encumbrance, rather than an advantage to the sanctuary. The Gibeonites were afterwards employed 'as hewers of wood & drawers of water;' and perhaps some others, who refused to redeem themselves, performed menial services to the priests & Levites. Probably these, as well as the Gibeonites, were called Nethinim. or dedicated persons, of whom we shall read hereafter, Jos. 9. 27; 1 Ch. 9. 2. Samuel, who was a Levite, was thus dedicated by his mother; and, not being redeemed, he was employed about the sanctuary from his childhood, long before the age when the Levites entered upon their office. Perhaps some others, who dedicated themselves or their children, were thus employed; yet in general they were allowed, or even ordered, to be redeemed, at the valuation here prescribed, which was equitable and moderate, and was reduced still lower in cases of poverty. Children might not thus devote themselves; but their parents might devote them. The women, if not redeemed, would find employment in spinning, weaving, and making the garments for the priests, or washing for them, and in various other ways; as we may suppose the Gibeonitish women, and the wives of the Nethinim did. —Scott.

[k] ver. 10, 15, 19; ch. 5. 16; 6. 4, 5; 22. 14.

1 If any particular animal were thus vowed unto the Lord, it was to be accounted holy, & must not be exchanged; but must be sacrificed, provided it were fit for sacrifice; otherwise it was to be valued and sold; but at a dearer rate to him who vowed it than to another person, as a rebuke for his rashness and inconstancy. Some suppose that the money was put into the treasury of the sanctuary, to defray the expenses of the worship there performed; others, that the priests had it for their own use. The difference between this singular vow & ordinary vows, seems to have been this:—the ordinary vow was made, when in quest of some blessing, or when some special mercy was received; the person who vowed engaged to offer certain sacrifices of burnt-offerings or peace-offerings unto the Lord; and it included nothing else. But a singular vow was the solemn dedication of a man's person, or child, or some part of his property, to the immediate use of the sanctuary, or of the priests; with special designation, whether fit for sacrifice, or not.—Scott.

2 Though the words, some part, are supplemental, they are generally admitted to be necessary, as it was not lawful for a man to alienate in this manner his whole patrimony. Good will to the house of God, he was allowed to express, but he was not to impoverish his family.

If he refused to redeem it, it was killed, and sold for the benefit of the priests, or the support of the sanctuary. This was probably intended to prevent rash vows and covetous redemptions, as what was once devoted to God ought not to be recalled.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF LEVITICUS.

THE great leading feature of this book is, that it is a repository of the shadows of good things to come, of which the body is in Christ, and perused and studied with this key to unfold its meaning, it is full of instruction and of comfort. The wisdom and grace of God are eminently displayed in it, not merely in the adaptation of the laws and institutions recorded in it to the character and circumstances of the Israelites, but so as to unfold, carry on, and advance his great designs of mercy to a lost world; and through a system of what are called carnal ordinances, sensible in opposition to spiritual, to connect earth with heaven and time with eternity, the blood of bulls and of goats with the precious blood of Christ. It would be an ignorant and presumptuous measuring of the Supreme by our limited notions of what is little or great, were we to suppose it unworthy of Him to record the history of a particular nation, or to appoint to them peculiar institutions, without any view to farther designs to the rest of this world, or to the universe at large, or any bearing on eternity. God could unfold his perfections and advance his glory in the treatment and recorded history of a single individual, or even in the life of an ephemeral insect. Nevertheless, perhaps it were to be expected, that God, who seeth the end from the beginning, and is the one God and Father and Ruler of all, in selecting a particular people to make them the objects of peculiar displays of his character, and to set up among them peculiar ordinances, would do it so as to carry forward the minds of intelligent beings to farther evolutions of his perfections and glory. A beautiful analogy may often be traced in the creation, providence, and word of God, in the views which they exhibit of the divine character, as also in the gradual manner in which these are evolved. From the moment when God said, Let there be light, and there was light, until he pronounced all things very good, and the heavens and the earth declared his glory, the firmament showed his handy-work, and day unto day uttered speech, and night unto night taught knowledge concerning him, even down to this present time, hath he never left himself without a witness in the natural world; so never from the moment that he said the seed of the woman should bruise the head of the serpent, on till the time that the great Redeemer declared, 'It is finished, and bowed his head and gave up the ghost,' did the spirit of prophecy and the language of expressive types cease to utter their 'testimony of Jesus.' As the germ involves the future blossom and fruit, which again contains the seed of the future plant which is to become a great tree, and the fowls of the air shall lodge in its branches, so it is with the evolution of God's gracious designs of mercy and salvation to the human race. Thus hath He taught us in the sacrifices and other types of the patriarchal dispensation; and more fully in that of Moses, in its origin, progress and consummation, especially in this book of Leviticus, to look forward to the redemption of Christ, the end of the law for righteousness. This thought is beautifully expressed in the following passage: 'That the Levitical law had a covert and mysterious signification, is indeed justly allowed by all judicious commentators; the whole service had a spiritual meaning; and its institutions, sacraments, and ceremonies were unquestionably prefigurative of gospel appointments, John xix. 36. Thus its sacrifices and oblations which, if performed in faith and obedience were to conciliate forgiveness of sins, (Ezek. xx. 11; Rom. x. 5; Gal. iii. 12,) have been justly considered significant of the atonement to be made by Christ. The requisite qualities of these sacrifices were emblematical of Christ's immaculate character. The mode also prescribed as necessary in the form of these offerings, and the mystical rites ordained, were allusive institutions calculated to enlighten the apprehensions of the Jews, and to prepare them for the reception of the gospel, Heb. xiii. 11, 12. Thus, likewise, as might have been observed in the account of the preceding book, the ark of the covenant, the whole structure of the tabernacle, the priesthood, and its decorations, were all apposite emblems of correspondent circumstances, appropriate to a scheme of a more perfect description, (Heb. viii. 5; ix. 8, 9.) So also in a less important sense were the outward rites and purgations, enjoined by the Mosaic law, designed to intimate the necessity of inward purity. Thus the whole service, like the vail on the face of Moses, concealed a spiritual radiance under an outward covering; and the internal import bearing a precise and indisputable reference to future circumstances and events is stamped with the indelible proofs of divine contrivance.'—Grey's Key to the Old Testament, p. 103-4.

These ceremonial institutions were farther adapted to the dullness, ignorance, and spiritual courage of the Israelites. 'The law was a kind of preparation for good things to come. Its supporting hands, the rites and ceremonies of the temple, were stretched forth to sustain the yet feeble limbs of childhood; but when that which was perfect came, then that which is imperfect was to be done away. As in the investigation of mathematical truth the human mind requires the support of certain figures, so the ancient Israelites, seeing as in a glass darkly, were unable to admit divine truth except through the medium of a regular system of typical observances.'—Faber's Horæ Mosaicæ, vol. i. p. 330. These institutions were farther intended to keep the Israelites a separate and distinct people, and many of them expressly opposed to their idolatrous customs and impure habits of the heathen, particularly of the Egyptians, after which the Israelites were so apt to run; all which points out the grace and tender mercy of our God, and the peculiar care with which he guards the safety and purity of his redeemed people, and the sanctity of his spiritual temple, and the living stones of which it is built; and should fill our hearts with lively gratitude, enliven our faith, and teach us to cultivate that holiness without which no man shall see the Lord.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MOSES,

NUMBERS.

THE title given to this book in our English bible, like those of the other four books of Moses, is borrowed from the Greek translation; the name, however, being, in this instance, rendered into the vernacular tongue. It has obviously been adopted from the circumstance that the book contains the record of two numberings of the people; the one in the second year from their departure out of Egypt, and the other towards the termination of their journeys in the wilderness. The book of Numbers records the formation of the mighty multitude into a regular and admirably arranged camp. It narrates the institution of various legal ceremonies, and the history of Israel's journey from Mount Sinai to the land of Moab. Its statements are frequently quoted and referred to in all the subsequent books of scripture. 'In this book, which comprehends the history of between thirty-eight and thirty-nine years, we have, in one word, a distinct account of the several stages of the Israelites' journey in the wilderness, the various occurrences on the way; their trials, rebellions, punishments, deliverances, conquests, &c., with several laws and ordinances not mentioned in the preceding books, together with a repetition and explanation of some others which had been previously delivered; the whole forming a most interesting history of the justice, mercy, and providence of God.

CHAPTER I.

God commandeth Moses to number the people, 1—4. The princes of the tribes, 5—16. The number of every tribe, 17—46. The Levites are exempted for the service of the Lord, 47—54.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses [a]in the wilderness of Sinai, [b]in the tabernacle of the congregation, [c]on the first[1] day of the second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Take ye [d]the sum of all the congregation of [e]the children of Israel, after[f] their families,[2] by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names,[3] every male by their polls;

3 From [g]twenty years old and upward, all that are [h]able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them [i]by their armies.

4 And with you there shall be a man of every tribe; [k]every one head[4] of the house of his fathers.

5 ¶ And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: Of the tribe of Reuben; [l]Elizur the son of Shedeur.

6 Of Simeon; [m]Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

7 Of Judah; [n]Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

8 Of Issachar; [o]Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

9 Of Zebulun; [p]Eliab the son of Helon.

10 Of the children of Joseph: of Ephraim; [q]Elishama the son of Ammihud: of Manasseh; [r]Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

11 Of Benjamin; [s]Abidan the son of Gideoni.

12 Of Dan; [t]Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

13 Of Asher; [u]Pagiel the son of Ocran.

14 Of Gad; [v]Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

15 Of Naphtali; [w]Ahira the son of Enan.

16 These were [x]the renowned[1] of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, [y]heads of thousands in Israel.

17 ¶ And Moses and Aaron took these men which are[2] expressed by their names:

18 And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month; and they declared [z]their pedigrees after their families, [a]by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls.[3]

19 [b]As the LORD commanded[4] Moses, so he numbered them in the wilderness of Sinai.

20 ¶ And the children of Reuben, [c]Israel's eldest son, by their generations, after their families, by the house of 4 Ainsworth remarks that Gad, the handmaid's son, is the only tribe whose number ends with fifty, the others being by thousands & ending with hundreds, and he considers it an instance of special providence that no broken number was among them all. The probability, however, is that, for convenience, the enumeration was recorded in even numbers, the odd numbers, as is not unusual, being omitted.

5 Jacob had given Judah the pre-eminence in his prophetical blessing; and that tribe was to have the precedency in the encampments of Israel: accordingly, God had increased them more than any of their brethren; indeed, to more than double the number of some of the tribes. Ephraim and Manasseh, according to the same prophecy, were numbered as distinct tribes, Ephraim having the superiority as it had been foretold; and Joseph indeed appears 'a fruitful bough,' yet the tribe of Judah was more numerous, by one thousand nine hundred men, than these two tribes united.—Scott.

1 Jacob, on his death-bed, had foretold the superiority of Ephraim, the younger, to Manasseh, the elder. He guided his hands wittingly, putting his right hand upon Ephraim's head; and, when Joseph would have interfered, desiring to appropriate the greater blessing to the elder, his father refused saying, 'he also shall become a great people, and he also shall be great; but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations,' Ge. 48. 19. We see the fulfilment of this ancient prediction now very distinctly begun. Ephraim is here put before Manasseh, and the tribe of the former outnumbers that of the latter by several thousands. The superiority, as we shall afterwards see, is continued at a future period. Moses, in the blessing wherewith he blessed the children of Israel before his death, says, 'They are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh,' De. 33. 17. Known unto the Lord are all his works even from the beginning. Of all that he hath spoken one jot or one tittle cannot fall to the ground.

2 At present this was the smallest of all the tribes, but, before their entrance into the promised land, they had very greatly increased: the tribe had added more than twenty thousand to its number. Yet, when this census was taken, his tribe was less numerous than any of the rest, except that of Manasseh. On the other hand, Dan had but one son when they went down, and now his tribe exceeds all others but that of Gad. It was thus that the Lord, who giveth no account of his doings, although all events, even the most minute, are according to infinite wisdom, fulfilled his promise to Abraham of a seed more in number than the stars of heaven.

their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

43 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Naphtali, were [a]fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

44 ¶ These [b]are those that were numbered, which Moses and Aaron numbered, and the princes of Israel, being twelve men: each one was for the house of his fathers.

45 So were all those that were numbered of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war in Israel;

46 Even all they that were numbered, were [c]six hundred[1] thousand, and three thousand, and five hundred and fifty.

47 ¶ But [d]the Levites, after the tribe of their fathers, were not numbered among them.

48 For the LORD had spoken unto Moses, saying,

49 Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel:

50 But [e]thou shalt appoint the Levites[2] over [f]the tabernacle of testimony, and over all the vessels thereof, and over all things that belong to it: they shall bear the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof: and they shall minister unto it, and shall [g]encamp round about the tabernacle.

51 And when the tabernacle setteth forward, [h]the Levites shall take it down; and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up: and [i]the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

52 And the children of Israel shall pitch[k] their tents, every man by his own camp, and every man by his own standard, throughout their hosts.

53 But the Levites [l]shall pitch round about the tabernacle of testimony, that there[m] be no wrath upon the congregation of the children of Israel: and [n]the Levites shall keep the charge of the tabernacle of testimony.

54 And the children of Israel did [o]according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

1 This was precisely the number of males above twenty years of age, as stated in Ex. 38. 26: and if we suppose that the census of which this was the result was distinct from the present, then either, during the seven months which had intervened, there had been no deaths, or the place of any that had died had been supplied by those who, in the meantime, had reached the age of twenty. To what a prodigious multitude must the whole host now have amounted, which, exclusive of women and children, & strangers, and the full tribe of Levi, could muster such a number of fighting men! What an increase from the seventy souls who had gone down to Egypt about 215 years before! But he was faithful that had promised. Some have supposed such an increase altogether incredible; but the calculations of Scheuchzer, and Reyher, & others, have proved that the number is not improbable. Sutcliffe remarks, that sixty-eight males, in six generations, allowing but five sons in each family, will produce 1,062,500 males.

2 The Levites were by this regulation exempted from war, because they were appointed to another specialservice. It is evident that they had not been included, when the half shekel each was collected from those who were numbered; for intimations had all along been given of the Lord's intention respecting them, which was on this occasion more explicitly declared. The Levites were exempted from the duty of serving in the wars of Canaan, as being, in a peculiar manner, consecrated to the Lord, and having sufficient employment in the duties connected with God's worship. It may be remarked that, imitating this example, the ancient heathen nations were wont to grant similar exemption to their priests, & to all connected with the services of religion.

1 The Israelites, it appears, encamped in four great divisions, with the tabernacle in the centre. The form of the camp was quadrangular, containing, according to the most careful calculations, something more than 12 square miles. Under each of the four divisions three tribes were placed under one general standard. Between these four great camps and the tabernacle, were pitched four smaller camps of the priests & Levites, who were in immediate attendance upon it; the camp of Moses and of Aaron and his sons being on the east side of the tabernacle, where the entrance to it was. Judah was placed on the east, and under him he had Issachar and Zebulun. On the south was Reuben, and under him Simeon and Gad. On the west was Ephraim, and under him Manasseh and Benjamin. On the north was Dan, and under him Asher and Naphtali. Every tribe had its particular standard, probably with the name of the tribe embroidered in large letters. See Josephus' Ant. i. xviii. c. 7.

3 The prescribed order of encampment was to regulate the order of march. Judah and the other two tribes attached to his banner marching first, Reuben and those attached to his banner marching next, & so forth, as is afterwards specified.

4 There is nothing to be observed respecting this camp but that the tribe of Reuben had the honour to pitch in the midst of it; and the tribes of Simeon and Gad lay on either side of him under his standard or banner, just as Issachar and Zebulun did on either side of Judah. 'There was,' says Patrick, 'an evident congruity in this, Simeon being his next brother, and Gad the eldest son of Zilpah, the handmaid of their mother Leah, Ge. 30. 10, 11.'

CHAPTER II.

The order of the tribes in their tents.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 Every man of the children of Israel [a]shall pitch by his own [1]standard, with [b]the ensign of their father's house: far[2] off [c]about the tabernacle of the congregation shall they pitch.

3 ¶ And on the east side, toward the rising of the sun, shall they of [d]the standard of the camp of Judah pitch, throughout their armies: and [e]Nahshon the son of Amminadab shall be captain of the children of Judah.

4 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, [f]were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

5 And those that do pitch next unto him shall be the tribe of Issachar: [g]and Nathaneel the son of Zuar shall be captain of the children of Issachar.

6 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were [h]fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

7 Then the tribe of Zebulun: and [i]Eliab the son of Helon shall be captain of the children of Zebulun.

8 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were [k]fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

9 All that were numbered in the camp of Judah were an hundred thousand, and fourscore thousand, and six thousand and four hundred, throughout their armies: [l]these shall first set forth.[3]

10 ¶ On the south side shall be the standard of the camp[4] of [m]Reuben, according to their armies: and the captain of the children of Reuben shall be [n]Elizur the son of Shedeur.

11 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were [o]forty and six thousand and five hundred.

12 And those which pitch by him shall be the tribe of Simeon: and the captain of the children of Simeon shall be [p]Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

13 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were [q]fifty and nine thousand and three hundred.

14 Then the tribe of Gad: and the captain of the sons of Gad shall be Eliasaph[r] the son of Reuel.[1]

15 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were [s]forty and five thousand and six hundred and fifty.

16 All that were numbered in the camp of Reuben were [t]an hundred thousand, and fifty and one thousand, and four hundred and fifty, throughout their armies: and [u]they shall set forth in the second rank.

17 ¶ Then [v]the tabernacle of the congregation shall set forward, with the camp of the Levites[2] in the midst of the camp: as they encamp, so shall they set forward, every man in his place,[3] by their standards.

18 ¶ On the west side shall be the standard of the camp of [w]Ephraim, according to their armies: and the captain of the sons of Ephraim shall be Elishama[x] the son of Ammihud.[4]

19 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were [y]forty thousand and five hundred.

20 And by him shall be the tribe of Manasseh: and the captain of the children of Manasseh shall be [z]Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

21 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were [a]thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

22 Then the tribe of Benjamin: and the captain of the sons of Benjamin shall be [b]Abidan the son of Gideoni.

23 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were [c]thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

24 All that were numbered of the camp of Ephraim were [d]an hundred thousand, and eight thousand and an hundred, throughout their armies: [e]and they shall go forward in the third rank.

25 ¶ The standard of the camp of Dan shall be on the north side by their armies: and the captain of the children of Dan shall be [f]Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were [g]threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

27 And those that encamp by him shall be the tribe of Asher: and the captain of the children of Asher shall be [h]Pagiel the son of Ocran.

There is little doubt that Deuel is here the proper reading. It is supported by the Arabic and Vulgate versions, and by the authority of many Hebrew MSS.

2 After the forenamed camps, the tabernacle was to follow, between those two that went before, and the camp of Ephraim and the camp of Dan that came after. They did not therefore march as they lay pitched; for then there was a camp on each side of the tabernacle: whereas when they marched there was none on the sides, but two camps went before it, and two followed it. It is said, 'as they encamp so shall they set forward,' which may refer either to the Levites, the sons of Kohath, or to the two camps forenamed, enjoining that they should march in the same order in which they lay encamped, Judah, e. g. in the midst of Issachar and Zebulun, they being either before and behind, or on either side of him.

3 By this arrangement it could be discovered at once if any had deserted the ranks.

4 Scheuchzer, who is quoted at length by Dr Clarke, has a long and ingenious calculation of the extent of the Israelitish camp. He allows one square cubit for each soldier, whilst remaining close to each other in their ranks. He then sets apart a space of 100 cubits by 50, for the tabernacle, then 50 cubits round betweenthe tabernacle and the camp of the Levites. Next the requisite space for the Levites' encampment with 2000 cubits between them & the other tribes. He thus finds the whole space of the camp to be 259,600,000 feet, which, reckoning 21,141,604 square feet to the Roman mile, the camp would contain a little more than 12 of such miles. See the whole calculations at length, with diagrams of the camp on this plan, in Dr Clarke's commentary on this place.

1 Here the standard comprehends ensigns; for there was but one standard for this camp, as there were no more for the other three. Therefore the meaning is, they shall march hindermost under their several colours, as we now speak. Which was ordered for the greater security of the sanctuary; by the two strongest bodies marching before and behind, where there was the greatest danger.—Patrick. On the subject of standards in general, the reader may consult a learned and interesting note appended to this chapter in the Pictorial Bible. We extract the following observations respecting those of the ancient Hebrews, although the subject is confessedly one about which no indubitable information can be given. The Rabbins leave out of view the ensigns which distinguished the subdivisions of a tribe, and confine their attention to the tribe standards. The view which they most generally entertain is that the standards were flags, bearing figures derived from the comparisons used by Jacob in his prophetic blessing on his sons. Thus they have Judah represented by a lion, &c. The later Jews were of opinion that, with respect to the four grand divisions, the standard of the camp of Judah represented a lion; that of Reuben, a man; that of Joseph, an ox; and that of Dan, an eagle. The Targumists believe that the banners were distinguished by their colours, the colour for each tribe being analogous to that of the precious stone for that tribe, in the breast-plate of the high priest; & that the great standard of each of the four camps combined the three colours of the tribes which composed it. The Cabbalists have an opinion that the bearings of the twelve standards corresponded with the signs of the zodiac, the supposed characters of these signs being represented thereon.

CHAPTER III.

The sons of Aaron, 1—4. The Levites are given to the priests for the service of the tabernacle, 5—10; instead of the first-born, 11—13. The Levites are numbered by their families, 14—20. The families, number, and charge of the Gershonites, 21—26: of the Kohathites, 27—32; of the Merarites, 33—37. The place and charge of Moses and Aaron, 38, 39. The first-born are freed by the Levites, 40—43. The overplus are redeemed, 44—51.

THESE also are the [a]generations of Aaron and Moses, in the day that the LORD [b]spake with Moses in mount Sinai.

2 And these are [c]the names of the sons of Aaron; Nadab the first-born, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

3 These are the names of the sons of Aaron, [d]the priests which were anointed, whom[2] [e]he consecrated to minister in the priest's office.

4 And [f]Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD, when they offered strange fire before the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: [g]and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office in the sight of Aaron their father.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 [h]Bring[1] the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister[2] unto him.

7 And they shall [i]keep his charge,[3] and the charge of the whole congregation, before the tabernacle of the congregation, to [k]do the service of the tabernacle.

8 And [l]they shall keep all the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle.

9 And [m]thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron, and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.

10 And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and [n]they shall wait on their priest's office; [o]and the stranger[4] that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 And I, behold, [p]I have taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the first-born[5] that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine;

13 Because [q]all the first-born are mine: for [r]on the day that I smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt, I hallowed unto me all the first-born in Israel, both man and beast; mine they shall be: I am the LORD.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, saying,

15 Number the children of Levi, after the house of their fathers, by their families: [s]every male from a month[6] old and upward shalt thou number them.

16 And Moses numbered them, according to the word[7] of the LORD, as he was commanded.

17 And [t]these were the sons of Levi, by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari.

18 And these are the names of the sons of Gershon, by their families; [u]Libni, and Shimei.

19 And the sons of Kohath, by their families; [v]Amram, and Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel.

20 And the sons of Merari, by their families; [w]Mahli, and Mushi: these are the families of the Levites, according to the house of their fathers.

21 ¶ Of Gershon was the family [x]of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites.

22 Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them, were [y]seven thousand and five hundred.

23 The families of the Gershonites shall pitch [z]behind the tabernacle westward.

24 And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliasaph the son of Lael.

25 And [a]the charge[1] of the sons of Gershon, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall be [b]the tabernacle, and the tent, the covering thereof, and [c]the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,

26 And [d]the hangings of the court, and the curtain for the door of the court, which is by the tabernacle, and by the altar round about, and [e]the cords of it, for all the service thereof.

27 ¶ And [f]of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izharites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites.

28 In the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were [g]eight thousand and six hundred, [h]keeping the charge of the sanctuary.

29 The families of the sons of Kohath shall pitch[2] [i]on the side of the tabernacle southward.

30 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Elizaphan the son of Uzziel.

31 And their charge[3] shall be [k]the ark, and the table, and the candlestick, and [l]the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and [m]the hanging, and all the service thereof.

32 And [n]Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief[4] over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary.

6 The males in the other tribes were numbered from twenty years old and upwards, the age at which they were considered fit for the duties of war; but the Levites being to be consecrated to God instead of the others, were to be numbered from a month old, this being the age at which the first-born of the other tribes were to be redeemed. Among the rest there must have been first-born of all ages, and it was befitting that their substitutes also should be of all ages.

1 From this and the following chapter, we learn the very severe labour to which the Levites were subjected while the journeyings of the Israelites lasted. There was not less than 14 tons 266 lbs. of metal employed in the tabernacle, Ex. 38. 24; besides an immense weight of skins, hangings, cords, boards, posts, &c. Of course it must have been no easy matter to transport it from place to place. The Gershonites, who were in number 7500, had to carry the tent coverings, vail, hangings of the court, cords, &c. ver. 25,26. The Kohathites, in number 8600, carried the ark, table, candlesticks, altars and instruments of the sanctuary, ver. 31. The Merarites, in number 6200, bore the boards, bars, sockets, and all matters connected with these belonging to the tabernacle, with the pillars of the court, their sockets, pins, and cords, ver. 36, 37.

3 To the Kohathites was assigned the chief place about the tabernacle, and to their care was intrusted the most precious of all the holy things. Of the forty-eight cities given afterwards to the Levites, twenty-three, or nearly one half, were assigned to this same family. It is supposed that God was pleased to honour them with this pre-eminence because Moses and Aaron belonged to them, being the children of Amram, the son of Kohath.

4 Over each of the three great families of the Levites a chief was appointed, but over all these chiefs there is now appointed a ruler, who was to govern them as they governed those under them; and this was Eleazar, who was more than a Levite, being the eldest son of Aaron the high priest. His especial charge was over those that had the sanctuary under their care. In all these arrangements we behold an indication that God is a 'God of order.'

35 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of Merari was Zuriel the son of Abihael: [q]these shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle northward.

39 All that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males, from a month old and upward, were [v]twenty and two thousand.[3]

40 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Number[w] all the first-born of the males of the children of Israel, from a month old and upward, and take the number of their names.

41 And thou shalt take the Levites for me, (I am the LORD,) instead[4] of all the first-born among the children of Israel; and the cattle of the Levites instead of all the firstlings among the cattle of the children of Israel.

42 And Moses numbered, as the LORD commanded him, all the first-born among the children of Israel.

43 And all the first-born[5] males, by the number of names, from a month old and upward, of those that were numbered of them, [x]were twenty and two thousand two hundred and threescore and thirteen.

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 Take [y]the Levites instead of all the first-born among the children of Israel, and the cattle of the Levites instead of their cattle, and the Levites shall be mine: I am the LORD.

46 And for those that are to be [z]redeemed of the two hundred and threescore and thirteen of the first-born of the children of Israel, [a]which are more than the Levites;

47 Thou shalt even take [b]five shekels apiece by the poll; after [c]the shekel of the sanctuary shalt thou take them: (the shekel is twenty gerahs:)

48 And thou shalt give the money, wherewith the odd[1] number of them is to be redeemed, unto Aaron, and to his sons.

49 And Moses took the redemption-money of them that were over and above them that were redeemed by the Levites.

50 Of the first-born of the children of Israel took he the money; [d]a thousand three hundred and threescore and five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

3 This total does not agree with the particulars, the Gershonites being 7,500, the Kohathites 8,600, and the Merarites 6,200, which makes a total of 22,300. Several methods of solving this difficulty have been proposed by the learned. Houbigant supposes an error in the enumeration of the Kohathites in ver. 28, the numeral for six being written instead of the numeral for three, before hundred. Dr Kennicot supposes the error to be in ver. 22, where, instead of 7,500, he would read 7,200, the final caph which stands for 500, being so very similar to resh, which stands for 200, he thinks has been mistaken for it.—Kennicot on the Hebrew Text. vol. ii. p. 212. Either of these modes will reconcile the difference. Or perhaps, after all, the 300 in question may have been the first-born of the various families, after the departure out of Egypt, who are omitted because being already devoted to God, they could not be exchanged for those of other tribes and substituted in their stead, as other Levites were. It has been well remarked, that a peculiar interposition of providence must be acknowledged in this near coincidence in the numbers of the Levites, and of the first-born of the other tribes.
w ver. 12, 15, 45; Ex. 32. 26-29.
4 The personal substitution of the Levites and their posterity, served only for the first-born at that particular time, and in this one special instance; for the previous law respecting the redemption money is repeated in ch. 18, and continued in force thro' all generations till our Saviour's time. See Lu. 2. 23.
5 It is evident that none were numbered but those who had been born after the destruction of the first-born of Egypt. This indeed seems the meaning of the law which referred to the future, and not to the past, Ex. 13. 2. The number seems great, but not improbable.—Scott.

1 It was a singular circumstance, and, as already remarked, indicative of the overruling providence of God, that the number of the males of the Levites, and the number of the first-born males of all the other tribes should have so nearly coincided. It was so ordained, however, that the coincidence should not be exact. Of the latter there were two hundred three score and thirteen more than of the former, and for this odd number the redemption money must be paid according to the law. This money, we may suppose, would be given out of a common fund.

CHAP. IV.

A.M.2514. B.C.1490

2 The former census being for the purpose of the substitution, was of all from a month old. This was only of those between thirty and fifty years. At thirty the Levites entered on the full discharge of the duties of their office. In ch. 8. 24, they are ordered to begin their service at the age of twenty-five. Aben Ezra says, 'they were probationers, & might do some service at five and twenty, but not do all; they might wait upon the tabernacle, but not bear the ark.' According to the Gemara Babylonica, they were admitted to learn their duty at twenty-five, and to minister at thirty. In the time of David, when their duties had become much less laborious than during the period of Israel's wandering in the wilderness, the age at which they commenced their labours was twenty, 1 Ch. 23. 24.

3 This law, prohibiting any person except the high priest, on one day of the year, from entering the holy place, must have admitted of an exception while the Israelites were in the wilderness, and that exception we have here laid down. So long as the cloud rested on the tabernacle, the general rule was in force; when it was removed, the priests might enter to prepare the sacred vessels for removal.—Scott.

1 If the Kohathites should have profaned the holy things by looking on them, they would inevitably have perished; and if their fault had proceeded from their not having been duly warned and directed, their blood would have been upon the heads of those whose neglect had been the occasion of their death. Hence the striking terms in which the command is here addressed to Moses and Aaron, 'cut ye not off;' i.e. do not, by your neglect, occasion the cutting off.

Every thing connected with these holy mysteries was designed to impress the people with reverence and awe. The term 'holy things,' here probably signifies the ark. Thus the Jews generally understood it, and it would appear with good reason, as any one may satisfy himself by comparing 1 Ki. 8. 8, with 2 Ch. 5. 9, where that which is called the holy in the former, is called the ark in the latter.

q ch. 3. 28.

4 In ch.3.27, &c. we have an account of the whole number of the Levites; and here of those only who were able to serve the Lord in the sanctuary. Of the whole number 22,300, we find that 8500 were fit for service, ver.47, 48, and thus 13,720 were unfit, being either too old or too young. From this and the preceding chapter, as Dr A. Clarke remarks, we see the very severe labour which the Levites were obliged to perform while the journeyings of the Israelites lasted. When we consider that there were nearly ten tons & fourteen hundred pounds weight of metal employed in the tabernacle besides the immense weight of skins, hangings, cords, boards, and posts, we shall find it was no very easy matter to transport this movable temple from place to place. The Gershonites, who were 7,500 men in the service had to carry the tent, coverings, vail, hangings of the court, &c. &c. ch. 3.25,26. The Kohathites, who were 8,600 men, had to carry the ark, table, candlestick, altars, and instruments of the sanctuary, ch. 3.31. The Merarites, who were 6,200 men, had to carry the boards, bars, pillars, sockets, and all matters connected with these belonging to the tabernacle, with the pillars of the court, their sockets, pins & cords, ch. 3. 35, 37. When attending to the description of the tabernacle and its appurtenances, let us not forget that both it and the temple, of which it was an epitome, were types of the church of God, and representations of the human nature of God's own Son. As God dwelt in the tabernacle, so did his fullness dwell in Christ, & so does he, by his Spirit, dwell in his church.

1 The family of Merari, though smaller than any of the other families of the house of Levi, had yet a greater number of effective men, having, out of 6,200 3,200, more than one half of the whole, able for the service of the sanctuary. In this the wisdom and goodness of God's providence were most conspicuous; for the Merarites were charged with the heaviest part of the tabernacle, the boards, bars, sockets, &c. and tho' waggons were afterwards provided for them, yet the loading & unloading of such bulky and ponderous articles, must have required the united strength of many hands, De. 33. 25;1Co.10.13; 12. 8-12; 2 Co. 12. 9, 10.

2 Moses and Aaron were the persons whom the Lord appointed to number the sons of Levi, but they seem to have associated with them in the work 'the chief of the congregation,' that out of every tribe there might be witnesses of their impartiality in numbering and apportioning the labours of their own brethren the Levites.

t ver. 15, 24, 37; Ro. 12.6-8;1Co.12. 4-13.

3 Some have supposed that the expressions, 'service of the ministry,' & 'service of the burden,' refer to different duties, the former pointing to the service done to the priests in the tabernacle while it was standing, the latter to the transporting of its various parts during the journeyings of the people. This view is not improbable; but, at the same time, it is quite possible that the two phrases may be intended to express the same thing.

u ch. 3. 39.

4 Though the sum total of effective Levites was very small compared with that of the other tribes, yet there would be far more than could be employed at one time in this service. But they might carry by turns, and thus ease one another, and do their whole business expeditiously and cheerfully. It is also to be noticed, that besides the service of the sanctuary, they had their own tents to remove, & their families to take care of.--Scott.

5 This is frequently repeated, that all might remember that these appointments were not of human but of divine authority. Cobbin remarks that the allotments of duty here described may afford a useful lesson to the various classes of persons employed to do the work of God. Each has his appointed place and service in the church of Christ, and in that place he is both useful and valuable in the accomplishment of the great whole which is to be done.

39 From thirty years old and upward, even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation;

40 Even those that were numbered of them, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers, were [r]two thousand and six hundred and thirty.

41 These are they that were numbered of the families of the sons of Gershon, of all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, whom Moses and Aaron did number, according to the commandment of the LORD.

42 ¶ And those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers,

43 From thirty years old and upward, even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation;

44 Even those that were numbered of them, after their families, were [s]three thousand and two hundred.[1]

45 These be those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron numbered, according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

46 All those that were numbered of the Levites, whom Moses and Aaron, and the chief[2] of Israel, numbered, after their families, and after the house of their fathers,

47 From thirty years old and upward, even unto fifty years old, [t]every one that came to do the service of the ministry,[3] and the service of the burden in the tabernacle of the congregation;

48 Even those that were numbered of them, [u]were eight thousand and five hundred and fourscore.[4]

49 According to the commandment of the LORD they were numbered by the hand of Moses, every one according to his service, and according to his burden: thus were they numbered of him, as the LORD commanded[5] Moses.

CHAPTER V.

The unclean to be removed out of the camp, 1—4. Restitution to be made in cases of trespass, 5—10. The trial of jealousy, 11—31.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, that they [a]put out of the camp every leper,[1] [b]and every one that hath an issue, [c]and whosoever is defiled by the dead:

3 Both male and female shall ye put out, [d]without the camp shall ye put them; that they [e]defile not their camps, [f]in the midst whereof I dwell.

4 And the children of Israel did so, and put them out[2] without the camp: as the LORD spake unto Moses, so did the children of Israel.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Speak unto the children of Israel, When [g]a man or woman shall commit any sin that men commit,[3] to do a trespass against the LORD, and that person be guilty;

7 Then they shall [h]confess their sin which they have done: and he shall recompense his trespass [i]with the principal thereof, and add unto it the fifth part thereof, and give it unto him against whom he hath trespassed.

8 But if the man [k]have no kinsman to recompense the trespass unto, let the trespass be recompensed unto the LORD, even to the priest, [l]besides the ram of the atonement, whereby an atonement shall be made for him.

9 ¶ And every offering[4] of all the holy things of the children of Israel, which they bring unto the priest, shall be his.

10 And every man's [m]hallowed things shall be his: whatsoever any man giveth the priest, it shall be his.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [n]If any man's wife go aside, and commit a trespass against him,

13 And a man [o]lie with her carnally, and it be hid from the eyes of her husband, and be kept close, and she be defiled, and there be no witness against her, neither she be taken with the manner;

14 And [p]the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be defiled; or if the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be not defiled:

15 Then shall the man bring his wife unto the priest, and he shall bring [q]her offering for her, the tenth part of an ephah of barley meal; he shall pour no oil upon it, nor put frankincense thereon; for it is an offering of jealousy, an offering of memorial, [r]bringing iniquity to remembrance.

16 And the priest[1] shall bring her near, and [s]set her before the LORD.

17 And the priest shall take [t2]holy water in an earthen vessel; and [u]of the dust that is in the floor of the tabernacle the priest shall take, and put it into the water.

18 And the priest shall set the woman before the LORD, and [v]uncover the woman's head, [w]and put the offering of memorial in her hands, which is the jealousy-offering: and the priest shall have in his hand [x]the bitter water that causeth the curse.

19 And the priest shall [y]charge her by an oath, and say unto the woman, If no man have lain with thee, and if thou hast not gone aside to uncleanness with[3] another instead of thy husband, be thou free from this bitter water that causeth the curse:

20 But if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee beside thine husband:

21 Then the priest shall charge the woman with [z]an oath of cursing; and the priest shall say unto the woman, [a]The LORD make thee a curse and an oath among thy people, when the LORD doth make thy thigh to rot,[4] and thy belly to swell:

22 And this water that causeth the curse shall [b]go into thy bowels, to make thy belly to swell, and thy thigh to rot. And [c]the woman shall say, [d]Amen, amen.[5]

23 And the priest shall [e]write these curses in a book,[6] and he shall [f]blot them out with the bitter water:

24 And he shall cause the woman to drink the bitter water that causeth the curse: [g]and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter.

1 For this expulsion some have assigned a reason purely physical; because the diseases were contagious; but of this there does not appear to be sufficient evidence. There was unquestionably a spiritual reason. The camp was the habitation of God, and therefore in honour of him who thus condescended to dwell among them by the visible symbols of his presence, nothing impure must be suffered to remain. There was at the same time a typical reason. The camp was an emblem of the church, where nothing that is defiled should enter, & in which nothing that is unholy should be tolerated. It is a remarkable fact, that in almost every country, leprous persons have been excluded from society. In the east this practice prevails, although, except in this case, no attention whatever is paid to the means of preventing the spread of infectious diseases. It seems very obvious that the spiritual reason was that on which this law of Moses proceeded. This is expressly stated, and, besides, the command was to exclude not merely every leper, but every one that had an issue, and whosoever was defiled by touching a dead body.

2 It is probable that some place, without the camp, was set apart for the reception of these unclean persons. Both in Europe and in the East, lepers were wont to be treated with great severity; but no command to this effect is to be found in the Mosaic law; and we may believe that by the Jews, tho' strictly excluded from society, they would be humanely treated.

If she confessed her guilt, she was to tear the instrument of her dowry in pieces, and go whither she pleased; for such an adultress, say they, was not put to death, but was only divorced and lost her dowry, without any other punishment. If she denied her guilt, she was brought to the door of the tabernacle, and the ordeal was proceeded with.

This is the most ancient account of the trial by ordeal which obtained so generally among various nations, and it was calculated to fortify the minds of the Israelitish women in the hour of temptation, and to render them watchful against all occasions of exciting suspicion in the breasts of their husbands. On the other hand, it was calculated to prevent the cruel treatment from husbands which such suspicions might produce, thro' the hardness of their hearts, when the crime could not be proved, nor the rage of jealousy allayed, and it would also lessen the number of hasty divorces.

CHAPTER VI.

The law of the Nazarite, 1—21. The form of blessing the people, 22—27.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [a]When either man or woman shall separate themselves [b]to vow a vow of a Nazarite,[3] to separate themselves unto the LORD;

3 He shall separate himself [c]from wine and strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried.

4 All the days of his separation shall he eat nothing that is made of the vine-tree,[4] from the kernels even to the husk.

5 All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no [d]razor come upon his head; until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks[1] of the hair of his head grow.

6 All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD [e]he shall come at no dead body.

7 He shall not make himself [f]unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die; because the [2]consecration[3] of his God is upon his head.

8 All the days of his separation he is holy unto the LORD.

9 And if any man die very suddenly by him, [g]and he hath defiled the head of his consecration; then he shall [h]shave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it.

10 And [i]on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation;

11 And the priest shall [k]offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, and make an atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead,[4] [l]and shall hallow his head that same day.

12 And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year for [m]a trespass-offering: [n]but the days that were before shall be[5] lost, because his separation was defiled.

13 ¶ And this is the law of the Nazarite: when the days of his separation [o]are fulfilled, he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation;

14 And he shall offer his [6]offering unto the LORD, [p]one he-lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt-offering, and [q]one ewe-lamb of the first year without blemish for a sin-offering, and [r]one ram without blemish for peace-offerings,

15 And [s]a basket of unleavened bread, cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, and wafers of unleavened bread [t]anointed with oil, and their meat-offering,[7] and their [u]drink-offerings.

16 And the priest shall bring them before the LORD, and shall offer his sin-offering, and his burnt-offering:

1 She was to drink the bitter water, after the words of the curse had been washed into it, as if thus she should drink the very words of the execration. There is still a strong impression, says the editor of the Pict. Bible, entertained among the inhabitants of Africa and some Asiatic countries, that the full force of a charm, or of a prayer or curse, is obtained by having it written, and by washing the writing off in water, & drinking the draught. One instance from Mungo Park will illustrate the subject. 'At Koolkorro, my landlord brought me his writing board, that I might write him a sephie to protect him from wicked men. I wrote the board full from top to bottom, on both sides; and my landlord, to be certain of having the whole force of the charm, washed the writing from the board into a calabash, and having said a few prayers over it, drank this powerful draught; after which, lest a single word should escape, he licked the board until it was quite dry.'

It is certain that a similar vow was not uncommon both among the Egyptians & many other heathen nations, but it may be doubted whether it prevailed among them before this time, and whether it was not on the other hand, borrowed by them from the people of Israel.

The hair was shaven off as a token that the vow was accomplished; and was burnt, not on the altar, as if he could make atonement, but under the peace-offerings, implying the gracious acceptance of such services by a God of peace and love. —Scott.

CHAPTER VII.

The offering of the princes at the dedication of the tabernacle, 1—9. Their several offerings at the dedication of the altar, 10—88. God speaketh to Moses from the mercy-seat, 89.

AND it came to pass on the day that Moses [a]had fully set up the tabernacle, and had [b]anointed it, and sanctified it, and all the instruments thereof, both the altar, and all the vessels thereof, and had anointed them, and sanctified[c] them,

1 It was probably from this custom of the Jewish Nazarites, that the Gentiles learned the practice of consecrating their hair to their gods. Lucian represents this as a very common custom, and that he had himself complied with it. At Athens there was a day appointed at one of their feasts, in which the hair of their children was cut off, and sacrificed to Diana; and according to Hesychius, before they performed this act, they brought a measure of wine, which they offered to Hercules, and then all who were present drank of it. This circumstance, if not an imitation, is a remarkable coincidence with the drink offering, ver. 17.

2 Maimonides says that the friends of a Nazarite might contribute to assist him in defraying the expense of his various offerings. 'By this,' says Ainsworth, 'we may see the reason of that which James said to Paul, though he had no Nazarite's vow upon him; "We have four men who have a vow upon them; them take and sanctify thyself with them, and be at charges with them, that they may shave their heads," &c. 3 This made the dedication a very long solemnity, which continued twelve days. When these days began it is not easy to determine, but the computation of Fortunatus Scacchus seems very reasonable. He supposes that the tabernacle being erected on the first day of the first month of the second year after they came out of Egypt, seven days were spent in the consecration of it, and of the altar, &c. On the eighth day Moses began to consecrate Aaron and his sons, which lasted seven days longer. Then the fifteenth day of that month was the first day of unleavened bread, which God commanded (as we have read, ch. ix.) to be observed in the first month, and lasted till the two & twentieth. The rest of the month, we may well suppose, was spent in giving, receiving, and delivering, the laws mentioned in the Book of Leviticus. After this, on the first day of the second month, he began to number the people, according to the command in the beginning of this book, which may be supposed to have lasted three days. Then on the fourth the Levites were numbered. On the next day, we may suppose, they were offered to God, and given unto the priests; and on the sixth day they were expiated and consecrated, as we read in the next chapter. On the seventh day their several charges were parted among them, (of which we read in ch. iv.) After which the princes, he supposes, began to offer upon the eighth day of the second month, for the dedication of the altar, which lasted till the nineteenth day inclusively; and on the twentieth day of this month they moved, as we read in ch. 10. 11, 12, from Sinai to the wilderness of Paran.—Patrick.

2 That [d]the princes of Israel, heads of the house of their fathers, (who were the princes of the tribes, and[1] were over them that were numbered,) [e]offered.
3 And they brought their offering before the LORD, six covered waggons, and twelve oxen; a waggon for two of the princes, and for each one an ox: and they brought them before the tabernacle.
4 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
5 [f]Take it of them, that they may be to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; and thou shalt give[2] them unto the Levites, to every man according to his service.
6 And Moses took the waggons and the oxen, and gave them unto the Levites.
7 [g]Two waggons and four oxen he gave unto the sons of Gershon, according to their service:
8 And [h]four waggons and eight oxen he gave unto the sons of Merari, according unto their service, under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.
9 But unto the sons of Kohath he gave none; [i]because the service of the sanctuary belonging unto them was, that they should bear upon their shoulders.
10 ¶ And the princes offered for [k]dedicating of the altar, in the day that it was anointed, even the princes offered their offering before the altar.
11 And the LORD said unto Moses, [l]They shall offer their offering, each prince on his day,[3] for the dedicating of the altar.
12 ¶ And he that offered his offering the first day was [m]Nahshon the son of Amminadab, of the tribe of Judah.

1 The different tribes are represented here as bringing their offerings precisely in the same order in which they encamped about the tabernacle, ch. 2. 10. They all brought an offering equal in kind and quantity to show that they were all equally indebted to God for their support.

2 Kaph, in Syriac Kaphtho, a pan or censer, on which the incense was put. Both the metal of which it was made, and that which it contained, show that it was for the use of the golden altar in the sanctuary. Boothroyd renders 'spoons,' incense-pans, 'silver chargers, platters, and 'bowls,' sprinkling-basins.

a Ps. 1. 8-14; 51. 16; Is. 1. 11; Je. 7. 22; Am. 5. 22.

3 From the numerous sacrifices and from the value of the gifts of gold & of silver offered by each of the princes, it has been conjectured that these were not their own private gifts, but rather the contributions of their several tribes. It is not improbable that others may have added the princes with their contributions.

4 These sacrifices were much more numerous than the burnt-offering or sin offering, and for this reason, perhaps, that both the princes and people had a share of them, on which they feasted before the Lord.

5 We may here remark that all that is narrated in this chapter took place after the completion of all that is recorded in the preceding. Moses had, before this, received divine intimations respecting the offering of the sacrifices and the anointing of the priests. He had numbered the people, arranged the order of their encampments, &c., besides sanctifying and anointing the tabernacle with all the vessels thereof. It is obvious that the offering of the princes was not made till the camp was formed, & the tribes arranged: for the princes present their offering according to the order in which their tribes were arranged in the camp. How noble was the example, which, on this occasion, the princes of Israel set before the people! When we remember the temptations of the rich, and how frequently, alas! they forget the bounteous Giver of all good, we cannot but rejoice in instances such as the present.

b ch. 1. 5; 2. 10.

A.M.2514. B.C.1490

1 It appears, by the metal of which this charger and bowl were made, that they were for the use of the altar of burnt-offerings in the outer court, for all the vessels of the sanctuary were of gold. It was probably used for receiving the flesh of the sacrifices upon which the priests feasted, or the fine flour for the meat-offerings.

2 Mizrak, from zarak, to sprinkle, a bowl or basin used in sprinkling the blood of the sacrifice, Ex. 27. 3.

c Ps.66.15; Mal.1.11; Lu. 1. 10; Re. 8. 3.

3 As already remarked, these sacrifices were more numerous than the burnt-offering, because the priests, the princes, and as many of the people as they invited, had a share of them, and feasted with great rejoicing before the Lord. This also seems to have been imitated by the heathen, who dedicated their altars, temples, statues, &c. with much ceremony, and the ancient Greeks with more sumptuous sacrifices. Among the Romans they were dedicated with plays, feasting, and public donations, and at last their feasts became anniversaries, as the feast of dedication also was among the Jews after the time of Antiochus. In this feast there were illuminations as expressive of the public joy.

4 It is observable that the offerings of all the princes were alike, each presenting the same amount of silver and gold, and an equal number of sacrifices. This equality in their offerings may have been the result either of agreement among themselves, or of the appointment of God, that there might be no unholy emulation, nor any unseemly boasting in so sacred a transaction. In contributing to the work of God, no motive can be more unbecoming than an ostentatious desire of being thought superior to our brethren. We may also observe that Moses, acting under the inspiration of God's Spirit, thought fit to set down distinctly, and at length, the offerings of the princes of every tribe (as he does here and throughout the chapter) though they were the very same, without any difference; that an honourable mention being made of every one apart, none might think themselves neglected. But how consoling is it to reflect that, in God's estimation, the widow's mite is as valuable as the rich man's offering.

1 Surprise has been expressed by both Jewish and Christian writers, that this work should have gone on upon the seventh day, which they suppose to have been the sabbath. But there is no proof that this seventh day of offering was a sabbath-day, or if it had, could the people be better employed than in thus consecrating themselves & this service to the Lord? It has already been remarked, that every act in this matter was a religious act, and we can scarcely suppose any day too holy for the performance of such acts as are here recorded.

i ch. 1. 10; 2. 18.

2 It was thought fit to set down distinctly and at length, the offerings of the princes of every tribe, tho' they were the very same, without any difference; that an honourable mention being made of every one apart, none might think themselves in the least neglected.

3 It is observable that, together with all their other offerings, each brought an offering for sin. Henry well remarks that they brought some things to be used immediately, offerings of each sort, burnt-offerings, sin-offerings, and a great many peace-offerings, on part of which they were to feast with their friends; and the meat-offerings that were to be annexed to them. Hereby they signified their thankful acceptance of, & cheerful submission to, all those laws concerning the sacrifices which God had lately by Moses delivered to them. And though it was a time of joy and rejoicing, yet it is observable that still in the midst of their sacrifices we find a sin-offering; since in our best services we are conscious to ourselves that there is a mixture of sin, it is fit that there should be even in our most joyful services a mixture of repentance. In all our approaches to God, we must by faith have an eye to Christ as the great sin-offering, and make mention of him.

4 From the narrative contained in this chapter, Scott remarks, that they whom Providence distinguishes, as princes, nobles, or wealthy persons, should take the lead, and set the example in every good work; with liberal hearts devising liberal things. But a liberal heart should be under the direction of prudence and discretion; and the circumstances of the times, the state of the church and its ministers, and the necessities of those around them, should be considered, that nothing be wasted in useless expense or vain projects.

A.M.2514. B.C.1490

1 Some commentators, addicted to the practice of allegorizing & spiritualizing the statements of scripture, have found here, as indeed, according to their principles, they may find everywhere, many hidden meanings which they delight to draw forth and expatiate on. The practice should at all times be carefully guarded against, as manifesting want of due reverence for the sacred authority of scripture, and likely to lead to most pernicious consequences. So long as we follow the intimations of scripture itself in affixing a spiritual or mystical meaning to any passage, we are safe; but, beyond this, we are in most imminent danger of substituting our own foolish fancies in the place of God's communications. Once admit such a principle of interpretation, and no limits can be set to the extravagances which may follow.

m Ps. 141. 2; Is. 66. 20; Da. 9. 27; Ro. 15. 16; Ph. 4. 18; He. 13. 15.

n ch. 1. 12; 2. 25.

2 From the example of these chiefs of Israel, princes and great men, as Conradus Pellicanus remarks, should learn to be devoutly religious and to possess the fear and reverence of the Lord God in their breasts; to be strong in faith; far from covetousness; unanimous in their endeavours to do honour to God; to give a good example of faith and good works to others; to seek the profit of their subjects; assist the servants of God; lend their helping hand to the proficiency of true piety; provide the ministers of the church with all things necessary, that religion be not neglected and contemned by their poverty: for the sake of God whom they serve, to do them honour by word and deed, and follow their godly admonitions.

3 Dr Adam Clarke remarks, that the form of expression in the original in this and the 78th verse, has in it something curious, being literally, 'In the day the first and tenth day,' & 'in the day two & tenth day;' but, he adds, to an ancient Hebrew our almost anomalous words eleventh & twelfth, would perhaps appear equally strange. In reckoning after twelve, it is easy to find out the composition of the words thirteen, as three and ten, fourteen, four and ten, and so on; but eleven and twelve bear scarcely any analogy to ten and one, ten and two, which nevertheless they intend.

o ch. 1. 13; 2. 27.

4 It is instructive to observe the solemn fact so frequently recurring, that, with all his offerings, each brought an offering for sin.

77 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Pagiel the son of Ocran.

78 ¶ On the twelfth day [p] Ahira the son of Enan, prince of the children of Naphtali, offered.

79 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

80 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

81 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

82 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

83 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Ahira the son of Enan.

84 ¶ This was [q] the dedication[1] of the altar (in the day when it was anointed) by the [r] princes of Israel: twelve chargers of silver, twelve silver bowls, twelve spoons of gold:

85 Each charger of silver weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, each bowl seventy: all the silver vessels weighed [s] two[2] thousand and four hundred shekels, [t] after the shekel of the sanctuary.

86 The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels a piece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels.

87 All the oxen for the burnt-offering were twelve bullocks, the rams twelve, the lambs of the first year twelve, with their meat-offering; and the kids of the goats for sin-offering twelve.

88 And all the oxen, for the sacrifice of the peace-offerings, were twenty[3] and four bullocks, the rams sixty, the he-goats sixty, the lambs of the first year sixty. This was the dedication[4] of the altar, after [u] that it was anointed.

2 The whole value of the silver vessels was £273 15*s.* sterling; and of the golden spoons about £199 sterling. Another statement makes the silver vessels amount to £383 1*s.* 8½*d.*, and the twelve golden spoons to £320 14*s.* 10½*d.*; making a total of £703 16*s.* 6½*d.* These were the voluntary gifts of the princes, on this occasion, applied to the use of the tabernacle. It will be observed that in the ancient church of God, in addition to the tithes, &c. which by God's own command had been set apart for the services of religion, and for the maintenance of an order of men dedicated to his service, room was left for the voluntary offerings of the people. These were never superseded. The Divine sanction was given to both methods of upholding his holy service and worship, or rather to a system which embraced them both. However well provided for a church may be, by state endowments, or by the possession of property belonging to itself, this does not absolve the members of that church from the duty of contributing, as the Lord may have prospered them, to the cause of the Redeemer; and ample opportunities of doing so will never cease to be afforded to faithful men, with respect both to the upholding of the worship, and the extension of the spiritual kingdom of Jesus Christ.

From this we may conjecture, that though the place they now occupied was a wilderness in respect of cities, villages, and regular inhabitants yet there must have been pasturage in abundance, otherwise the Israelites could not have furnished these cattle with all the sacrifices necessary for different occasions, & especially for the passover, which must of itself have required an immense number of lambs, when each family of 600,000 males was obliged to provide one, ch. ix.

CHAPTER VIII.

How the lamps are to be lighted, 1—4. The consecration of the Levites, 5—22. The age and time of their service, 23—26.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto Aaron, and say unto him, When thou [a] lightest the lamps, the seven[3] lamps shall give light over against the candlestick.

3 And Aaron did so: he lighted the lamps thereof over against the candlestick; as the LORD commanded Moses.

4 And [b] this work of the candlestick was of beaten gold; unto the shaft thereof, unto the flowers thereof, was [c] beaten work: according unto [d] the pattern which the LORD had shewed Moses, so he made the candlestick.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Take[4] the Levites from among the children of Israel, and [e] cleanse them.

7 And thus shalt thou do unto them, to cleanse them: [f] Sprinkle [g] water of purifying[5] upon them, and let[6] them shave all their flesh, and let them [h] wash their clothes, and so make themselves clean.

8 Then let them take [i] a young bullock with [k] his meat-offering, even fine flour mingled with oil, and [l] another young bullock shalt thou take for a sin-offering.

9 And [m] thou shalt bring the Levites before the tabernacle of the congregation; and thou [n] shalt gather the whole assembly of the children of Israel together.

10 And thou shalt bring the Levites before the LORD; and [o] the children of Israel shall put their hands upon the Levites:

11 And Aaron shall offer[7] the Levites before the LORD, for an [8] offering of the children of Israel, that [9] they may [p] execute the service of the LORD.

12 And the [q] Levites shall lay their hands[1] upon the heads of the bullocks; and thou shalt offer [r]the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, unto the LORD, to make an atonement[s] for the Levites.

13 And thou shalt set the Levites before Aaron, and before his sons, [t]and offer them for an offering[2] unto the LORD.

14 Thus shalt thou [u]separate the Levites from among the children of Israel; [v]and the Levites shall be mine.

15 And after that shall the Levites [w]go in to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation: and thou shalt cleanse them, [x]and offer them for an offering.

16 For they are wholly given unto me from among the children of Israel; [y]instead of such as open every womb, even instead of the first-born of all the children of Israel, have I taken them unto me.

17 For [z]all the first-born of the children of Israel are mine, both man and beast: [a]on the day that I smote every first-born in the land of Egypt [b]sanctified them for myself.

18 And I have taken the Levites for [c]all the first-born of the children of Israel.

19 And [c]I have given[3] the Levites as a[4] gift to Aaron, and to his sons, from among the children of Israel, to do the service of the children of Israel in the tabernacle of the congregation, and to make an atonement[5] for the children of Israel; [d]that there be no plague among the children of Israel, when the children of Israel come nigh unto the sanctuary.

20 And Moses, and Aaron, and all the congregation of the children of Israel, did to the Levites according unto all that the LORD commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did the children of Israel unto them.

21 And the Levites [e]were purified, and they washed their clothes; and Aaron [f]offered[6] them as an offering before the LORD; [g]and Aaron made an atonement for them to cleanse them.

22 And [h]after that went the Levites in to do their service in the tabernacle[7] of the congregation before Aaron, and before his sons: as the LORD had commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did they unto them.

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 This is it that belongeth unto the Levites: [i]from twenty and five[1] years old and upward they shall go in to wait[2] upon the service of the tabernacle of the congregation:

25 And from the age of fifty years they shall cease[3] waiting upon the service[4] thereof, and shall serve no more;

26 But shall minister with their brethren in the tabernacle of the congregation, [k]to keep the charge, and shall do no service. Thus shalt thou do unto the Levites touching their charge.

CHAPTER IX.

The passover is commanded again, 1—8. A second passover allowed for them that were unclean or absent, 9—14. The cloud guideth the removings and encampings of the Israelites, 15—23.

AND the LORD spake[5] unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, [a]in the first[6] month of the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Let the children of Israel also [b]keep the passover[7] at [c]his appointed season.

3 In the fourteenth day of this month, at[8] even, ye shall keep it in his appointed season: [d]according to all the rites of it, and according to all the ceremonies[9] thereof, shall ye keep it.

4 And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should keep the passover.

5 And they kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the first month at even in the wilderness of Sinai: [e]according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did the children of Israel.

6 ¶ And there were certain men, who were [f]defiled by the dead body of a man, that they could not keep the passover on that day; and [g]they came before Moses and before Aaron on that day.

7 And those men said unto him, We are defiled[10] by the dead body of a man: wherefore are we kept back, that [h]we may not offer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season among the children of Israel?

A.M.2514. B.C.1490

1 This was just the same act which had been performed upon the Levites themselves, and seems to have had the same signification. The Levites, though substituted in the room of the first-born, yet not being devoted to death, any more than the first-born themselves were, these two sacrifices were substituted for them. They laid their hands upon their heads, that the sins which Israel had put upon them might be transferred to the animals.

2 The words literally signify, 'wave them for a wave-offering,' and, as this could not be done by taking up each in the hand, as was done with the wave-shoulder, it is supposed that some analogous action was employed. Perhaps Aaron lifted up his hands & waved them, as if presenting a wave-offering, while they, at his command, imitated the same motion, and were thus offered unto the Lord. Paul has been supposed to allude to this in Rom. 12. 1, where he beseeches believers to present their bodies a living sacrifice.

8 And Moses said unto them, [i]Stand still, and [k]I will hear what the LORD will command concerning you.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak[1] unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you, or of your posterity, shall [l]be unclean by reason of a dead body, or be in a journey afar off, [m]yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD.

11 The [n]fourteenth day of the second month at even they shall keep it, and[o] eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

12 They [p]shall leave[2] none of it unto the morning, nor [q]break any bone of it: [r]according to all the ordinances of the passover they shall keep it.

13 But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and [s]forbeareth to keep the passover, even the same soul shall be cut off from his people: because [t]he brought not the offering[3] of the LORD in his appointed season, that man shall [u]bear his sin.

14 And [v]if a stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover unto the LORD; according to the ordinance of the passover, and according to the manner thereof, so shall he do: ye shall have one ordinance, both for the stranger, and for him that was born in the land.

17 And [z]when the cloud[4] was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: [a]and in the place where the cloud abode, there the children of Israel pitched their tents.

4 This glorious cloud which, from the time that Israel had passed through the Red sea, had indicated the presence of Jehovah, was that, the movements of which regulated the journeyings of the people. Moses is most minute in his statement of this circumstance, that at the commandment of the Lord they journeyed, and at the commandment of the Lord they pitched. Maimonides assigns a reason for this minuteness. It was the intention of Moses, he says, to confute the conceit of profane people, who imagined the reason of the Israelites staying so long in the wilderness, was because they lost their way. For the Arabians, he says, in his days, still called that wilderness 'the wandering desert.'

4 As the heat of the day is very severe in the desert, the night season is sometimes chosen for the performance of a journey; though it is very likely, that in the case of the Israelites this was seldom resorted to.
5 It was by the divine counsel alone that they were directed in all their peregrinations; & from the words of this verse, we see that, as already remarked, their times of tarrying at different stations were very unequal.

6 It has been well observed that the case of two or three millions of people, shut up in a dreary wilderness, for almost forty years, as completely as if the highest walls, garrisoned by the most valiant troops, had surrounded them; when compared with their rebellions in other things, & their submission in this respect, most strikingly shows that they were convinced beyond the possibility of a doubt, that resistance would be unavailing.

7 The number of these trumpets, at first only two, there being as yet but two priests, sons of Aaron, who were to blow them, was afterwards greatly increased. [h] ch. 2. 10-26.

19 And when the cloud[1] tarried long upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel [c]kept the [2]charge of the LORD, and journeyed not.

20 And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the LORD they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the LORD they journeyed.

21 And so it was, when the cloud abode[3] from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night[4] that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.

22 Or whether it were two days, or a month,[5] or a year, that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel [d]abode in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed.

23 At the commandment[6] of the LORD they rested in their tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed: [e]they kept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

CHAPTER X.

The use of the silver trumpets, 1—10. The Israelites remove from Sinai to Paran, 11—13. The order of their march, 14, 18, 22, 26—28. Hobab is entreated by Moses not to leave them, 29—32. The blessing of Moses at the removing and resting of the ark, 33—36.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Make thee [a]two trumpets of silver; [b]of a whole piece shalt thou make them: that thou mayest use them for [c]the calling of the assembly, and for the journeying of the camps.

3 And when [d]they shall blow[7] with them, all the assembly[8] shall assemble themselves to thee at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And if they blow but with one trumpet, then the princes, which are [e]heads of the thousands of Israel, shall gather themselves unto thee.

5 When ye [f]blow an alarm,[9] then [g]the camps that lie on the east parts shall go forward.

6 When ye blow an alarm the second time,[10] then [h]the camps that lie on the south side shall take their journey: they shall blow an alarm for their journeys.

7 But when the congregation is to be gathered together, ye shall blow, but ye shall not sound an alarm.

8 And [k]the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall blow with the trumpets: and they shall be to you for an ordinance[1] for ever throughout your generations.

9 And if ye go to war in your land against the enemy that [l]oppresseth you, then[m] ye shall blow an alarm[2] with the trumpets; and ye shall be [n]remembered before the LORD your God, and ye shall be saved from your enemies.

10 Also[o] in the day of your gladness, and in your solemn days, and in the beginnings of your months, ye shall blow with the trumpets over your burnt-offerings; and over the sacrifices of your peace-offerings; that they may be to you for [p]a memorial before your God: I am the LORD your God.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, [q]on the twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that [r]the cloud was taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony.

12 And the children of Israel [s]took their journeys [t]out of the wilderness of Sinai; and the cloud rested in [u]the wilderness of Paran.

13 And they first [v]took their journey, according to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

14 ¶ In [w]the first place went the standard of the camp of the children of Judah,[3] according to their armies: and over his host was [x]Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

15 And over the host of the tribe of the children of [y]Issachar was Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

16 And over the host of the tribe of the children of [z]Zebulun was Eliab the son of Helon.

17 And [a]the tabernacle was taken down; and [b]the sons of Gershon and the sons of Merari set forward, bearing the tabernacle.

18 ¶ And the standard of [c]the camp of Reuben set forward, according to their armies: and over his host was Elizur[d] the son of Shedeur.

19 And over the host of the tribe of the children of [e]Simeon was Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

Gershonites, and Merarites, bearing the tabernacle. REUBEN, Simeon, Gad, Kohathites with the sanctuary. EPHRAIM, Manasseh, Benjamin. DAN, Asher, Naphtali. Among other things it should be remarked, that, according to well-known rules of military tactics, the advance & rearguards were stronger than the centre. The admirable order & arrangement of the Hebrew camp has already been adverted to. The order observed in the march of this vast host, as the editor of the Pict. Bible remarks, deserves no less attention, and is not exceeded by any of those practices of the Greeks & Romans, in their military tactics, which have obtained a much larger share of admiration. They marched by the sound of trumpet, always in the same order, and quartered themselves always in the same situation about the tabernacle, which was in the centre of the camp. Every division was placed under the command of its own prince, and followed its own standard. . . Nothing could be better contrived than their order of march, to facilitate the movements of so vast a body.

CHAPTER XI.

The burning at Taberah is quenched by Moses' prayer, 1—3. The people lust for flesh, and loathe manna, 4—9. Moses complaineth of his charge, 10—15. God divideth his burden among seventy elders, 16—30. Quails are given in wrath at Kibroth-hattaavah, 31—35.

AND [a]when the people [2]complained,[3] it[4] displeased the LORD: and the LORD heard it; and his anger was kindled: and [b]the fire[5] of the LORD burnt among them, and consumed them that were in [c]the uttermost parts of the camp.

2 And the people [d]cried unto Moses; and when Moses [e]prayed unto the LORD, the[f] fire was[6] quenched.

3 And he called the name of the place Taberah:[7] because the fire of the LORD burnt among them.

4 ¶ And [g]the mixed multitude that was among them fell[8] a lusting: and the[h] children of Israel also wept[9] again, and said, [i]Who shall give us flesh[10] to eat?

5 We remember [k]the fish[11] which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons,[12] and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick:

6 But now [l]our soul is dried away: there is nothing at all, besides this manna, before our eyes.

7 And [m]the manna was as coriander-seed, and the colour[13] thereof as the colour of [n]bdellium.

8 And [o]the people went about, and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and [p]baked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and the taste[7] of it was as the taste of fresh oil.

9 And when [r]the dew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it.

10 ¶ Then Moses heard the people [s]weep[1] throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent: and [t]the anger of the LORD was kindled greatly; [u]Moses also was displeased.

11 And Moses said unto the LORD, [v]Wherefore hast thou afflicted thy servant? and [w]wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?

12 Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, [x]Carry them in thy bosom ([y]as a nursing-father beareth the sucking child,) unto [z]the land which thou swarest unto their fathers?

13 [a]Whence should I have flesh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat.

14 I am [b]not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me.

15 And if thou deal thus with me, [c]kill me, I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and [d]let me not see my wretchedness.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me [e]seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and [f]officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee.

17 And [g]I will come down and [h]talk with thee there: and [i]I will take[2] of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and [k]they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.

18 And say thou unto the people, [l]Sanctify[3] yourselves against to-morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: (for [m]ye have wept in the ears of the LORD, saying, Who shall give us flesh to eat? for [n]it was well with us in Egypt:) therefore the LORD will give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

19 Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20 But even a whole[4] month, until it come out at your nostrils, [o]and it be loathsome unto you: because that ye have [p]despised the LORD which is 12 Hasselquist says, the water-melon is cultivated on the banks of the Nile, in the rich clayey earth which subsides during the inundation. This serves the Egyptians for meat, drink, and physic. It is eaten in abundance during the season, even by the richer sort of people; but the common people scarcely eat anything else, and account this the best time of the year. This fruit likewise serves them for drink, the juice so refreshing these poor creatures that they have much less occasion for water than if they were to live on more substantial food in this burning climate.

s ch. 14. 1, 2; 16. 27; 21. 5; Ps. 106. 25.
1 The excessive longing of the Israelites may be somewhat illustrated by the fact narrated by De Vitriaco, that during the siege of Diametta in 1218, many of the Egyptians, though they had abundance of corn, pined away and died for want of the garlic, onions, fish, birds, fruits and herbs, to which they had been accustomed. We may here remark that the onions of Egypt are of a very superior kind and highly relished. Among the ancients garlic also was very much in request. If ever it was the case, as the Romans supposed, that the Egyptians worshipped their vegetable productions, it is probable that this superstition had not obtained so early as the time of Moses, and that they were then common articles of food, though perhaps not eaten by the priests.

among you, and have wept before him, saying, Why came we forth out of Egypt?

21 ¶ And Moses said,[1] The people, among whom I am, are [g]six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month.

22 Shall [r]the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, to suffice them?

23 And the LORD said unto Moses, Is[s] the LORD's hand waxed short?[2] [t]thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not.

24 ¶ And Moses went out, and told the people the words of the LORD, and gathered[u] the seventy[3] men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle.

25 And the LORD [v]came down in a cloud, and spake unto him, and [w]took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that, when the spirit rested upon them, [x]they prophesied, and did not cease.[4]

26 But there remained two of the men in the camp, the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of the other Medad: and the spirit rested upon them, (and they were of them that were written, but [y]went not out unto the tabernacle,) and they prophesied in the camp.

27 And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp.

28 And [z]Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered and said, [a]My lord Moses, forbid them.

29 And Moses said unto him, [b]Enviest thou for my sake? [c]Would[5] God that all the LORD's people were prophets, and [d]that the LORD would put his Spirit upon them!

30 And Moses gat him into the camp, he and the elders of Israel.

31 ¶ And there went forth [e]a wind from the LORD, [f]and brought quails from the sea, and let them fall by the camp, as it were a[6] day's journey on this side, and as it were a day's journey on the other side, round about the camp, and as it were two cubits[1] high upon the face of the earth.

32 And the people stood up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and they gathered the quails: he that gathered least gathered ten [g]homers;[2] and they spread them all abroad for themselves round about the camp.

33 And [h]while the flesh was yet between their teeth, ere it was chewed, the wrath of the LORD was kindled against the people; and the LORD [i]smote the people with a very great plague.

34 And he called the name of that place Kibroth-hattaavah:[3] because there they buried the people that lusted.

35 And the people [k]journeyed from Kibroth-hattaavah [l]unto Hazeroth; and abode[4] at Hazeroth.

CHAPTER XII.

God rebuketh the sedition of Miriam and Aaron, 1—9. Miriam's leprosy is healed at the prayer of Moses, 10—13. God commandeth her to be shut out of the camp seven days, 14—16.

AND [a]Miriam and Aaron spake against Moses because of the [5]Ethiopian[6] woman whom he had married: [7][b]for he had married an Ethiopian woman.

2 And they said, [c]Hath the LORD indeed spoken only by Moses? [d]hath he not spoken also by us? And [e]the LORD heard it.

3 (Now the man Moses was [f]very meek, [g]above all the men which were upon the face of the earth.)

4 And [h]the LORD spake suddenly unto Moses, and unto Aaron, and unto Miriam, [i]Come out ye three unto the tabernacle of the congregation. And they three came out.

5 And the LORD came down [k]in the pillar of the cloud, and stood in the door of the tabernacle, and called Aaron and Miriam: and they both came forth.

6 And he said, Hear now my words: If there be [l]a prophet among you, I the LORD will make myself known unto him [m]in a vision, and will speak unto him in [n]a dream.

7 My servant [o]Moses is not so, who is [p]faithful in all mine house.

1 Some have supposed that the words of Moses on this occasion are expressive of admiration and wonder, but they do seem to be indicative rather of temporary distrust, & accordingly the reply of Jehovah in the next verse seems intended to convey a reproof.

3 Some have supposed that this was the first institution of the sanhedrim to which we have so many references in the later periods of the Jewish history. The appointment, however, seems rather to have been of a temporary kind. We have no traces of the existence of such a body for many centuries after this period, as we certainly would have had, had so important a body existed. Patrick supposes that they were appointed to ease Moses by assisting him, with the same authority that he had, to hinder or to appease such mutinies as now the people were fallen into, and by aiding him in the judging of such causes as had hitherto been reserved to him alone; these seventy persons forming a higher court than any of those constituted by the advice of Jethro.

CHAPTER XIII.

The names of the men who were sent to search the land, 1—16. Their instructions, 17—20. Their acts, 21—25. Their relation, 26—33.

AND the LORD spake[6] unto Moses, saying,

2 [a]Send thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel: [b]of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one [c]a ruler among them.

3 And Moses, by the commandment of the LORD, sent them [d]from the wilderness of Paran: all those men were heads of the children of Israel.

4 And these were their names: Of the tribe of Reuben; Shammua the son of Zaccur.

5 Of the tribe of Simeon; Shaphat the son of Hori.

6 Of the tribe of Judah; [e]Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

7 Of the tribe of Issachar; Igal the son of Joseph.

8 Of the tribe of Ephraim; [f]Oshea the son of Nun.

9 Of the tribe of Benjamin; Palti the son of Raphu.

10 Of the tribe of Zebulun; Gaddiel the son of Sodi.

11 Of the tribe of Joseph, namely, of the tribe of Manasseh; Gaddi the son of Susi.

12 Of the tribe of Dan; Ammiel the son of Gemalli.

13 Of the tribe of Asher; Sethur the son of Michael.

14 Of the tribe of Naphtali; Nahbi the son of Vophsi.

15 Of the tribe of Gad; Geuel the son of Machi.

16 These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land. And Moses called [g]Oshea the son of Nun, [h]Jehoshua.[1]

17 ¶ And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way [i]southward, and go up into [k]the mountain;

18 And see [l]the land, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many;

21 ¶ So they went[3] up, and searched the land, [p]from the wilderness[4] of Zin unto [q]Rehob,[5] as men come to [r]Hamath.

22 And they ascended by the south, and came unto Hebron, where [s]Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmai, the children of Anak, were. (Now [t]Hebron was built seven years before [u]Zoan in Egypt.)

23 And they came unto the [6]brook of Eshcol, and cut down from thence a branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a

1 He was called by this name presently after they came out of Egypt, (Ex. 17. 9.) when he went out to fight with Amalek. Whom he having overcome, Moses looked upon it as a token that he should save and deliver the people of Israel; and then called him by this name. It imports something more than Oshea; for that denotes only a prayer for salvation, but this carries in it a promise of it. Some think the addition of the first letter in the name of Jehoshua, was from the name of Jehovah, implying that the Lord would employ him in leading and conducting his people into the land of promise. In this he was a type of the Saviour of the world, the LORD JESUS, whose name is the same as this. —Patrick.

4 The wilderness of Zin, and the wilderness of Sin, were different places; the latter being near Egypt, the former near Kadish-Barnea not far from the borders of Canaan. It appears to be the valley mentioned by Burckhardt, which, under the names of El Ghor and El Araba, forms a continuation of the valley of the Jordan, extending from the lake of Sodom to the eastern branch of the Red sea. It presents to the view the appearance of shifting sands, its surface being broken by innumerable undulations and low hills. It is without vegetation, with the exception of a few Talk, Tamarisk, and Rethem trees.

staff;[1] and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs.

24 The place was called the brook[2] Eschol,[3] because of the cluster of grapes which the children of Israel cut down from thence.

25 And they returned from searching of the land after [v]forty days.

26 ¶ And they went and came to Moses, and to Aaron, and to all the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the wilderness of Paran, to [w]Kadesh; and brought back word unto them, and unto all the congregation, and shewed them the fruit of the land.

27 And they told him, and said, We came unto the land whither thou sentest us, and surely [x]it floweth with milk and honey; and this is the fruit of it.

28 Nevertheless the people be strong[y] that dwell in the land, and the cities are walled, and very great:[4] and, moreover, we [z]saw the children of Anak there.

29 The [a]Amalekites dwell in the land of the south; and [b]the Hittites, and the Jebusites, and the Amorites, dwell in the mountains; and the Canaanites dwell by the sea, and by the coast of Jordan.

30 And [c]Caleb stilled the people before Moses, and said, Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.

31 But the men that went up with him said, [d]We be not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we.

32 And they [e]brought up an evil report of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land, through which we have gone to search it, is a [f]land that eateth[5] up the inhabitants thereof; and all the people that we saw in it are men[6] of a great stature.

33 And there we saw [g]the giants, the sons of Anak, which come of the giants: and [h]we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight.

CHAPTER XIV.

The people murmur at the news, 1—5. Joshua and Caleb labour to pacify them, 6—10. God threateneth them, 11, 12. Moses intercedeth with God, and obtaineth pardon, 13—25. The murmurers are deprived of entering into the land, 26—35. The men who raised the evil report concerning the land die by a plague, 36—39. The people that would invade the land against the will of God, are smitten, 40—45.

AND all the congregation [a]lifted up their voice, and cried; and the people wept[1] that night.

2 And all the children of Israel [b]murmured against Moses and against Aaron; and the whole congregation said unto them, [c]Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or, would God we had died in this wilderness!

3 And wherefore hath [d]the LORD brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that [e]our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt?

4 And they said one to another, [f]Let us make a captain,[2] and let us return into Egypt.

5 Then Moses and Aaron [g]fell on their faces before all the assembly of the congregation of the children of Israel.

6 ¶ And [h]Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of them that searched the land, rent[i] their clothes.

7 And they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, The land, which we passed through to search it, is [k]an exceeding good land.

8 If the LORD [l]delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us; a land which floweth[3] with milk and honey.

9 [m]Only rebel not ye against the LORD, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they [n]are bread for us: their defence[4] is departed from them, and [o]the LORD is with us; fear them not.

10 But [p]all the congregation bade stone them with stones. And [q]the glory[5] of the LORD appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel.

11 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [r]How long will this people [s]provoke me? and how long will it be ere they [t]believe me, for all the signs which I have shewed among them?

12 I will [u]smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them, and [v]will make of thee a greater nation and mightier than they.

1 The vines of Canaan are remarkable for the size of their grapes and clusters. It may not, however, have been the weight of the bunch which rendered it necessary that the spies should carry it on a staff between two. It was an obvious resource to prevent the grapes from being bruised.

4 The statement of these faithless spies was in the main correct. They had made an extensive and accurate observation of the country, having, as is generally supposed, for this purpose, and to avoid the notice of the inhabitants, divided themselves into parties of two and two. Their design, however, was obviously to impress the Israelites with the idea that the land could not be taken. They admit the land to be most productive. The specimen of the fruits which they had produced, and which perhaps Caleb and Joshua, who alone gave a report in all respects favourable, had brought—was itself a proof of this. But to their unbelieving minds the difficulties were insurmountable, and their report, while in the main correct, is so framed as to impress the people with the same faithless conviction.

5 This is evidently a proverbial expression, and the precise meaning of it cannot well be ascertained. It is generally understood as intimating that the land was unhealthy. Some of the Rabbins think that, at the time, there was a plague sent by the Lord to weaken the inhabitants of the land, but that the spies, instead of recognising the Divine intention, imputed it to the unwholesomeness of the country.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, Then[w] the Egyptians shall hear it, (for thou broughtest up this people in thy might from among them,)

14 And they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land: for [x]they have heard that thou, LORD, art among this people; that thou, LORD, [y]art seen face to face; and that [z]thy cloud standeth[1] over them; and that thou goest before them, by day-time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night.

15 Now, if thou shalt kill all this people [a]as one man, then the nations, which have heard the fame of thee, will speak, saying,

16 Because [b]the LORD was not able to bring this people into the land which he sware unto them, therefore he hath slain them in the wilderness.

17 And now, I beseech thee, let the power[2] of my LORD be great, according as thou hast spoken, saying,

18 The LORD is [c]long-suffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.

19 [d]Pardon, I beseech thee, the iniquity of this people, [e]according unto the greatness of thy mercy, [f]and as thou hast forgiven this people from Egypt even until[3] now.

20 And the LORD said, I have pardoned,[4] according to thy word:

21 But[5] [g]as truly as I live, [h]all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD.

22 Because all those men [i]which have seen my glory, and my miracles, which I did in Egypt, and in the wilderness, have [k]tempted me now these [l]ten[6] times, and have not hearkened to my voice;

23 Surely[7] [m]they shall not see the land which I sware unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it:

24 But [n]my servant Caleb, because he had another spirit with him, and hath [o]followed me fully, him will I bring into the land whereunto he went; and his seed shall possess it.

25 (Now[8] [p]the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwelt in the valley.) To-morrow [q]turn you, and get you into the wilderness, by the way of the Red sea.

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

27 [r]How long shall I bear with this evil congregation, which murmur against me? [s]I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel, which they murmur against me.

28 Say unto them, [t]As truly as I live, saith the LORD, [u]as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you:

29 Your [v]carcases shall fall in this wilderness; and [w]all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number,[1] from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me,

30 Doubtless ye shall not come into the land concerning which I sware[2] to make you dwell therein, [x]save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

31 But your [y]little ones, which [z]ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know [a]the land which ye have despised.

32 But as for you, [b]your carcases, they shall fall in this wilderness.

33 And your children [c]shall wander[3] in the wilderness [d]forty years, and [e]bear your whoredoms,[4] until your carcases be wasted in the wilderness.

34 [f]After [g]the number of the days in which ye searched the land, even forty days, (each day for a year,) [h]shall ye bear your iniquities, even [5]forty years; and [i]ye shall know my [6]breach of promise.

35 I the LORD have said, [k]I will surely do it unto all [l]this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me: in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.

36 ¶ And [m]the men which Moses sent to search the land, who returned, and made all the congregation to murmur against him, by bringing up a slander upon the land,

Their enemies were lying in wait for them in the valley at the other side of the hill, and therefore they are warned not to go forward, but to turn into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.

39 And Moses told these sayings unto all the children of Israel: and the people [p]mourned greatly.

40 ¶ And they [q]rose up early in the morning, and gat them up into the top of the mountain, saying, Lo, we be here, and will go up unto the place which the LORD hath promised: for we have sinned.[1]

41 And Moses said, Wherefore now do ye [r]transgress the commandment of the LORD? [s]but it shall not prosper.

42 [t]Go not up, for the LORD is not among you; that ye be not smitten before your enemies.

43 For [u]the Amalekites and the Canaanites are there before you, and ye shall fall by the sword: [v]because ye are turned away from the LORD, therefore the LORD will not be with you.

44 But [w]they presumed[2] to go up unto the hill-top: nevertheless [x]the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and Moses, departed not out of the camp.

45 Then [y]the Amalekites came down, and the Canaanites which dwelt in that hill, and smote them, and discomfited them, even unto [z]Hormah.

CHAPTER XV.

The law of the meat-offering and the drink-offering, 1—13. The stranger is under the same law, 14—16, 29. The law of the first of the dough for an heave-offering, 17—21. The sacrifice for sins of ignorance, 22—29. The punishment of presumption, 30, 31. He that violated the sabbath is stoned, 32—36. The law of fringes, 37—41.

AND the LORD spake[3] unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [a]When ye be come into the land of your habitations, which I give unto you,

3 And [b]will make an offering by fire unto the LORD, [c]a burnt-offering, or [d]a sacrifice in performing[4] a vow, [e]or in a free-will-offering, or [f]in your solemn feasts, to make [g]a sweet savour unto the LORD, of the herd, or of the flock;

4 Then shall he that offereth his offering unto the LORD bring [h]a meat-offering[5] of a tenth-deal of flour, mingled with [i]the fourth part of an hin of oil.

5 And [k]the fourth part of an hin of [l]wine for a drink-offering shalt thou prepare with the burnt-offering or sacrifice, for one lamb.

6 Or [m]for a ram, thou shalt prepare for a meat-offering two tenth-deals of flour, mingled with the third part of an hin of oil.

7 And for a drink-offering thou shalt offer the third part of an hin of wine, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

8 And when thou preparest a bullock for a burnt-offering, or for a sacrifice in performing a vow, or [n]peace-offerings unto the LORD;

9 Then shall he bring with a bullock [o]a meat-offering of three tenth-deals of flour, mingled with half an hin of oil.

10 And thou shalt bring for [p]a drink-offering half an hin of wine, for an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

11 Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid.

12 According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one, according to their number.

13 All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner,[1] in offering an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if a stranger sojourn with you, or whosoever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do.

15 [q]One[2] ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, [r]an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD.

16 One[3] law, and one manner, shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [s]When ye come into the land whither I bring you;

19 Then it shall be, that, [t]when ye eat of the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave-offering unto the LORD.

20 Ye shall offer up [u]a cake[4] of the 3 We need not suppose that the following commands were given to Moses immediately after the circumstances recorded in the preceding chapter. We are elsewhere told that the people abode in Kadesh many days, and during this period, these orders respecting their sacrifices and offerings, after they should reach the land of Canaan, may have been made known.

5 Here is stated the quantity of those meat-offerings & drink-offerings which necessarily attended other offerings; but not the quantity of such as were offered by themselves, ch. xxviii. xxix.; Le. i-vi. The practice of accompanying their sacrifices with a meat-offering & a drink-offering, was imitated by the heathen. Pliny says that without this addition of a meat-offering, no sacrifice was considered complete; and, in the poets we meet with frequent allusions to the custom of pouring out wine upon the victim.

1 The sacrifices not only typified Christ, with all fullness of spiritual blessings in him for our use, all which is well pleasing & honourable to the Father; but they likewise shadowed forth the pleasure which a reconciled God takes in the services of his redeemed people, & the delight which they take in communion with him. This is represented in the notion of their feasting together; and therefore all those things were directed to be brought which were of general use in feasts; and in due proportions, according to the kind or number of the sacrifices.—Scott.

2 From the Jewish people being surrounded by idolatrous nations, it was necessary to have but one form of worship; and as that only which was prescribed by the Almighty was genuine, no other could be tolerated. It might also signify that in due time the Gentiles would be fully admitted into the church.
r ch. 10. 8; 18. 8; Ex. 12. 14, 24, 43; 1 Sa. 30. 25.
3 This general command seems to have been given for the merciful purpose of encouraging strangers to become proselytes to the true religion, and to induce the Jews to treat them with kindness. The Jews say that the laws of Moses respecting duties to God, and to one another, belonged to proselytes as much as to Jews, by birth; but that, in those respecting marriage and public offices, they had not an equal privilege. No proselyte, they say, could be elected a member of the sanhedrim or great council at Jerusalem, nor indeed could have any sort of command, either civil or military. Tho' they might marry with the Jews, yet not with the priests; and some marriages, forbidden to the Jews, were permitted to them.

4 The oblation before prescribed, seems to have been a general acknowledgment from the people at large; but this was an oblation from everyone that reaped a harvest; who was required, previously to tasting it himself, to offer a portion of dough as a heave-offering to the Lord. This is supposed to have been given to the priests in their cities.

first of your dough for an heave-offering: as ye do [v]the heave-offering of the thrashing-floor, so shall ye heave it.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD [w]an heave-offering in your generations.

22 ¶ And [x]if ye have erred, and not observed all these commandments which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses,

23 Even all that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward among your generations;

24 Then it shall be, [y]if ought be committed by ignorance, without the knowledge[1] of the congregation, that all the congregation shall offer [z]one young bullock for a burnt-offering, for a sweet savour unto the LORD, with his meat-offering, and his drink-offering, according to the manner,[2] and [a]one kid of the goats for a sin-offering.

25 And [b]the priest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven[c] them; for it is ignorance: and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and their sin-offering before the LORD, for their ignorance:

26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them; seeing[3] all the people were in ignorance.

27 ¶ And if [d]any soul sin through ignorance, then he shall bring a she-goat of the first year for a sin-offering.

28 And [e]the priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him; and it shall be forgiven him.

31 Because he hath [i]despised the word of the LORD, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off: [k]his iniquity shall be upon him.

32 ¶ And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man [l]that gathered sticks upon the sabbath-day.[1]

33 And they that found him gathering sticks [m]brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation.

34 And they [n]put him in ward, because it was not declared[2] what should be done to him.

36 And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died; as the LORD commanded Moses.

37 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

38 Speak unto the children of Israel, and bid them that they make them [q]fringes[3] in the borders of their garments, throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue:

39 And it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and [r]remember all the commandments of the LORD, and do them; and that [s]ye seek not after your own heart, and your own eyes, after which ye use to [t]go a whoring

CHAPTER XVI.

The rebellion of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, 1—22. Moses separateth the people from the rebels' tents, 23—30. The earth swalloweth up Korah, and a fire consumeth others, 31—35. The censers are reserved to holy use, 36—40. Fourteen thousand and seven hundred are slain by a plague for murmuring against Moses and Aaron, 41—45. Aaron by incense stayeth the plague, 46—50.

1 Heb. from the eyes. This law is different from that in Le. iv. & of course has occasioned considerable difficulty. Some explain that law as relating to sins of commission, this to sins of omission. Some explain the one of inadvertent violations of the moral law, and the other of the transgressions of the ceremonial law. Some think that related to the whole nation, this to any one tribe, or that to the bulk of the nation, this to the rulers and elders. The Jews say that the former referred to such national transgressions as consisted with the maintenance of the prescribed worship in the main; but this, to the case of the nation, when, thro' inattention, or the example of wicked rulers, they had turned aside, and committed idolatry, yet thro' a culpable ignorance, and not in presumption. This view seems to receive some confirmation from the fact, that when Hezekiah restored the true worship of God, after the temple had been shut up, and the daily sacrifice omitted, and many idolatrous rites used there, by the ignorance of the people in the days of his father, the offering which he made was just of the kind here prescribed, though the number of victims was greater than this law enjoined. He offered seven bullocks for a burnt-offering, and seven goats for a sin-offering, 2 Ch. 29. 21, &c.

4 Heb. with an high hand. It is of importance to understand what kind of sins is here referred to. Michaelis is of opinion that the expression does not apply to the wilful violation of every Mosaic commandment, but only of the ceremonial as distinguished from the criminal law, to public transgressions committed in defiance of law. Maimonides observes that it imports a sin, not only publicly committed, but with pride & insolence; it proceeding from an express intention of contradicting the law of God. For such daring offenders no sacrifice was appointed.

1 This example was evidently intended to illustrate the foregoing law. The man despised the word of the Lord, presumptuously broke his commandment, & on this ground was punished with death. As Aben-Ezra remarks, the man who did work on the Sabbath denied the work of creation; for the Sabbath being a sign (as God calls it) that they were the worshippers of him who made all things, the contempt of that was a renouncing of their religion. Presumptuous violation of this law was, in effect, a denying and despising of Jehovah.
m John 8. 3, &c.
n Le. 24. 12.
2 It had been distinctly declared, as in Ex. 31. 14, that the breaker of the Sabbath should be put to death; but it had not been declared in what manner the punishment should be inflicted, and this perhaps may have been the reason of delay. Possibly, however, the doubtful point may have been, under which of the two kinds of sin just mentioned, this man's crime should be classed; whether, in gathering sticks on the Sabbath, he had sinned through ignorance, or with a high hand, presumptuously.

3 The nature of these fringes is not well ascertained. Those in use among the modern Jews are strings with tassels at the ends, fastened to the four corners of the upper garment. They were designed originally as a badge of distinction to the peculiar people, & the sight of which might constantly remind them of their obligations as the worshippers of Jehovah. At a future period those among them who pretended to greater sanctity than others enlarged these fringes, to such a length that they swept the ground. They became at once the trappings of hypocrisy and the instruments of superstition.

Eliab; and On, the son of Peloth, [b]sons of Reuben, took men;[1]

2 And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, [c]famous in the congregation, men of renown:

3 And they [d]gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron, and said unto them, Ye[2] take too much[3] upon you, seeing [e]all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and [f]the LORD is among them: wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the LORD?

4 And when Moses heard it, [g]he fell upon his face:

5 And he spake unto Korah, and unto all his company, saying, Even tomorrow [h]the LORD will shew who are his, and [i]who is holy; and [k]will cause him to come near unto him: [l]even him whom he hath chosen will he cause to come near unto him.

6 This do: [m]Take you censers, Korah, and all his company;

7 And put fire therein, and put incense in them before the LORD to-morrow: and it shall be, [n]that the man whom the LORD doth choose, he shall be holy: ye take [o]too much upon you, ye sons of Levi.

8 And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi;

9 Seemeth it but [p]a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath [q]separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself, to do the service of the tabernacle of the LORD, and to stand before the congregation, to minister unto them?

10 And he hath brought thee near to him, and all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee: [r]and seek ye the priesthood also?

11 For which cause, both thou and all thy company are gathered together against [s]the LORD: and [t]what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?

12 ¶ And Moses sent to call Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab; [u]which said, We will not come up:

13 Is it [v]a small thing that thou hast brought us up [w]out of a land[4] that floweth with milk and honey, [x]to kill us in the wilderness, except [y]thou make thyself altogether a prince over us?

14 Moreover, [z]thou hast not brought us into a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance[1] of fields and vineyards: wilt thou put[2] out the eyes of these men? we will not come up.

15 And Moses was [a]very wroth, and said unto the LORD, [b]Respect[3] not thou their offering: [c]I have not [4]taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them.

16 ¶ And Moses said unto Korah, [d]Be thou and all thy company [e]before the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, tomorrow:

17 And take every man his [5]censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censer.

18 And they took every man his censer, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron.

19 And [f]Korah gathered all the congregation against them unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and [g]the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the congregation.

20 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

21 [h]Separate yourselves from among this congregation, [i]that I may consume them in a moment.

22 And [k]they fell upon their faces, and said, O God, [l]the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall [m]one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, [n]Get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

25 And Moses rose up, and went unto Dathan and Abiram; and [o]the elders of Israel followed him.

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, [p]Depart,[6] I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men,

1 The word men, not being in the original, there has been some difference of opinion with regard to the word that should be used as the supplement. According to Dr Adam Clarke, the verse should be translated, 'Now Korah, son of Izhar, son of Kohath, son of Levi, he took even Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, and On, son of Peleth, son of Reuben, and they rose up.' &c.

3 It seems probable that the conspirators intended to assail both the priesthood and the civil authority. Korah headed the conspiracy, and jealousy of Aaron and of his family seems to have rankled in his bosom, and excited him to his wicked and presumptuous attempt. He was the near kinsman of Moses and Aaron, and could not brook his inferiority as only a Levite, while the priesthood was conferred on Aaron and his sons. Dathan & Abiram were sons of Reuben, Jacob's first born, & were probably dissatisfied because the privileges of the first born were not conferred on their tribe.

5 The former challenge was now again repeated; but Aaron and Korah were directed to appear together on this occasion, as the competitors for the priesthood, between whom the Lord was about to decide. It is certain that the company met in the court of the tabernacle, and not in the sanctuary; and that Aaron in this critical emergency was required to burn incense in the court, though it was not exactly regular; for the sanctuary could not have contained so large a company, without great inconvenience; and the people would not, in that case, have witnessed the event, as they evidently did.—Scott.

6 The rebels, with all that belonged to them, were as an accursed thing, devoted to utter destruction; the people, therefore, were forbidden to touch any thing belonging to them, that they might enter a solemn protest against their wickedness, acknowledge the justice of their punishment, and express their fear of being involved in it.

and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle[1] of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side: and Dathan and Abiram came out, and [q]stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

28 And Moses said, [r]Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do all these works; (for I have not done them [s]of mine own mind;)[2]

29 If these men die the[3] common death of all men, or if they be [t]visited after the visitation of all men, then the[u] LORD hath not sent me.

30 But if the LORD make[4] [v]a new thing, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and [w]they go down quick into the pit; then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the LORD.

31 ¶ And it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that [x]the ground clave[5] asunder that was under them:

32 And [y]the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses, and [z]all the men that appertained[6] unto Korah, and all their goods.

33 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive [a]into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they[b] perished from among the congregation.

34 And all Israel that were round about them [c]fled at the cry of them: for they said, [d]Lest the earth swallow us up also.

35 And there [e]came out a fire from the LORD, and consumed[7] the [f]two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.

36 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up [g]the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for they are [h]hallowed.[8]

38 The censers of these [i]sinners against their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar; for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: and they shall be [k]a sign[1] unto the children of Israel.

39 And Eleazar the priest took the brazen censers, wherewith they that were burnt had offered, and they were made broad plates for a covering of the altar;

41 ¶ But on the morrow [n]all the congregation of the children of Israel murmured[2] against Moses and against Aaron, saying, [o]Ye have killed the people of the LORD.

42 And it came to pass, [p]when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the tabernacle of the congregation; and, behold, the cloud[3] covered it, and [q]the glory of the LORD appeared.

43 And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation.

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 [r]Get you up from among this congregation, that I may consume them as in a moment. [s]And they fell upon their faces.

46 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censer,[4] and put fire therein [t]from off the altar, [u]and put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make [v]an atonement for them: for [w]there is wrath gone out from the LORD; the plague is begun.

47 And Aaron took as Moses commanded, [x]and ran into the midst of the congregation; and, behold, the plague was begun among the people: [y]and he put on incense, and made an atonement for the people.

48 And [z]he stood between[5] the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed.

49 Now they that died in the plague were [a]fourteen thousand and seven hundred, besides them that died about the matter of Korah.

1 Perhaps these three men had erected one spacious tent as a general rendezvous of the party. The Editor of the Pict. Bible supposes that Moses here merely uses the names of the leaders to describe the rebellious party; but that Korah's tent remained in the Kohathite camp, and that he was himself afterward destroyed with those that offered incense.

Perhaps they had not joined in his rebellion, or had yielded to the exhortation of Moses. We have their genealogy reckoned in 1 Ch. 6.22,&c. Of them came Samuel the prophet.

2 The infatuation & waywardness of this generation of the Israelites are astonishing. Some have supposed that they imagined Moses and Aaron to have used some secret arts for the destruction of the rebels, and they speak of them as the people of the Lord, as if their death had not been a judgment from God. It is more probable,however, that the ground of their charge was a belief that Moses and Aaron might, by their prayers, have prevented their awful punishment.

4 Atonement was usually made by the blood of a sacrifice, but on this occasion, there was no time for the offering of a victim. The plague was already raging and spreading with fearful velocity. On ordinary occasions too, incense was to be offered only at the golden altar within the holy place, but on this most urgent occasion, an extraordinary remedy is provided. Aaron is sent into the camp that all may behold his power with God.

CHAPTER XVII.

Aaron's rod among all the rods of the tribes only flourisheth, 1—9. It is left for a monument against the rebels, 10—13.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod, according to the house of their fathers, of [a]all their princes, according to the house of their fathers, twelve [b]rods: write thou every man's name upon his rod.

3 And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod shall be for [c]the head of the house of their fathers.

4 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation, [d]before the testimony,[1] where I will meet with you.

5 And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod, [e]whom I shall choose,[2] shall blossom; [f] and [g]I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, whereby [h]they murmur against you.

6 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, and every one of their princes gave him a[3] rod apiece, for each prince one, according to their fathers' houses, even twelve rods: and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.

7 And Moses laid up the rods before the LORD in [i]the tabernacle of witness.

8 And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness; and, behold, the rod of Aaron, for the house of Levi, was [k]budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds.[4]

9 And Moses brought out all the rods from before the LORD unto all the children of Israel: and they looked, and took every man his rod.

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Bring[l] Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept [m]for a token against the rebels;[5] and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not.

11 And Moses did so: as the LORD commanded him, so did he.

1 The rods were to be laid up before the ark of the testimony, so called because in it the testimony, or two tables of stone, were deposited. Laying them there was laying them before the Lord, for there his glory resided. This was within the tabernacle of the congregation, or meeting together; which was so named, not because there the people met together, but because there God met with the people.

[e] ch. 16. 5.

2 God had already given most striking evidence of the fact that he had chosen Aaron to the priesthood; but as the matter was one of great importance, and as the rebellious spirit excited by Korah and his company was not yet altogether repressed, he was pleased, in a most miraculous manner, again to indicate his selection, permitting the representatives of the other tribes to become candidates, as it were, for the honour, while he declared, by an unambiguous token, whom he had chosen for himself.

4 It is probable that all the staves on this occasion were made out of the common almond tree, Ec. 12. 5; Je. 1. 11. This extraordinary miracle must have removed any doubt of the divine appointment of Aaron from the minds of the envious chiefs. A sceptre or staff of office, resuming its vegetative life, was considered an absolute impossibility among the ancients; and, as they were accustomed to swear by their sceptres, this circumstance was added to confirm the oath. The miracle was a very striking one. In one part of the rod, it would seem, were buds just swelling out, in another full blown flowers, and in others ripe fruit. It, if possible, enhanced the miracle, that this was not the season of spring, and that three successive crops were found at once on the withered rod.

2 To counterbalance the high honour conferred on Aaron and his family, and to allay the fears and abate the envy of the people, it is here declared that they were to be answerable for whatever was done about the sanctuary. An increase of honour or of privilege is ever accompanied by an increase of responsibility. The people trembled lest they should die for every error in their approaches to the sanctuary; but now it is announced that God would hold the priests and Levites responsible, and not the people.

3 There is here in the original a beautiful Paronomasia. Levi is derived from a word which signifies to join, couple, associate, hence Moses says the Levites shall be joined or associated with the priests, they shall conjointly perform the sacred office, but the priests shall be principal, the Levites their associates or assistants.

The charge of the priests and Levites, 1—7. The priest's portion, 8—20. The Levites' portion, 21—24. The heave-offering to the priest out of the Levites' portion, 25—32.

AND the LORD said unto Aaron, [a]Thou, and thy sons, and thy father's house with thee, shall [b]bear[2] the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood.

2 And thy brethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be [c]joined[3] unto thee, and [d]minister unto thee: [e]but thou and thy sons with thee shall minister before the tabernacle of witness.

3 And they shall keep thy charge, and the charge of all the tabernacle: [f]only they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, that [g]neither they, nor ye also, die.

4 And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle: and [h]a stranger shall not come nigh unto you.

5 And [i]ye shall keep the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar; that there be [k]no wrath[4] any more upon the children of Israel.

6 And [l]I, behold, [m]I have taken your brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel: to you they are [n]given as a gift for the LORD, to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

7 Therefore thou and thy sons with thee shall keep your priest's office for every thing of the altar, and [o]within the vail; and ye shall serve: I have given your priest's office unto you [p]as a service of gift: and [q]the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Behold, I also have given thee [r]the charge of mine heave-offerings of all the hallowed things of the children of Israel; unto thee have I given them, by[s] reason of the anointing,[1] and to thy sons, by an ordinance for ever.

9 This shall be thine[2] of the most holy things, reserved from the fire: every oblation of theirs, [t]every meat-offering of theirs, and [u]every sin-offering of theirs, and [v]every trespass-offering of theirs, which they shall render unto me, shall be most holy for thee, and for thy sons.[3]

10 In [w]the most holy[4] place shalt thou eat it; [x]every male shall eat it: it shall be holy unto thee.

11 And this is thine; [y]the heave-offering of their gift, with all the wave-offerings of the children of Israel: I have given them [z]unto thee, and to thy sons and to thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever; [a]every one that is clean in thy house shall eat of it.

12 All the best[5] of the oil, and all the best of the wine, and of the wheat, the[b] first-fruits of them, which they shall offer unto the LORD, them have I given thee.

13 And [c]whatsoever is first ripe in the land, which they shall bring unto the LORD, shall be thine: every one that is clean in thine house shall eat of it.

14 Every thing [d]devoted[6] in Israel shall be thine.

15 Every thing that [e]openeth the matrix in all flesh, which they bring unto the LORD, whether it be of men or beasts, shall be thine: nevertheless the[f] first-born of man shalt thou surely redeem, and the firstling of unclean beasts shalt thou redeem.[7]

16 And those that are to be redeemed, from a month old shalt thou redeem, [g]according to thine estimation,[8] for the money of five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, [h]which is twenty gerahs.

17 But [i]the firstling of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem; they are holy: [k]thou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shalt burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

18 And the flesh of them shall be thine, [l]as the wave-breast and as the right shoulder are thine.

19 All [m]the heave-offerings of the holy things, which the children of Israel offer unto the LORD, have I given thee, and thy sons and thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: it is [n]a covenant of salt[1] for ever before the LORD unto thee, and to thy seed with thee.

20 And the LORD spake unto Aaron, [o]Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them: I [p]am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel.

21 ¶ And, behold, I have given the children of Levi all [q]the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, [r]even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 Neither must the children of Israel henceforth [s]come nigh the tabernacle of the congregation, lest they [t]bear sin, and[2] die.

23 But the Levites shall [u]do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity. It shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, that [v]among the children of Israel they have no inheritance.

24 But [w]the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer as an heave-offering unto the LORD, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes, which I have given you from them for your inheritance, [x]then ye shall offer up an heave-offering of it for the LORD, even [y]a tenth part of the tithe.[3]

27 And this your heave-offering shall be reckoned[4] unto you, [z]as though it were [a]the corn of the thrashing-floor, and as the fullness of the wine-press.

28 Thus ye also shall offer an heave-offering unto the LORD, of all your tithes which ye receive of the children of Israel; [b]and ye shall give thereof the LORD's heave-offering to Aaron[5] the priest.

1 A perpetual covenant, Le. 2. 13; 2 Ch. 13. 5. As salt was added to different kinds of viands, not only to give them a relish, but to preserve them from putrefaction, it became the emblem of incorruptibility and permanence. Among the Asiatics, eating salt together was deemed a bond of perpetual friendship; and as salt was a common article in all their repasts, it may be in reference to this circumstance that a perpetual covenant is termed a covenant of salt, because the parties ate together of the sacrifice offered on the occasion, and the whole transaction was considered as a league of endless friendship. It is well known that among the Desert Arabs and other uncivilized people, a covenant thus ratified is rendered, by usage and the feeling of honour, far more inviolable than even those engagements to which they have been solemnly sworn; and to such an extent does this feeling operate, that the unintentional eating with, or what belongs to, a person against whom hostile designs were entertained, is quite sufficient not only to secure him from offensive measures, but to ensure him protection from those who otherwise would have plundered or slain him.

2 This is [a]the ordinance of the law which the LORD hath commanded, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee [b]a red[5] heifer without spot, wherein is [c]no blemish, and [d]upon which never came yoke.[6]

3 And ye shall give her unto Eleazar[7] the priest, that he may bring her forth [e]without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face.

4 And Eleazar the priest shall take of her blood with his finger, and [f]sprinkle of her blood directly[8] before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times.

5 And one shall burn the heifer in his sight; [g]her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn.

6 And the priest shall take [h]cedar-wood, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer.

7 Then the priest shall [i]wash his clothes, and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even.

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even.

8 The blood was to be sprinkled directly towards the sanctuary, and without this, as the Jews remark, it was in vain. On this point they were so particular, deeming it essential that the priest, when sprinkling the blood, should look stedfastly towards the sanctuary, that, after the temple was built, they took care that the gate Shushan, which was before the porch of the temple, should have lower battlements than the others, in order that the officiating priest might see the porch of the house of God.

2 It is not difficult to discover reasons for these very minute and careful regulations, although it would be perhaps rather hazardous to say which or how many of these reasons actually operated. In the first place, they would tend to lessen the spread of any infectious disease of which the person might have died. To prevent such danger, few things could be more effectual than to make the person who touched a dead body, or even entered the tent or apartment in which it lay, subject to the inconvenience of being declared unclean. It is true that, in ordinary circumstances, few persons die of disorders which render such precautions necessary; but, as Michaelis well remarks, 'that legislator is surest of attaining his object whose prohibitions are extended rather beyond what necessity absolutely requires, and who avoids making too many exceptions.' If he confined the prohibition merely to infectious disorders, the law would be inoperative, as people would then dispute the infectious character of the disease. The laws on this point would also necessarily have the effect of obliging the people to inter their dead speedily. The Hebrew law, by the simple principle of assigning a defiling quality to a dead body, effected many important objects, without detailed legislation, at some of which modern civilization is only beginning to arrive. — See Pict. Bible. We may add, that by all these regulations, God did doubtless intend to impress the people with a full conviction of the necessity of inward purity.

4 And [h]why have ye brought up the congregation of the LORD into this wilderness, [i]that we and our cattle should die there?

5 And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto [k]this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink.

1 Literally, 'water of impurity.' Because it cleansed those that were impure it was considered as itself contracting impurity. All the great sacrifices which were offered for sin, though they purified those for whom they were made, became themselves impure. The sins of those that offered them were laid upon them. In all this they were typical of Him who was made sin for us, though he knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God by him. We may remark that a very small portion of the ashes of the heifer seem to have been considered sufficient to render efficacious a large quantity of water. Maimonides has preserved a curious tradition on this point, to the effect that only nine red heifers had been sacrificed from the time of the first delivering of the commands, and that Messiah himself was to offer the tenth.

2 Of the fortieth year, ver. 23; ch. 33. 38. Moses passes over the transactions of thirty-seven years, because he wrote not as an historian, but as a legislator, and gives us particularly an account of the laws, ordinances, and other occurrences, of the first and last years of their wanderings. By this time all those had died who, at the time of the exodus, were above twenty years of age.

1 Probably the same rod with which Moses had wro't so many miracles in Egypt and at the Red sea, &c.; and which is emphatically called, 'the rod of God.' In the 9th verse he is said to take it from before the Lord; and it is probable that it had, at God's command, been laid up in the sanctuary for a testimony of his power, love, and tender mercy even to the rebellious.

2 For his conduct on this occasion Moses was severely censured by the Lord, and not permitted to enter into the land of promise. In what his error consisted we are not distinctly informed. Clarke enumerates the following as blame-worthy points. 1. He smote the rock, though only commanded to speak to it. 2. He did this twice which indicated want of attention to the presence of God. 3. As the Psalmist mentions, he spake unadvisedly with his lips, ver. 10. 4. He did not acknowledge God in the miracle about to be wrought, 'must we fetch you water, &c.?' Jewish commentators point out many other faults, but these we deem it unnecessary to specify.

and [m]the glory of the LORD appeared unto them.

7 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

8 Take [n]the rod,[1] and gather thou the assembly together, thou and Aaron thy brother, and [o]speak ye unto the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and thou shalt [p]bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

9 And Moses took the rod from [q]before the LORD, as he commanded him.

10 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock, and he said unto them, Hear now, [r]ye rebels; must [s]we fetch you water out of this rock?

11 And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod he [t]smote[2] the rock twice; and [u]the water came out abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye [v]believed me not, [w]to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore [x]ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

13 This is [y]the water of [3]Meribah; because the children of Israel strove with the LORD, and [z]he was sanctified in them.

14 ¶ And [a]Moses sent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, Thus saith [b]thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travail that hath[4] befallen us:

15 How [c]our fathers went down into Egypt, and we have [d]dwelt in Egypt a long time; and the Egyptians [e]vexed us and our fathers:

16 And when [f]we cried unto the LORD, he heard our voice, and [g]sent an angel,[5] and hath brought us forth out of Egypt; and, behold, we are in Kadesh, a city in the uttermost of thy border.

17 Let us pass, I pray thee, [h]through thy country: we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells: we will go by the king's high-way, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders.

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword.

19 And the children of Israel said unto him, [i]We will go by the high-way; and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, then I will pay[1] for it: I will only (without doing any thing else) go through on my feet.

20 And he said, [k]Thou shalt not go through. And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand.

21 Thus Edom refused[2] to give Israel passage through his border: [l]wherefore Israel turned away from him.

22 ¶ And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from Kadesh,[m] and came unto [n]mount Hor.[3]

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying,

24 Aaron shall be [o]gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, [p]because ye rebelled against my word[4] at the water of Meribah.

25 [q]Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor;

26 And [r]strip Aaron of his garments,[5] and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there.

27 And Moses did as the LORD commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation.

28 And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and [s]put them upon Eleazar his son; and Aaron [t]died[6] there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount.

29 And when all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead, they [u]mourned for Aaron thirty[7] days, even all the house of Israel.

AND when [a]king Arad[8] the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, heard tell that Israel came by [b]the way of the spies,[1] [c]then he fought against Israel, and took some of them prisoners.

2 And Israel [d]vowed[2] a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, then [e]I will utterly destroy their cities.

3 And the LORD [f]hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: and he called [g]the name of the place Hormah.[3]

4 ¶ And they journeyed from [h]mount Hor [i]by the way of the Red sea, to [k]compass the land of Edom: and [l]the soul of the people was much discouraged[4] because of the way.

5 And the people [m]spake against God, and against Moses, Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water; [n]and our soul loatheth this light[5] bread.

6 And the LORD sent [o]fiery[6] serpents among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died.

7 ¶ Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, [p]We have sinned; for we have spoken against the LORD, and against thee: [q]pray unto the LORD, that he take away the serpents from us. [r]And Moses prayed for the people.

8 And [s]the LORD said unto Moses, Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.

9 And Moses made [t]a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole; and it came to pass, that if a serpent had bitten any man, [u]when he beheld the serpent of brass, [v]he lived.

10 ¶ And the children of Israel [w]set forward, and pitched in Oboth.

11 And they journeyed from Oboth, and pitched at Ije-abarim,[7] in the wilderness which is before Moab, toward the sun-rising.

12 ¶ From thence they removed, and pitched in [x]the valley of Zared.

13 From thence they removed, and pitched [y]on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coasts of the Amorites: for

3 This mountain, or at least the one to which tradition assigns the tomb of Aaron, was visited by Burckhardt: from whose account it appears to form a conspicuous object in the chain of the Djebel Shera, or mount Seir, rising abruptly from the valley el Araba, or desert of Zin, about 50 miles north of Akaba or Ezion-geber. The tomb of Aaron, as described by Mr Legh, consists of a small white building, crowned by a cupola; within which is a descent of several steps into a chamber hewn out of the rock, but containing nothing extraordinary. The summit of the mountain is an extremely compact quartzose sand-stone, very heavy, from a great impregnation of iron.

5 Aaron was probably attired in his pontifical robes when, at the command of God, he ascended mount Hor to die. The stripping him of these, and putting them upon his son, was equivalent to the investing of Eleazar with the office of high priest. Immediately thereafter Aaron died, having had the satisfaction of seeing his own son fully constituted his successor.

6 It is uncertain whether these serpents were so called from the circumstance of their fiery appearance, or from the fact that their bites occasioned a burning, excruciating pain. The latter is the more general opinion. To this day serpents & scorpions abound in these regions, the bite of which produces an excessive, burning pain. We read not that at any other time the Israelites were exposed to such attacks. On this occasion, it is probable, the serpents were collected in extraordinary numbers, and at other times, we may believe, the people were shielded from such enemies by the protecting cloud.

Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites.

14 Wherefore it is said [z]in the book[1] of the wars of the LORD, What[2] he did in the Red sea, and in the brooks of Arnon,

15 And at the stream[3] of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of [a]Ar, and lieth[4] upon the border of Moab.

16 And from thence they went to Beer: [b] that is the well whereof the LORD spake unto Moses, [c]Gather the people together, and I will give them water.

17 ¶ Then Israel [d]sang this song,[5] Spring[6] up, O well; sing[7] ye unto it:

18 The [e]princes digged the well, the nobles of the people digged it, by the direction of [f]the law-giver, with their staves. [g]And from the wilderness they went to Mattanah;

19 And from Mattanah to Nahaliel; and from Nahaliel to Bamoth;

20 And from Bamoth in the valley, that is in the country[8] of Moab, [h]to the top[9] of Pisgah,[10] which looketh toward Jeshimon.[11]

21 ¶ And Israel [i]sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying,

22 Let me pass through thy land: we will not turn into the fields, or into the vineyards; we will not drink of the waters of the well; but we will go along by the king's high-way, until we be past thy borders.

23 And [k]Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border; but Sihon gathered all his people together, and went out against Israel into the wilderness: and he came to [l]Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

24 And [m]Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land[12] from [n]Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon: for the border of the children of Ammon was strong.

25 And Israel took all these cities: and Israel [o]dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, [p]in Heshbon, and in all the villages[13] thereof.

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon.

27 Wherefore [q]they that speak in proverbs[1] say, Come into Heshbon, let the city of Sihon be built and prepared:

28 For there is [r]a fire gone out of Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon: it hath consumed [s]Ar of Moab, and the lords of the high places of Arnon.

29 Woe to thee, Moab! thou art undone, [t]O people of Chemosh![2] he hath given his sons that escaped, and his daughters, into captivity, unto Sihon king of the Amorites.

30 We [u]have shot at them: Heshbon[3] is perished even unto [v]Dibon,[4] and we have laid them waste even unto Nophah, which reacheth unto Medeba.[5]

31 ¶ Thus [w]Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites.

32 And Moses sent to spy out [x]Jaazer, and they took the villages thereof, and drove out the Amorites that were there.

33 ¶ And [y]they turned, and went up by the way of [z]Bashan:[6] and [a]Og the king of Bashan went out against them, he, and all his people, to the battle at Edrei.

34 And the LORD said unto Moses, [b]Fear him not: [c]for I have [7]delivered him into thy hand, and all his people, and his land; and thou shalt do to him [d]as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

35 So they [e]smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

CHAPTER XXII.

Balak's first message for Balaam is refused, 2—14. His second message obtaineth him, 15—21. An angel would have slain him, if his ass had not saved him, 22—35. Balak entertaineth him, 36—41.

AND [a]the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in the plains of Moab, [b]on this side Jordan by [8]Jericho.

2 ¶ And [c]Balak the son of Zippor saw all that Israel had done to the Amorites.

3 And [d]Moab was sore afraid[9] of the people, because they were many; and Moab was distressed because of the children of Israel.

5 After passing through a most dreary wilderness, in which there was no water, no wonder, says Boothroyd, that they sang and shouted for joy, on the first appearance of such copious sources of it. The Arnon, swelled by a tempest, had diffused its streams to a great extent; and these subsiding in the adjacent soil afforded wells so near the surface of the earth, that the people could dig them with their staves. Are we not by this reminded of the condition of the heavenly pilgrim, when after a season of doubts and darkness, and spiritual disquietude, his soul thirsting after the living God, he is again enabled with joy to draw water from the wells of salvation?

4 And Moab said unto the [e]elders of Midian, [f]Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And [g]Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

5 He [h]sent messengers therefore unto Balaam[1] the son of Beor, to [i]Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people,[2] to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt: behold, [k]they cover the face[3] of the earth, and they abide over against me.

6 Come now therefore, I pray thee, curse[l][4] me this people; for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for [m]I wot that he whom thou blessest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.

7 And the elders of Moab and the elders of Midian departed with the rewards[n] of divination in their hand; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

8 And he said unto them, Lodge here [o]this night, and I will bring you word again, as the LORD shall speak unto me. And the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

9 And [p]God came unto Balaam, and said, [q]What men are these with thee?

10 And Balaam said unto God, Balak[r] the son of Zippor, king of Moab, hath sent unto me, saying,

11 Behold, there is a people come out of Egypt, which covereth the face of the earth: come now, curse me them; peradventure I shall be[5] able to overcome them, and drive them out.

12 And God said unto Balaam, [s]Thou shalt not go with them; [t]thou shalt not curse the people: [u]for they are blessed.

13 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and said unto the princes of Balak, Get you into your land; for [v]the LORD refuseth to give me leave to go with you.

14 And the princes of Moab rose up, and they went unto Balak, and said, Balaam[w] refuseth to come with us.

15 ¶ And Balak sent yet again [x]princes, more, and more honourable than they.

16 And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zippor, Let[1] nothing, I pray thee, hinder thee from coming unto me:

17 For [y]I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I [z]will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me: come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people.

18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, [a]If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, [b]I cannot go beyond the word[2] of the LORD my God, to do less or more.

19 Now therefore, I pray you, [c]tarry ye also here this night, that I may know what the LORD will say unto me more.

20 And [d]God came unto Balaam at night, and said unto him, [e]If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them; but [f]yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

21 And Balaam [g]rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab.

22 ¶ And [h]God's anger was kindled because[3] he went: and [i]the angel[4] of the LORD [k]stood in the way for an adversary against him. (Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him.)

23 And [l]the ass saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and [m]the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field; and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way.

24 But the angel of the LORD stood in a path of the vineyards, a wall being on this side, and a wall on that side.

25 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she thrust herself unto the wall, and [n]crushed Balaam's foot against the wall; and he smote her again.

26 And the angel of the LORD went further, and stood in a narrow place, [o]where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left.

1 Some suppose this extraordinary man to have been at one time a worshipper of the true God, and a prophet, but to have apostatised through love of the wages of unrighteousness. Others consider him a soothsayer, whom, nevertheless, God inspired to utter important predictions. They view him as one of those early idolaters who did not entirely renounce the true God, nor altogether cease to worship him. His true character, it is perhaps impossible to ascertain. The reader who may wish to see at large the opinions entertained respecting him, may consult Horsley, Gleig, Butler, Bryant, &c.

4 It was a very prevalent opinion in ancient times, and still continues to be so among the semi-barbarous tribes of Africa and Asia, that some men have power, by the help of incantations, to devote others to inevitable destruction. The Romans had officers appointed for the special purpose of devoting their enemies to the infernal deities. Their imprecations, it was believed, had such an extraordinary power, that no man who was loaded with them could avoid being undone. The Jews were wont to employ an awful form of execration.

2 Balaam's expressions clearly indicate a considerable knowledge & fear of Jehovah. His entertaining of the proposal, however, after God's previous distinct intimation, shows very plainly a great hankering after the 'wages of unrighteousness.' For the sake of the reward he desired to be permitted to curse those whom God had told him he had blessed. He ought to have avoided the temptation with abhorrence. Bishop Butler well observes, 'The state of Balaam's mind was this: He wanted to do what he knew to be very wicked, and contrary to the express command of God: he had inward checks and restraints which he could not entirely get over: he therefore cast about for ways to reconcile this wickedness to his duty. How great a paradox soever this may appear, as it is indeed a contradiction in terms, it is the very account which the scripture gives of him.

3 Because he went with 'a covetous disposition,' Arabic. In ver. 20, Balaam is ordered to go with the men. Why then was God angry with him for doing so? It is answered that Balaam was not to go unless the princes of Balak came and called for him: but that Balaam did not wait for their coming, but arose in the morning and went. This circumstance, united with the additional reading of the Arabic, which is strongly confirmed by 2 Pe. 2. 15, is a solid reason for the anger of the Lord against him.

laam: [p]and Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the ass with a staff.

28 And the LORD [q]opened the mouth of the ass; and she said unto Balaam, What[r] have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

29 And Balaam said unto the ass, Because thou hast mocked me: I would there were a sword in mine hand, for[s] now would I kill thee.

30 And the ass said[1] unto Balaam, Am not I thine ass, upon[2] which thou hast ridden ever[3] since I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, Nay.

31 Then the LORD [t]opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he bowed[u] down his head, and fell[4] flat on his face.

32 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, [v]Wherefore hast thou smitten thine ass these three times? behold, I went out to withstand[5] thee, because thy[w] way is perverse [x]before me:

33 And the ass saw me, and turned from me these three times: unless she had turned from me, [y]surely now also I had slain thee, and saved her alive.

34 And Balaam said unto the angel of the LORD, [z]I have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me: now therefore, [a]if it displease[6] thee, I will get me back again.

35 And the angel of the LORD said unto Balaam, [b]Go with the men: but only the word that [c]I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak. So Balaam went with the princes of Balak.

36 ¶ And when Balak heard that Balaam was come, [d]he went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, which is in [e]the border of Arnon, which is in the utmost coast.

37 And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? wherefore[7] camest thou not unto me? [f]am I not able indeed to promote thee to honour?

38 And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee: [g]have I now any power at all to say any thing? [h]the word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.

40 And Balak [i]offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam, and to the princes that were with him.

2 And Balak did as Balaam had spoken: and Balak and Balaam [d]offered on every altar a bullock and a ram.

3 And Balaam said unto Balak, Stand by thy [e]burnt-offering, and I will go; [f]peradventure [3]the LORD will come to meet me: and whatsoever he sheweth me I will tell thee. And he [4]went to an high place.

4 And [g]God met Balaam: and he said unto him, [h]I have prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram.

5 And the LORD [i]put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

6 And he returned unto him, and, lo,[k] he stood by his burnt-sacrifice, he, and all the princes of Moab.

7 ¶ And he [l]took up his parable, and said, Balak the king of Moab hath brought me from [m]Aram, out of the mountains of the east, saying, [n]Come, curse me Jacob; and come, defy [o]Israel.

8 [p]How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the LORD hath not defied?

1 The speaking ass, from that time to this, hath been the standing jest of every infidel brother. Maimonides and others have conceived that the matter was transacted in a vision: but it appears rather more probable, from the whole tenor of the narration, that this was no visionary but a real transaction. The words of St Peter show that it is to be understood, as he himself understood it, literally, 2 Pe.2. 14-16. The ass was enabled to utter such and such sounds, probably as parrots do, without understanding them: and say what you will of the construction of the ass's mouth, of the formation of the tongue & jaws being unfit for speaking, yet an adequate cause is assigned for this wonderful effect, for it is said expressly, that 'The Lord opened the mouth of the ass:' and no one who believes in a God can doubt of his power of doing this & much more. —*Bp. 7 Balak could not conceal his surprise that Balaam, when such a prospect of honour & emolument opened to him, had not come at the first call. Balaam's answer indicated his readiness to concur in the projects of Balak, and he makes a merit of having come to him through so much opposition, & artfully heightens the value of his services by the restraint under which they were given.

2 The ancient heathen entertained the notion that odd numbers were acceptable to the gods, particularly the number seven. Whatever may have been the origin of this belief, it obtained, and indeed still does obtain very extensively. Perhaps it may have taken its origin from the fact that the seventh day was set apart by God as more holy than the rest. Balaam may have chosen to erect so many altars, because this was considered a number of perfection, or because he hoped that by surpassing Israel in the number of their altars, he might gain over Jehovah to the side of Moab.

3 The Lord had before met Balaam in anger, & greatly terrified him: but, having offered such costly sacrifices, he now hoped that he would countenance his design: yet conscious guilt induced him to add 'peradventure.' Probably Balaam used incantations in his retirement to obtain a favourable meeting from the Lord. Formal converts very frequently interweave their superstitious philosophical or carnal notions, with the truths, ordinances, and precepts of God.—Scott.

thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast blessed them altogether.

12 And he answered and said, [w]Must I not take heed to speak that which the LORD hath put in my mouth?

13 And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me [x]unto [1]another place, from whence thou mayest see them: thou shalt see but the [y]utmost part of them, and shalt not see them all; and [z]curse me them from thence.

14 ¶ And he brought him into the field of Zophim, to the top of Pisgah,[2] and [a]built seven altars, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

15 And he said unto Balak, Stand here by thy burnt-offering, [b]while I meet the LORD yonder.

16 And the LORD met Balaam, and put[c] a word in his mouth, and said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus.

17 And when he came to him, behold, he stood by his burnt-offering, and the princes of Moab with him. And Balak said unto him, [d]What hath the LORD spoken?

18 And he took up his parable, and said, [e]Rise up, Balak, and hear; hearken unto me, thou son of Zippor:

19 God [f]is not a man,[3] that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?

20 Behold, I have received commandment to bless: and [g]he hath blessed; and [h]I cannot reverse it.

21 He [i]hath not beheld[4] iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel: [k]the LORD his God is with him, and [l]the shout of a King is among them.

22 [m]God brought them out of Egypt: he hath as it were [n]the strength of an unicorn.

23 Surely there is [o]no enchantment against[5] Jacob, neither is there any divination against Israel: [p]according to this time it shall be said of Jacob and of Israel, [q]What hath God wrought!

24 Behold, the people shall rise up as[r] a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: [s]he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

1 He obviously had the absurd and superstitious notion, that the result depended, in some measure, on the place whence Balaam had viewed the Israelites. Perhaps he supposed that the sight of so vast a multitude had overawed him, and would therefore have him to view them part by part, hoping that thus he might be more successful. How degrading to the human mind are the superstitions of idolatry! How wretched the slavery under which its victims groan!

4 Frequently they had been iniquitous and most perverse: but at this time there was no such national guilt upon them as to induce God to give them up. Probably the chief allusion is to idolatry, and hence Balaam afterwards advises to endeavour to beguile the people into this sin, as the only means of inducing God to forsake them.

1 We should be inclined to place somewhere about this place a conversation between Balak and Balaam which is omitted here, but has been preserved by the prophet Micah, ch. 6.5-8; in which the sixth and seventh verses are to be read as questions put by the king of Moab, & the eighth as the response of Balaam. From this, and indeed from all the history, we may infer that his religion was that of the patriarchs, and that he saw and despised the vanity of the idolatrous systems around him. We see, however, that his conduct was not in conformity with the comparative purity of his belief.—Pict. Bible.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Balaam, leaving divinations, prophesieth the happiness of Israel, 1—9. Balak in anger dismisseth him, 10—14. He prophesieth of the Star of Jacob, and the destruction of some nations, 15—25.

AND when Balaam [a]saw that it pleased the LORD to bless Israel, he went not, as [b]at other times, [2]to seek for enchantments,[3] but he set his face toward the wilderness.

2 And Balaam lifted up his eyes, and he saw Israel [c]abiding in his tents according to their tribes; and [d]the Spirit of God came upon him.

3 And [e]he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose[4] eyes are open hath said:

4 He hath said, which heard the words of God, which [f]saw the vision of the Almighty, [g]falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:

Egypt; he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn: he [s]shall eat up the nations his enemies, and shall [t]break their bones, and [u]pierce them through with his arrows.

9 He [v]couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion:[1] [w]who shall stir him up? [x]blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee.

10 ¶ And Balak's anger was kindled against Balaam, and he [y]smote his hands together: and Balak said unto Balaam, [z]I called thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast altogether blessed them these three times.

11 Therefore now flee thou to thy place: [a]I thought to promote thee unto great honour; but, lo, [b]the LORD hath kept thee back from honour.

12 And Balaam said unto Balak, Spake[c] I not also to thy messengers, which thou sentest unto me, saying,

13 If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the LORD, to do either good or bad of mine own mind; but what the LORD saith, that will I speak?

14 And now, behold, I go unto my people: come therefore, and [d]I will advertise thee what this people shall do to thy people in [e]the latter days.

15 ¶ And [f]he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said;

16 He hath said, [g]which heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the Most High, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:

17 [h]I shall see him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come [i]a Star[2] out of Jacob, and a[k] Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite[3] the corners of [l]Moab, and destroy [m]all the children of Sheth.

18 And [n]Edom shall be a possession, Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies; and Israel shall do valiantly.

19 Out [o]of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion, and [p]shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.

20 And when he looked on Amalek, he took up his parable, and said, Amalek was the[1] first of the nations, but [q]his latter end shall[2] be that he perish for ever.

21 And he looked on [r]the Kenites, and took up his parable, and said, Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock;

22 Nevertheless, the[3] Kenite shall be wasted, until[4] [s]Asshur shall carry thee away captive.

23 And he took up his parable, and said, Alas! who shall live [t]when God doeth this?

24 And ships shall come from the coast of [u]Chittim, and shall afflict Asshur, [v]and shall afflict Eber, [w]and he also shall perish for ever.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went [x]and returned to his place; and Balak also went his way.

CHAPTER XXV.

Israel at Shittim commit whoredom and idolatry, 1—5. Phinehas killeth Zimri and Cozbi, 6—9. God therefore giveth him an everlasting priesthood, 10—15. The Midianites are to be vexed, 16—18.

AND Israel abode in [a]Shittim,[5] and [b]the people began to commit[6] whoredom with the daughters of Moab.

2 And [c]they called the people unto the sacrifices of their gods: and the people did eat, and [d]bowed down to their gods.

3 And Israel [e]joined himself unto Baal-peor: and [f]the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, Take [g]all the heads of the people, [h]and hang them up before the LORD against the sun, [i]that the fierce anger[7] of the LORD may be turned away from Israel.

5 And Moses said unto the [k]judges of Israel, [l]Slay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor.

6 ¶ And, behold, one of the children of Israel came, and brought unto his brethren [m]a Midianitish woman, [n]in the sight of Moses,[8] and in the sight of all the congregation of the children of Israel, who were [o]weeping before the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

2 The Targum of Onkelos paraphrases this passage in the following manner: 'I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but he is not near. When a king shall arise from the house of Jacob, and the Messiah be anointed from the house of Israel, he shall slay the princes of Moab & rule over all the children of men.' Rabbi Moses Ben Maimon gives the following paraphrase. 'I shall see him but not now. This is David. I shall behold him but not nigh. This is King Messiah. A Star shall come out of Jacob. This is David. And a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel. This is Messiah. And shall smite the corners of Moab. This is David. And shall destroy all the children of Seth. 7 According to our translation they were the heads or princes of the people that were to be slain, i. e. doubtless those of them who had been guilty. But the Jerusalem Targum, the Samaritan copy, and most of the ancient translations, make the 'them' in this verse refer to the people who had been joined to Baal-peor. Boothroyd, adding the Samaritan clause to the text, renders it, 'Take all the heads of the people and let them slay those men who have worn the badges of Baal-peor.'

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and [r]thrust[1] both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. [s]So the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

9 And those that died in the plague were [t]twenty and four thousand.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath [u]turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, while he was zealous for[2] my sake among them, [v]that I consumed not the children of Israel in my jealousy.

12 Wherefore say, Behold, [w]I give unto him my covenant of peace:

13 And he shall have it, and [x]his seed after him, even the covenant of an [y]everlasting priesthood;[3] because he was [z]zealous for his God, and made an atonement[a] for the children of Israel.

14 Now the name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish woman, was Zimri, the son of Salu,[b] a prince of a chief[4] house among [c]the Simeonites.

15 And the name of the Midianitish woman that was slain was Cosbi, the daughter of [d]Zur; he was head over a people, and of a chief house in Midian.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 [e]Vex the Midianites, and smite them:

18 For they [f]vex you with their wiles, wherewith they have [g]beguiled you in the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cosbi, the daughter of a prince of Midian, their sister, which was slain in the day of the plague for Peor's sake.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The sum of all Israel is taken in the plains of Moab, 1—51. The law of dividing among them the inheritance of the land, 52—56. The families and number of the Levites, 57—62. None were left of them who were numbered at Sinai, but Caleb and Joshua, 63—65.

AND it came to pass [a]after the plague, that the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, saying,

2 [b]Take the sum[5] of all the congregation of the children of Israel, from twenty years old and upward, throughout their fathers' house, all that are able to go to war in Israel.

3 And Moses and Eleazar the priest spake with them in [c]the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

4 Take[1] the sum of the people, from twenty years old and upward; as the LORD [d]commanded Moses and the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt.

5 ¶ Reuben, [e]the eldest son of Israel: [f]the children of Reuben; Hanoch, of whom cometh the family of the Hanochites: of Pallu, the family of the Palluites:

6 Of Hesron, the family of the Hesronites: of Carmi, the family of the Carmites.

7 These are the families of the Reubenites: and they that were numbered of them were [g]forty and three thousand and seven hundred and thirty.

8 And the sons of Pallu; Eliab.

9 And the sons of Eliab; Nemuel, and Dathan, and Abiram. This is that Dathan and Abiram which were [h]famous in the congregation, who strove against Moses and against Aaron in the company of Korah, when they strove against the LORD:

10 And [i]the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up together with Korah, when that company died, what time the fire devoured two hundred and fifty men: and [k]they became a sign.

11 Notwithstanding [l]the children of Korah died not.

12 ¶ The sons of Simeon, after their families: of [m]Nemuel, the family of the Nemuelites: of Jamin, the family of the Jaminites: of [n]Jachin, the family of the Jachinites:

13 Of [o]Zerah, the family of the Zarhites: of Shaul, the family of the Shaulites.

14 These are the families of the Simeonites,[2] [p]twenty and two thousand and two hundred.

1 It was under the authority of Moses and of God himself that Eleazar, acting as a magistrate, put these infamous offenders to death. Their crime was of the most aggravated kind—an outrage against all authority, and implied the most daring wickedness, inasmuch as the people were, at this very time, perishing both by the sword of justice and by the destroying plague.

3 Phinehas was the eldest son of Eleazar, the eldest son of Aaron; but there was no express law limiting the high priesthood to the eldest son, till this promise was made. It continued in the family of Phinehas till about the days of Eli, who was descended from Ithamar; on what account that branch was substituted is not known. It soon, however, returned into that of Phinehas, where it continued till the time of Herod the Great, if not till that dispensation came to an end.

5 The plague having swept away the last of that devoted generation, to whom the Lord had sworn in his wrath that they should not enter into the rest of Canaan, another census of the tribes, after the lapse of thirty-eight years, is ordered to be made, preparatory to their entering the promised land. The distinction of families was thus clearly made, and the proportion of land necessary for each tribe ascertained; for though the land was divided by lot, the lot seems only to have determined the relative situation of the inheritance, not its extent, ver. 54, 56.

1 They had been twice numbered before this; once before the building of the tabernacle, in the first year after they came out of Egypt, when they paid every man half a shekel towards it; again, when they were to be encamped in the second month of the second year; and now, all those men who had been then numbered (thirty-eight years ago) being dead, as appears from ver. 64 of this chapter, God commands them to be numbered a third time; partly that he might demonstrate his faithfulness to his word in multiplying them vastly, notwithstanding all their provocations, (for their number was within eighteen hundred & twenty, as many as they were at their last muster) and partly that the land they were now going to possess, might be the more easily divided among the tribes.

2 The remarkable difference of the rate of increase and decrease in the several tribes, might give occasion for much curious investigation. The most striking points are the astonishing increase in Manasseh, and the still more astonishing decrease in Simeon. The former, from being numerically the lowest of the tribes at the former census, is at this become the sixth; and the latter, from being the third, has become the lowest of all, having lost not very much less than two-thirds of its former numbers. For the increase of Manasseh it is difficult to discover any other cause than the Lord's blessing upon the house of Joseph; but as to the decrease in Simeon, it is not without reason conceived that this tribe sustained the principal loss in the matter of Baal-peor. We know that Zimri, one of the ringleaders, was a chief of this tribe, and nothing is more probable than that a large number of its members should have been induced to follow the example of so influential a person.—*Pict. 2 This tribe was greatly increased, and indeed the whole camp of Judah was very much augmented, while that of Reuben was diminished. It has been observed that notwithstanding the amazing increase in some, and decrease in other, tribes, the same sort of proportion is preserved in the east, west, north, and south divisions, as before; so as to keep the division of Judah, which was always in the front or van, the largest; and the division of Dan, which was always in the rear, the next number. But it is worthy of remark, that as they were now, properly speaking, to commence their grand military operations, so their front, or advanced division, is increased from 186,400 to 201,300; and their rear from 157,600 to 163,200. The first division is strengthened 14,900 men, and the last division 5,600 men. The reasons for this are sufficiently obvious.

1 This was a vast number to spring from one man, considering that Benjamin, who had ten sons, wanted nearly twenty thousand of this number. We may here give, at one view, the results of a comparison between the census at mount Sinai and the present. The total number was nearly the same. They were now one thousand eight hundred and twenty fewer than they were then; but seven of the tribes had increased in number. Judah had increased one thousand nine hundred. Issachar, nine thousand nine hundred. Zebulun, three thousand one hundred. Manasseh, twenty thousand five hundred. Benjamin ten thousand two hundred. Dan, one thousand seven hundred. Asher, eleven thousand nine hundred. The other five, however, had decreased. Reuben had decreased two thousand seven hundred and seventy. Simeon, thirty-seven thousand one hundred. Gad, five thousand one hundred and fifty. Ephraim, eight thousand; and Naphtali, eight thousand. From this comparison, Henry remarks, 1. That all the three tribes that were encamped under the standard of Judah, who was the ancestor of Christ, were increased, for his church shall be edified and multiplied. 2. That some of the tribes had increased so much as that of Manasseh, which in the former account was the smallest of all the tribes, only thirty-two thousand two hundred; while here it is one of the most considerable; and his brother Ephraim, which then was numerous, is here one of the least. Jacob had crossed hands upon their heads, and had preferred Ephraim before Manasseh, which perhaps the Ephraimites had prided themselves too much in, and had trampled upon their brethren the Manassites; but when the Lord saw that Manasseh was despised, he thus multiplied him exceedingly, for it is his glory to help the weakest, and raise up them that are cast down.

1 This, as already observed, was but eighteen hundred and twenty less than at the former census. So great was the faithfulness of the Lord to his word, that when he had destroyed all the former generation, he had multiplied their posterity so fast, in that space of time, as to make them almost equal to those that preceded them.

4 This division of the land by lot evidently respected only the quarter or situation which each tribe was to possess, not the quantity or extent of land which was to be proportioned to the numbers of each tribe according to the register now formed. It was determined by lot which of the tribes was to inherit in the south, which in the north, &c. but in that quarter where the lot fell a larger or smaller portion was assigned according to the goodness of the soil and the numbers of the tribe that was to possess it. The decrease of any tribe in the wilderness thus became the decrease of its political importance and affluence in all succeeding ages. This equal division of property was under God the great bulwark and strength of the Hebrew commonwealth, for property is the natural foundation of power, and the natural foundation of every government is laid in the distribution of the lands belonging to its members. This division was such as enabled each individual to live, if not in affluence, at least in comfortable circumstances.
5 Every tribe having its land assigned them by the lot, it was then divided among the several families, in the same manner (as these words seem to signify) and then every household had their share allotted them, according to the number of persons that were in each.
z Ge. 46. 11; Ex. 6. 16-19; 1 Ch.6. 1, &c.
6 It was proper that an account should be taken of this tribe also, that it might be seen how God had blessed them, as well as the rest of the tribes of Israel, with a numerous issue, though he had cut off, in the space of thirty-eight years, all the former generation, from twenty years old and upward.

1 This shows that the census was not a mere counting of heads, but a regular registration of names and families, for else this fact could not well have been ascertained. It also forms one circumstance to account for the diminished population, it being ordained that all the males above twenty at the first enumeration, should die before the second. This could not have happened according to the ordinary rules of mortality. . . . It has been stated as an objection to the account in the text, that Caleb and Joshua were not the only persons numbered in Sinai, who entered Canaan, as Eleazar & Phinehas are mentioned (Jos. 14. 1; 22. 13.) among those who did so. The answer is easy: the Levites were not included in the general enumeration at Sinai, but were numbered distinctly and on a different principle (from a month old, not from twenty years old.) Neither had they any share in the transaction which brought the sentence of death on the mass of the people. This tribe did not, like the others, send a spy into Canaan, nor does it appear that it concurred in the general murmuring which the report of the spies occasioned.—Pict. Bible.

It would seem that this court was held close by the tabernacle, and also, perhaps, that Moses might the more readily consult the Lord in any difficult case. It is said that in after times the Sanhedrim used to follow the Tabernacle, always holding their judicial meetings in the place where the tabernacle rested. It is good to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways.

It is generally supposed, that brothers and relations in the line of the father are exclusively meant; as one great object was to preserve the genealogies distinct.

2 Most appropriately were these commands given after Moses had appointed his successor, who was so soon to lead them in to possess the land of promise, inasmuch as on their careful observance of these ordinances, and their other religious duties, was to depend their permanent possession of that land. The commands which are here repeated had been given before, but it is probable that the ceremonial observances had received many interruptions during the sojourn in the wilderness; and, besides, a new generation had sprung up who were but children when the commands were first promulgated. Some explanations are also added respecting the sacrifices to be offered at particular times. It is enjoined that they be offered in their due season, and they are divided into daily, weekly, monthly, and annual.

1 At Sinai Moses received both this law and all the others respecting the service of God. This reference seems to indicate that he is now speaking to those who, at the first institution of these ordinances, were so young that they gave less heed to them, or had now forgotten them.
2 So it was ordained also in mount Sinai, as appears from Ex. 29. 40. And in this very book there is a general rule given to this new generation, that this should be the least quantity of wine, which should be offered with a burnt-offering or a peace-offering: see ch. 15. 5. Which was a thing so constantly practised, that the heathen never sacrificed, but they poured wine upon the flesh as it flamed upon the altar.—Patrick.

3 It has, with much probability, been conjectured that this solemn sacrifice was ordained for the purpose of preventing one species of idolatry common among the ancient heathen nations, who worshipped the new moon with great rejoicings. It may also have been intended to lead the people more exactly to observe the time of the new moon, which, as Jennings remarks, 'was a matter of considerable importance, not only to prevent confusion in their chronology, since they reckoned by lunar months, but likewise because the true time of observing all their great festivals depended upon it.' They seem to have regulated the beginnings of their months, or the time of the new moon, by actual observation, as they appear to have possessed no knowledge of astronomical calculations till the period of the great captivity, when they acquired this art from the Chaldeans.

2 It is observable that there is not so much as one peace-offering ordered in all this chapter, which was a sort of sacrifice that was most for the benefit of those that brought them to the altar; but all burnt-offerings, (except a few sin-offerings) which were wholly for the honour of God, and acknowledgment of his sovereign dominion over them, and of the duty they owed him. And as the sin-offerings were shadows of that great sacrifice of God's own Son, which was one day to be offered for the sins of men, out of his own infinite love to them; so the whole burnt-offerings (which were always of the most perfect creatures, the finest flour, the choicest fruits of the earth, & the best liquor) were shadows of that excellent degree of piety, which the Son of God intended to bring into the world, which would move men, out of love to God, to give themselves wholly up to him, and devote all they had, even their own lives, to his service.—Patrick.

3 'God, out of his great wisdom,' says Calmet, 'appointed several festivals among the Jews for many reasons: 1. To perpetuate the memory of those great events, and the wonders he had wrought for the people. 2. To keep them faithful to their religion, by appropriate ceremonies. 3. To procure them lawful pleasures, and necessary rest. 4. To instruct them in the law, as it was always read in their religious assemblies. 5. To consolidate their social union, by renewing the acquaintance of their tribes and families; for on these occasions they met at Jerusalem.

23 Ye shall offer these [z] besides the burnt-offering in the morning, which is for a continual burnt-offering.

24 After this manner ye shall offer daily, throughout the seven days, the meat of the sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD: it shall be offered besides the continual burnt-offering, and his drink-offering.

25 And [a] on the seventh day ye shall have an holy convocation; [b] ye shall do no servile work.

26 ¶ Also [c] in the day of the first-fruits, when ye bring a new meat-offering unto the LORD, after your weeks[1] be out, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work:

27 But ye shall offer the burnt-offering for a sweet savour unto the LORD; [d] two young bullocks, one ram, seven lambs of the first year;

28 And their meat-offering of flour mingled with oil, three tenth-deals unto one bullock, two tenth deals unto one ram,

29 A several tenth-deal unto one lamb, throughout the seven lambs;

30 And [e] one kid of the goats, to make an atonement[2] for you.

31 Ye shall offer them besides the continual burnt-offering, and his meat-offering, (they shall be unto you without blemish,) and their drink-offerings.[3]

CHAPTER XXIX.

The offering at the feast of trumpets, 1—6; on the day of afflicting their souls, 7—11; and on the eight days of the feast of tabernacles, 12—40.

AND in the [a]seventh month, on the first day of the month, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work: it is a day of [b]blowing[1] the trumpets unto you.

2 And ye shall offer a burnt-offering for a sweet savour unto the LORD; one[c] young bullock, one ram, and seven lambs of the first year, without blemish:

3 And their meat-offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth-deals for a bullock, and two tenth-deals for a ram,

4 And one tenth-deal for one lamb, throughout the seven lambs;

5 And [d]one kid of the goats for a sin-offering, to make an atonement for you:

6 Besides [e]the burnt-offering of the month, and his meat-offering, and [f]the daily burnt-offering, and his meat-offering, and their drink-offerings, [g]according unto their manner, for a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

7 ¶ And ye shall have [h]on the tenth day of this seventh month an holy convocation; and ye shall [i]afflict[2] your souls: ye shall not do any work therein:

8 But ye shall offer a burnt-offering unto the LORD, for a sweet savour: one young bullock, one ram, and seven lambs of the first year; they shall be unto you [k]without blemish.

9 And their [l]meat-offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth-deals to a bullock, and two tenth-deals to one ram,

10 A several tenth-deal for one lamb, throughout the seven lambs;

11 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering, [m]besides the sin-offering of atonement, and [n]the continual burnt-offering, and the meat-offering of it, and their drink-offerings.

12 ¶ And on [o]the fifteenth[3] day of the seventh month ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work, and ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days.

13 And ye shall offer a burnt-offering, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; [p]thirteen young bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year; they shall be without blemish:

14 And their meat-offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth-deals unto every bullock of the thirteen bullocks, two tenth-deals to each ram of the two rams,

15 And a several tenth-deal to each lamb of the fourteen lambs;

16 And [q]one kid of the goats for a sin-offering, besides the continual burnt-offering, his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

17 ¶ And on the second day ye shall offer [r]twelve young bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year, without spot:

18 And their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings, for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, [s]after the manner;

19 And one kid of the goats for [t]a sin-offering,[1] besides the continual burnt-offering, and the meat-offering thereof, and their drink-offerings.

20 ¶ And on the third day eleven bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year, without blemish:

21 And their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings, for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner;

22 And one goat for a sin offering, besides the continual burnt-offering, and his meat-offering, and his [u]drink-offering.

23 ¶ And on the fourth day ten bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year, without blemish:

24 Their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings, for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner;

25 And one kid of the goats for a sin-offering, besides the [v]continual burnt-offering, his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

26 ¶ And on the fifth day nine bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year, without spot:

1 This was one of the new moon days, celebrated with more than ordinary solemnity, on account, probably, of its commencing the new year; for the first day of the seventh month of the sacred year was the new year's day of the more ancient civil year. It is the only one of the new moon days on which servile work is interdicted. It is called 'the feast of trumpets;' and we are to understand that the trumpet blowing was greater on this day than on any other of the solemn festivals. Many conjectural reasons are given for this. Most of the Jews imagine that it was designed to commemorate the substitution of the ram in the place of Isaac. The most general opinion is that it was to commemorate the creation of the world 'when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.' See Pict. Bible.

3 This was the feast of tabernacles or of booths, the festival of gratitude for the fruitage and vintage. During the seven days of this feast, the people left their houses and dwelt in booths, formed of green branches. This was done in commemoration of the sojourning in tents in the wilderness, and in the warm region of Palestine, and the dry weather there in October, answered extremely well. In imitation of this the Gentiles had their feast of tents, during the time of vintage; they brought out tables, furnished with all kinds of fruit into the open air, and sat in arbours made of vine branches and ivy.

1 During the seven days of the feast they were to present unto the Lord offerings made by fire. Observe here, says Henry, 1. Their days of rejoicing were to be days of sacrifices. A disposition to be cheerful does us no harm, nor is any bad symptom, when it is so far from unfitting us for, that it encourages and enlarges our hearts in, the duties of God's immediate service. 2. All the days of their dwelling in booths, they must offer sacrifices; while we are here in a tabernacle state, it is our interest as well as our duty constantly to keep up communion with God. 3. The sacrifices for each of the seven days, though differing in nothing but the number of bullocks, are severally appointed, which yet is no vain repetition; for God would thus teach them to be very exact in these observances, and to keep an eye of faith fixed upon the institution in every day's work. 4. The number of the bullocks (which were the most costly part of the sacrifice) decreased every day. Such was the will of the Law-maker, and that is reason enough for the law. It was on the last day of the feast, after all these sacrifices had been offered, that our Lord Jesus stood, & cried to those who still thirsted after righteousness, (being sensible of the insufficiency of these sacrifices to justify them) to come unto him & drink, John 7.37. 5. The meat-offerings & drink-offerings attended all their sacrifices, according to their number, after the manner. We must not think that doing much in religion will be accepted if we do not do it well, and after the manner that God has appointed. 6. Every day there must be a sin-offering presented, as we observed in other feasts. Our burnt-offerings of praise cannot be accepted of God, unless we have an interest in the great sacrifice of propitiation which Christ offered for us. 7. Even when all these sacrifices were offered, yet the continual burnt-offering must not be omitted either morning or evening, but each day they must be offered, first in the morning and last in the evening. No extraordinary services should jostle out our stated devotions.

1 It will be observed that these were never to be omitted, not even on the great day of atonement, ver. 11. Referring to the statement in that verse, it may not be out of place here to remark, that the modern Jews have not this sacrifice of atonement, and yet conscious of the need of some expiation, but believing not in Him who hath finished transgression and made an end of sin, they are put to the most wretched shifts to devise something to supply its place. One is the killing of a cock by the men, and of a hen by the women, on the eve of this day, saying, 'Let this be an exchange for me; let it come in my stead; let it be my expiation; let it die, but let me and all Israel live happily!' This practice was remarked by the members of the late Jewish deputation sent by the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. It has now been observed for many years.

v Le. 23. 36; John 7. 37-39; Re. 7. 9-17.

From this and the preceding chapter, it appears that the Jewish sacrificial service required annually, 15 goats, 21 kids, 72 rams, 132 bullocks, and 1101 lambs, to be supplied at the public expense; besides an immense number of voluntary, vow, and trespass-offerings, at the expense of individuals. According to the report of the priests, on one occasion, to Cestius, the Roman governor, the number of lambs slain at the temple, for the passover, in one year, amounted to 255,600.

3 Or, offer.

4 The laws are here given again, probably, like the recapitulation in Deuteronomy, to remind the new generation about to enter Canaan, of the obligations laid upon their fathers, and which were to continue in force under the approaching alteration in their condition of life. Of all the sacrifices enjoined in the law, the Jews, who have now abode 'many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice,' (Ho. 3. 4,) offer none. Instead of sacrifices, they have certain observances, with appropriate prayers and readings of scripture; and on a day when there should be a sacrifice, they read in their synagogues the passage of scripture enjoining that sacrifice, under the impression that, in their present depressed circumstances, the public reading of the injunction will be accepted in place of compliance with it.—*Pict. CHAPTER XXX.

A. M. cir. 2553. B. C. cir. 1451.

Vows are not to be broken, 1, 2. The exceptions of a maid's vow, 3—5; of a wife's, 6—8; of a widow's, or of her that is divorced, 9—16.

AND Moses spake unto [a]the heads of the tribes concerning the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded.

2 If a man [b]vow a vow unto the LORD, or [c]swear an oath [d]to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not [1]break his word, [e]he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.

3 If a woman also vow a vow unto the LORD, and bind herself by a bond, being in her father's house in her youth;[2]

4 And her father hear her vow, and her [f]bond wherewith she hath bound her soul, and her father shall hold his peace at her; then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she hath bound her soul shall stand.

5 But if [g]her father disallow her in the day that he heareth; not any of her vows, or of her bonds wherewith she hath bound her soul, shall stand; and the LORD shall forgive her, because her father disallowed her.

6 ¶ And if she had at all an husband when she[3] vowed, or uttered ought out of her lips, wherewith she bound her soul;

7 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her in the day that he heard it; then her vows shall stand, and her bonds wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

8 But if [h]her husband disallowed her on the day that he heard it; then he shall make her vow which she vowed, and that which she uttered with her lips, wherewith she bound her soul, of none effect; and the LORD shall forgive her.

9 ¶ But every vow of [i]a [4]widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her.

2 The consent of the father was absolutely required to render a vow binding, she being, while a part of his family, under his power, and not her own. It has been supposed by some that if she survived her father, the vow at his death revived, she being then at her own disposal; but it is clear that the disapproval of the father wholly disannulled the vow, which therefore became as though it had never been, and could not recover a force which it never had. The same, as Patrick remarks, is to be said of a guardian, who was supposed to be in the place of a father, when he died and left his children to his care. And this power was fit to be reserved to parents not only lest women, in their imprudent years, should unite themselves by vowing more than their fortunes could bear; but also lest the paternal estate should be burdened by such vows, or the necessary affairs of the family hindered. This power flowed from natural reason, no one that is subject to another having any right to dispose of those things which are under that power to which he is subject.

4 The vows made by a widow or a divorced woman, even if she had returned to live in her father's house, could not be disannulled by him. The vows made by a married woman were obligatory upon her when she became a widow, or was divorced, if her husband had disallowed of them, but not if he had disannulled them. These vows, from the words 'to afflict her soul,' would seem to have had often a respect to seasons of fasting and abstinence, and if the husband at first seemed to allow his wife's vow, but afterwards hindered her from performing it, the guilt became his, and he might expect to bear the punishment of it.

1 Maimonides has a discourse to show that this is most reasonable, in which he observes that as the law prohibited some meats, so pious people sometimes vowed to forbear such as were not prohibited; that by this means they might have contentment with a little, & give a check to an immoderate appetite. Whence the saying among the doctors, that 'vows are the hedge of separation;' i. e. a great guard to a holy life. But since, through the vehemence of their affections & passions, women are prone to act unadvisedly, if vows were wholly in their power, great inconveniences, dissentions and confusions might arise in families, whilst this sort of meat is lawful to the husband, but not to the wife, this to the daughter, but not to the mother; therefore this authority was given to the governors of families, in all things to order them. as they saw would be for their profit or detriment.—Patrick.

3 In this transaction the Israelites were to be simply the executioners of a judicial sentence. The Midianites, at the instigation of Balaam, and by the prostitution of their women, had seduced the men of Israel into a crime for which twenty-four thousand of them had been slain; and for the punishment of this most fatal and abominable wickedness, the nation was to be visited with awful retribution at the hands of Israel. It seemed not meet to the Judge of all the earth that Israel should have been punished while their seducers escaped.

1 It is not agreed what these holy instruments were which Eleazar carried with him. Some suppose that the urim & thummim are meant, but it appears that the Lord was to be consulted by these only in the holy place. Others conjecture that the ark and its appurtenances are referred to, and it is certain that in after times the ark was sometimes carried into the field of battle, but then the ark is never spoken of as 'the holy instruments.' It is far more probable that the trumpets only are meant; and that the clause should be read, 'the holy instruments, even the trumpets, to blow in his hand.'

2 Such was the end of him that had taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel. We read that he had returned to his place, and it is not improbable that having heard of the success of his wicked advice, he had returned again to claim the wages of unrighteousness.

4 The sword of war should, as far as possible, spare women and children, as incapable of resistance; but this was not so properly a war as the execution of justice upon a nation, and for a crime in which women had been the principal actors. As the Israelites acted by the special appointment of God on this occasion, there is no room left for the presumptuous cavils of men of corrupt minds; at the same time, their conduct cannot warrantably be pled as an example to be imitated, till such time as a nation shall arise placed in similar circumstances, having the same special warrant to go upon.

5 Heb. a male.

every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war.

6 And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and Phinehas[g] the son of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with [h]the holy[1] instruments, and the trumpets [i]to blow in his hand.

7 And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and they [k]slew all the males.

8 And they slew [l]the kings of Midian, besides the rest of them that were slain; namely, Evi, and Rekem, and [m]Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: [n]Balaam[2] also, the son of Beor, they slew with the sword.

9 And the children of Israel took all [o]the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.

10 And they [p]burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.

11 And they [q]took all the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

12 And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil, unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at [r]the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

13 ¶ And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, [s]went forth to meet them [t]without the camp.

14 And Moses was [u]wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the battle.[3]

15 And Moses said unto them, [v]Have ye saved all the women[4] alive?

16 Behold, [w]these caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the LORD [x]in the matter of Peor, [y]and there was a plague among the congregation of the LORD.

17 Now therefore [z]kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with him.[5]

18 But all the women children that have not known a man, by lying with him, [a]keep alive for yourselves.

19 And do ye [b]abide without the camp seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day.

20 And purify all your [c]raiment, and all that[1] is made of skins, and all work of goats' hair, and all things made of wood.

21 ¶ And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war which went to the battle, [d]This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD commanded Moses;

22 Only the gold, and the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead,

23 Every thing that may [e]abide the fire,[2] ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean; nevertheless it[f] shall be purified with the water of separation: and all that abideth not the fire, [g]ye shall make go through the water.

24 And [h]ye shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Take the sum of the prey that[3] was taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation;

27 And divide[4] the prey into [i]two parts, between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation;

28 And [k]levy a tribute unto the LORD of the men of war which went out to battle: [l]one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep.

29 Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for [m]an heave-offering of the LORD.

30 And of the children of Israel's half, thou shalt take one portion of fifty, of the persons, of the beeves, of the asses, and of the flocks,[5] of all manner of beasts, [n]and give them unto the Levites, which [o]keep the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD.

2 The people themselves who had been employed in the destruction of the Midianites, were considered unclean and must be purified; for the taking away of the life of man, in any circumstances, was considered as implying defilement—an idea prevalent also among the ancient heathen, as numerous instances from the poets testify; and the spoil too which had belonged to idolaters was unclean. All must be purified, each in the manner prescribed, that which could abide the fire, by fire, and that which could not, by being washed in water and sprinkled with the water of separation.

4 By this division, although all the people were made sharers, yet by far the greater proportion fell to those who had been actually engaged in the warfare. The spoil, including all the goods and money of the enemy, was shared by them exclusively, and of the captives and prey, each of them would receive about fifty times as much as each of those who remained at home. The same amount was shared among the twelve thousand, as among all the rest, who were nearly six hundred thousand in number. This division was made by the special direction of God; but, altho' on this occasion, all the people shared, probably because all were really soldiers, tho' not actually engaged in this affair, it appears that in future times only the actual army divided the prey. But the division of the property taken among the soldiers was equal, whether they had been in battle or merely guarded the encampment and baggage, 1 Sa. 30. 20-25. This rule respecting the equal division of spoil between soldiers actually engaged, and the rest of the army, was in use among the Romans.

1 The female children, when contrasted with the men, women, and male children, who were slain, suggests an awful idea of the terrible vengeance which God took upon the enemies of him and his people! Amalek, who first warred with Israel, was long spared; but Midian, who first tempted them to idolatry, was speedily, and most tremendously punished. The females who were spared were to be retained as servants, and treated, of course, according to the law given for the regulation of servitude. Some of them might become wives of the Israelites, after such preparation as the law prescribed, De. 21. 16, &c. The reason, probably, why the younger females were spared was, that they were less tainted with idolatry and crime. The editor of the Pict. Bible remarks, that, if we estimate the women who had seduced the Israelites to sin, by that of the men slain for that sin, and also by the proportion of young females who were spared, we shall conclude that most of those whom Moses sentenced to perish were actually guilty in the affair of Baal-peor; and it is therefore easier to understand the grounds of their destruction, than why the male children were involved in the same fate. Here also, however, we are to understand that the word 'children,' comprehends all under 20 years of age, the majority of whom would, therefore, be old enough to be imbued with the abominable principles & practice of the Midianites.
2 Destined, no doubt, to be employed in the Lord's service, under the Levites, permission being perhaps granted to redeem them.

3 It appears that in after times the kings were wont to appropriate the spoil, or a large portion of it, to themselves; and that this was a common practice among the chiefs of other nations, is well known to every one at all acquainted with classical antiquity. But we have no intimation of the least portion reserved by Moses for himself or family. These shared the common lot of the Levites. The disinterestedness of the leader of Israel, and his strict obedience to the Lord's commands, are conspicuous on every occasion. We have had opportunity of remarking this in many instances.

31 And Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD commanded Moses.

32 And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, was six hundred thousand, and seventy thousand, and five thousand sheep,

33 And threescore and twelve thousand beeves,

34 And threescore and one thousand asses,

35 And thirty and two thousand persons in all, of women[1] that had not known man by lying with him.

36 And the half, which was the portion of them that went out to war, was in number three hundred thousand, and seven and thirty thousand and five hundred sheep:

37 And the LORD's tribute of the sheep was six hundred and threescore and fifteen.

38 And the beeves were thirty and six thousand, of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and twelve.

39 And the asses were thirty thousand and five hundred, of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and one.

40 And the persons were sixteen thousand, of which the LORD's [2]tribute was thirty and two persons.

41 And Moses gave the tribute, which was the LORD's heave-offering, unto [p]Eleazar the priest; as the LORD commanded Moses.

42 And of the children of Israel's half, which Moses divided[3] from the men that warred,

43 (Now the half that pertained unto the congregation was three hundred thousand, and thirty thousand, and seven thousand and five hundred sheep,

44 And thirty and six thousand beeves,

45 And thirty thousand asses and five hundred,

47 Even of the children of Israel's half, Moses took one portion of fifty, both of man and of beast, and gave them unto [q]the Levites, which [r]kept the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

48 ¶ And the officers which were over thousands of the host, the captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds, came near unto Moses:

49 And they said unto Moses, Thy servants have taken the sum of the men of war which are under our charge,[1] and there [s]lacketh[2] not one man of us.

50 We have therefore brought [t]an oblation for the LORD, what every man hath gotten,[3] of jewels of gold, chains, and bracelets, rings, ear-rings, and tablets, to make [u]an atonement for our souls before the LORD.

51 And [v]Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of them, even all wrought jewels.

52 And all the gold of the offering[4] that they offered up to the LORD, of the captains of thousands, and of the captains of hundreds, was sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels.

53 (For [w]the men of war had taken spoil, every man for himself.)

54 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and brought it into the tabernacle of the congregation, for [x]a memorial for the children of Israel before the LORD.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Reubenites and Gadites sue for their inheritance on the east side of Jordan, 1—5. Moses reproveth them, 6—15. They offer him conditions to his content, 16—32. Moses assigneth them the land, 33—38. They conquer it, 39—42.

NOW [a]the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, had a very great multitude of cattle: and when they saw the land of [b]Jazer,[5] and the land of Gilead, that, behold, [c]the place was a place for cattle;

2 The children of Gad, and the children of Reuben, came and spake unto Moses, and to Eleazar the priest, and unto the princes of the congregation, saying,

3 [d]Ataroth, and Dibon, and Jazer, and [e]Nimrah, and [f]Heshbon, and Elealeh, and [g]Shebam, and Nebo, and Beon,[h]

4 Even [i]the country which the LORD smote before the congregation of Israel, is a land for cattle, and thy servants have cattle:

5 Wherefore, said they, [k]if we have found grace in thy sight, let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession, and [l]bring us not over Jordan.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, Shall your brethren go to war, and [m]shall ye sit here?[1]

7 And [n]wherefore discourage[2] ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the LORD hath given them?

8 Thus did your fathers, [o]when I sent them from Kadesh-barnea to see the land.

9 For when they went up into [p]the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them.

10 And [q]the LORD's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying,

11 Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, [r]from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, because they have not wholly[3] followed me;

12 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun: [s]for they have wholly followed the LORD.

13 And the LORD's anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them [t]wander in the wilderness forty years, [u]until all the generation that had done evil in the sight of the LORD was consumed.

14 And, behold, ye are risen up in your fathers' stead, [v]an increase of sinful[4] men, [w]to augment yet the fierce anger of the LORD toward Israel.

15 For [x]if ye turn away from after him, [y]he will yet again leave them in the wilderness; and [z]ye shall destroy all this people.

16 ¶ And they came near unto him, and said, [a]We will build sheep-folds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones;

17 But [b]we ourselves[5] will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place: and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities, because of the inhabitants of the land.

2 The success of this detachment had been very extraordinary, so small a company defeating such multitudes, and taking so large a spoil; but far more extraordinary was the fact that in the enterprise not one individual had been slain. The Midianites, no doubt, would make resistance; but the hand of God was conspicuous in that their resistance was altogether without effect. No wonder that gratitude constrained the captains to present a voluntary offering to the Lord.

The Greeks, before distributing the spoils, dedicated a part of them to the gods, by whose assistance they supposed they had attained them, and the soldiers, out of their portions, frequently did the same. For the fulfilment of this purpose, they adopted various methods; sometimes they collected the spoil into a heap, and set it on fire; at other times they consecrated them as offerings in their temples. 4 It must be acknowledged that the proposal of Reuben and Gad was calculated at first sight to awaken the suspicions of their leader. Whatever their real motives were it was most natural to attribute their proposal to selfishness and cowardice and want of faith. Moses accordingly reproves them sharply. He reminds them of the heavy punishment inflicted on their fathers for disobedience and want of faith. The carcases of that whole generation had fallen in the wilderness. Now a like punishment might be awaiting them; nay, their withdrawing might be the means of discouraging all the other tribes, and therefore of involving all in the consequences of God's wrath, if after having been brought to the very borders of Canaan, they should hesitate about going in to possess it. The result, however, was satisfactory, whether Moses misinterpreted their motives or not. If he did, they could not take offence, for his view was a most natural one; and, on the other hand, if he did not, this was an instance of the good effect of faithful dealing, and Moses, by showing them their sin and pointing out their danger, brought them to their duty without murmuring.

18 We [c]will not return unto our houses, until the children of Israel have inherited every man his inheritance:

19 For [d]we will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward; [e]because our inheritance is fallen to us [f]on this side Jordan eastward.

20 ¶ And [g]Moses said unto them, If ye will do this thing, if ye will go armed before the LORD to war,

21 And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his enemies from before[1] him,

22 And the [h]land be subdued before the LORD; then afterward ye shall return, and [i]be guiltless before the LORD, and before Israel; and [k]this land shall be your possession before the LORD.

23 But [l]if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the LORD: and [m]be sure your sin will find you out.[2]

24 Build you cities for your little ones, and folds for your sheep; and do that which hath proceeded out of your mouth.

25 And the children of Gad, and the children of Reuben, spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth.[3]

26 Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead;

27 But thy servants will pass over, every man [n]armed for war, before the LORD to battle, [o]as my lord saith.

28 So concerning them Moses commanded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel:

29 And Moses said unto them, [p]If the children of Gad, and the children of Reuben, will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle, before the LORD, and the land shall be subdued before you; then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession:

30 But if they will not pass over with you armed, [q]they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

31 And the children of Gad, and the children of Reuben, answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do.

32 We will pass over armed before the LORD into the land of Canaan, that the possession[1] of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be ours.

33 And [r]Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto [s]half the tribe of Manasseh the son of Joseph, [t]the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about.

34 ¶ And the children of Gad [2]built [u]Dibon, and Ataroth, and [v]Aroer,[3]

35 And Atroth, Shophan, and [w]Jaazer, and Jogbehah,

36 And [x]Beth-nimrah, and Beth-haran,[4] [y]fenced cities; and folds for sheep.

37 And the children of Reuben built [z]Heshbon,[5] and Elealeh, and Kirjathaim,[6]

38 And Nebo, and Baal-meon,[7] (their names being changed,)[8] and Shibmah: and gave[9] [a]other names unto the cities which they builded.

39 And the children of [b]Machir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it.

40 And Moses [c]gave Gilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh; and he dwelt therein.

41 And [d]Jair the son of Manasseh went and took the small towns thereof, and called them [e]Havoth-jair.

42 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Two and forty journeys of the Israelites, 1—49. The Canaanites are to be destroyed, 50—56.

THESE are the journeys of the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt [a]with their armies, [b]under the hand of Moses and Aaron.

2 And Moses wrote their goings out according to their [c]journeys, by the commandment of the LORD: and these are their journeys according to their goings out.

3 And [d]they departed from Rameses

1 Before the ark, the symbol of the Lord's presence. It appears from ch. ii. that these two tribes encamped before the sanctuary, and, when the camp removed, they marched before it, (ch. x.) It is probable that the ark of the covenant was carried about with them in their wars with the Canaanites; and if so, from their fixed order of march, these two tribes would 'go before the Lord.'

2 The Greek and Arab translators render, 'And ye shall know your sin when evils befall you.' If the persons concerned prevaricated, and so imposed upon men; or, if they afterwards refused to fulfil their engagements, God would most certainly detect and expose their wickedness, and inflict condign punishment on them for it. Sin pursues the criminal as the hound does the hunted animal, and will at length overtake, seize on, and destroy him.
3 They unanimously agree to the provisos and conditions of the grant, and do, as it were, give bond for performance by a solemn promise. Their brethren had all contributed their assistance to the conquest of this country, which they desired for a possession, and therefore they owned themselves obliged, in justice, to help them in the conquest of that which was to be their possession. Having received kindness, we ought to return it, tho' it was not so conditional when we received it. We may suppose that this promise was understood on both sides, so as not to oblige all that were numbered of these tribes to go over armed, but those only that were fittest for the expedition, while it was necessary that some should be left to till the ground and guard the country; and accordingly we find that about forty thousand of the two tribes and a half went over armed, Jos. 4. 13; whereas their whole number was about a hundred thousand.—Henry.

1 These tribes, according to their desire, obtained their possession, but it entailed upon them many inconveniences. It was a situation far distant from the sanctuary; it interrupted their intercourse with their brethren; it was very much exposed to their enemies, and they seem to have been dispossessed sooner than the other tribes.

5 The capital city of the Amorites. After the captivity, the Moabites regained this city, and hence in their prophecies against Moab, it is frequently mentioned both by Isaiah and Jeremiah. In the time of Jerome, Heshbon was a city of considerable extent, about thirty-five miles east of Jerusalem. A small town of the same name still occupies the ancient site.
6 Burckhardt imagines that the site of this town may be found at the ruins of El Teym, nearly two miles west of Madeba.
7 Said to be nine miles from Heshbon, and to stand at the foot of mount Abarim.
8 The reason of the change is supposed to have been that these cities were named after the false deities of their former inhabitants.

3 Dr Shaw, who visited the desert, gives us the following description: Over against Jibbel At-tackah, at ten miles distance, is the desert, as it is called, of Shur, where the Israelites landed, after they had passed through the interjacent gulf of the Red sea. In travelling from Shur towards mount Sinai, we come into the desert, as it is still called, of Marah, where the Israelites met with those bitter waters, or waters of Marah, Ex. 15. 23. And as this circumstance did not happen till after they had wandered three days in the wilderness, we may probably fix it at Corondel, where there is still a small rill of water, which, unless it be diluted by the dews and rains, still continues to be brackish. . . . There is nothing further remarkable, till we see the Israelites encamped at Elim upon the northern skirts of the desert of Sin, two leagues from Tor, and near thirty from Corondel. I saw no more than nine of the twelve wells that are mentioned by Moses, the other three being filled up by those drifts of sand which are common in Arabia. Yet this loss is amply made up by the great increase of the palm trees, the seventy having propagated themselves into more than two thousand. Under the shade of these trees is the (Hammane Mousa,) bath of Moses, which the inhabitants of Tor have in extraordinary esteem and veneration; acquainting us that it was here that Moses himself and his particular household were encamped.

1 Instead of making any further remarks in detail, on such of the places mentioned in this enumeration, as are known, we give the following summary of the route of the Israelites abridged from an excellent article in Mansford's Scrip. Gazetteer. On the route to Etham, at the head of the Red sea, most accounts are agreed; from thence they passed down the western side of the Hieropolitan branch to Migdol, at the opening of the valley of Hiroth or Pihahiroth, where they passed through the dividedwaters. They then continued their route along the coast, encamping at Mara, now Howara & Elim, now Wady Gharendel, and thence in an oblique direction to Rephidim, south of Horeb, see Ex. xvii.; from Rephidim they march westward to Sinai, & from it almost direct north through the desert of Paran to Kadesh-barnea, on the borders of Canaan, see ch. xiii. xiv.; here they were ordered to turn back, and 'get them into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.' This brought them through the same desert of Paran in a southerly direction, along the foot of the mountains forming the western side of the desert of Zin, to Eziongeber at the top of the Elanitic branch of the Red sea. From this they ascended the desert of Zin, now the valley El Araba, and El Ghor, to mount Hor, ch. 20. 22-29; here the Edomites refusing them a passage, they returned by Eziongeber, now Akaba, and encompassed mount Seir, now Djebel Hesma, and Djebel Sherar, passing along the east side of the range and through the borders of Midian, to the Jordan opposite Jericho.

2 When Moses and Aaron went in with their first message to Pharaoh, the latter was just 83 years old, Ex. 7. 7; and from this we may gather that a long time was not occupied in working all the miracles in Egypt, before they succeeded in bringing the people out; for now, 40 years after, he was but 123 years old. The record in this chapter may remind us that our removals here are but from one wilderness to another, and should excite us to long for the heavenly Canaan.

5 This repeated command rendered it the indispensable duty of the Israelites to extirpate the Canaanites as fast as they could subduethem, neither yielding to cowardice, sloth, or self-indulgence, nor setting up their own notions of clemency, in opposition to the sentence of the righteous Judge, whose sentence they were commissioned to execute.
6 The word here translated 'pictures,' is by some rendered 'obelisks.' Boothroyd renders it 'sculptured stones.' Every kind of sculptured figure, applied to idolatrous uses, is probably intended.
7 They were to cut down the groves in the high places, and to demolish the altars erected in them. The most ancient idolaters were wont to choose the tops of mountainsfor their worship. Israel is commanded to destroy every vestige of their worship, to showGod's hatred of idolatry, and to remove what might have proved enticements to apostacy.

1 Having given the order for the extermination of the Canaanites, it was most necessary to define with accuracy the boundaries of the land, and this accordingly is here done by Moses, and that too, according to the dictation of God, for the Jewish leader was not permitted to enter the country which he describes with the fidelity of an eye-witness, his sight of it being limited to a distant view from mount Nebo. The whole of the country described by Moses was not possessed by the Israelites till a long time after the death of their lawgiver; but, on the other hand, they were enabled, in after times to possess themselves of much more extensive territories.
c Ex. 23. 31; Jos. 15. 1-12; Eze. 47. 19.
2 The extent of the whole land was about 210 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. The extended territories are described as follows. On the south the boundary line ran, with some irregularities, from the end of the Dead sea; along Idumea and Arabia Petrea, as far as the river of Egypt. The pastures of Arabia Petrea, particularly the desert, remained free, for it was not possible to fix any limits in those regions. In the time of David the whole of Idumea, as far as the bay of Elana, submitted to the Hebrews. On the west, from the river of Egypt to the city of Ptolemais, or rather, as far as Achzib, the boundary was the Mediterranean. The northern boundary extended, with many deviations, from Aphica to the east, touched in Coelosyria, upon the kingdom of Hamath, and enclosed the city of Baalgad. On the east, the Euphrates was the boundary assigned, but it cannot be accurately determined.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The borders of the land, 1—15. The names of the men which shall divide the land, 16—29.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land of Canaan, ([a]this is the land that shall fall unto you for [b]an inheritance,[1] even the land of Canaan, with the coasts thereof,)

3 Then your [c]south quarter shall be from the wilderness of Zin, along by the coast of Edom, and your south border[2] shall be the utmost coast of the [d]salt sea eastward.

4 And your border shall turn from the south to the ascent of [e]Akrabbim, and pass on to [f]Zin: and the going forth thereof shall be from the south to [g]Kadesh-barnea, and shall go on to [h]Hazar-addar, and pass on to Azmon.

5 And the border shall fetch a compass from Azmon unto [i]the river of Egypt, and the goings out of it shall be at [k]the sea.

6 And as for the western border, ye shall even have [l]the great sea for a border: this shall be your west border.

7 And this shall be your [m]north border: from the great sea ye shall point out for you mount Hor.

8 From mount Hor ye shall point out your border unto [n]the entrance of Hamath; and the goings forth of the border shall be to Zedad.

9 And the border shall go on to Ziphron, and the goings out of it shall be at Hazar-enan: this shall be your north border.

10 And ye shall point out your east border from [o]Hazar-enan to Shepham.

11 And the coast shall go down from Shepham to [p]Riblah, on the east side of Ain; and the border shall descend, and shall reach unto the [3]side of [q]the sea of Chinnereth eastward.

12 And the border shall go down to Jordan, and the goings out of it shall be at [r]the salt sea: this shall be your land, with the coasts thereof round about.

which the LORD commanded[1] to give unto the nine tribes, and to the half-tribe.

14 For [t]the tribe of the children of Reuben, according to the house of their fathers, and the tribe of the children of Gad, according to the house of their fathers, have received their inheritance, and half the tribe of Manasseh have received their inheritance:

15 The two tribes and the half-tribe have received their inheritance[2] [u]on this side Jordan near Jericho eastward, toward the sun-rising.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 These are the names of the men which shall divide the land unto you; Eleazar[v] the priest, and [w]Joshua the son of Nun.

18 And ye shall take one [x]prince of every tribe, to divide the land by inheritance.

19 And the names of the men are these: Of the tribe[3] of Judah, [y]Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

20 And of the tribe of the children of Simeon, Shemuel the son of Ammihud.

21 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Elidad the son of Chislon.

22 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Dan, Bukki the son of Jogli.

23 The prince of the children of Joseph, for the tribe of the children of Manasseh, Hanniel the son of Ephod.

24 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Ephraim, Kemuel the son of Shiphtan.

25 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Zebulun, Elizaphan the son of Parnach.

26 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Issachar, Paltiel the son of Azzan.

27 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Asher, Ahihud the son of Shelomi.

28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud.

29 [z]These are they whom the LORD commanded to divide the inheritance unto the children of Israel in the land of Canaan.

1 He repeats it so often that they might know what people they were to dispossess, and with whom they were to make friendship; and not to extend their desires beyond the bounds of God's gracious grant to them. By which they were placed in a very fertile and pleasant country, bounded, as appears from the foregoing description, on the south by great mountains which sheltered them from the burning air of the deserts of Arabia; on the west by the midland sea, which sent to them refreshing breezes; and on the north by mount Libanus, which kept off the colder blasts from that quarter; and on the east, the delightful plains of Jordan, abounding with palm trees, especially about Jericho, which, by their rich juice and refreshing fruit, yielded them a great revenue.—Patrick.

3 'I have nothing,' says Patrick, 'to observe upon this and the following verses, to the end of the chapter, but that the tribes are not mentioned in such order as they were at their first numbering, (ch. 1. 5, 6, &c.) or at their second, (ch. 26. 5, &c.); yet great exactness, and a particular direction of God may be noted in their placing here, for they are set down according to their situation which they had afterwards in the land of Canaan; as if Moses foresaw who should be next neighbours one to another. For Judah having his inheritance given him first, (Jos. xv.) Simeon, who is here next mentioned, was so near him in the land of Canaan, that he had a portion given him out of the lot of Judah, which proved too large for that tribe, Jos. 19. 9; Ju. 1. 3, 17. Then Benjamin, who here follows, in the third place, was so near to Judah, that they never separated when the ten tribes were rent from them. Dan was not far from Judah; and the children of Joseph also were their neighbours. And the rest of the tribes, Zebulun, Issachar, Asher, Naphtali, are set down here, just in the order wherein their lots fell to them in Canaan, Jos. 19. 10, 17, &c. An evidence that Moses was guided by a Divine Spirit in all his writings.'

2 There is an apparent difficulty connected with this verse, compared with the statement in the succeeding. Boothroyd says, 'the common rendering of both verses is quite consistent, as will appear if the city be supposed to be a thousand cubits square, and the measurement from each corner one thousand cubits, the whole contents of the city and suburbs will be a square of three thousand cubits. But the most natural interpretation seems to be, that in the whole there were three thousand cubits round the city, one thousand for suburbs properly so called, & two thousand more for their pasture, &c., called properly the fields of the suburbs.' This is the explanation given by Maimonides, and seems quite satisfactory, 'the first thousand cubits,' says he, 'are the suburbs, and the two thousand which they measured without the suburbs, were for fields & vineyards.'

3 The cities of refuge among the Israelites were widely different from the asyla among the Greeks and Romans, as also from the privileged altars among the Roman Catholics. Those among the Hebrews were for the protection of such only as had slain a person involuntarily. They were necessary, because the old patriarchal law still remained in force, viz. that the nearest akin had a right to avenge the death of his relation by slaying the murderer; for the original law enacted, that whosoever shed man's blood, by man should his blood be shed; and none was judged so proper to execute this law, as the man who was nearest akin to the deceased. As many rash executions of this law might take place, it was deemed necessary to qualify its claims, and prevent injustice; and the cities of refuge were judged proper for this purpose.—Clarke.

CHAPTER XXXV

Eight and forty cities for the Levites with their suburbs, and measure thereof, 1—5. Six of them are to be cities of refuge, 6—8. The laws of murder, 9—30. No satisfaction to be taken for murder, 31—34.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses [a]in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

2 Command [b]the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites, of the inheritance of their possession, cities to dwell in; and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities[1] round about them.

3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in; [c]and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts.

4 And the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand[2] cubits round about.

5 And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side two thousand cubits, and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities.

6 And among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be [d]six cities for refuge,[3] which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and to[4] them ye shall add forty and two cities.

7 So all the cities which ye shall give to the Levites shall be [e]forty and eight cities: them shall ye give with their suburbs.

8 And the cities which ye shall give shall be [f]of the possession of the children of Israel: [g]from them that have many ye shall give many; but from them that have few ye shall give few: every one shall give of his cities unto the Levites according to his inheritance which he[5] inheriteth.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, [h]When ye be come over Jordan into the land of Canaan,

11 Then [i]ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you; that the slayer may flee thither, which killeth any person at[1] unawares.

12 And they shall be unto you cities for refuge [k]from the avenger;[2] that the manslayer die not, [l]until he stand before the congregation in judgment.

13 And of these cities which ye shall give, six cities shall ye have for refuge.[3]

14 Ye shall give [m]three cities on this side Jordan, and three cities shall ye give in the land of Canaan, which shall be cities of refuge.

15 These six cities shall be a refuge, both[n] for the children of Israel, and for the stranger, and for the sojourner among them; that every one that killeth any person unawares may flee thither.

16 And [o]if he smite him with an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer: [p]the murderer shall surely be put to death.

17 And if he smite him [q]with throwing[4] a stone, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

18 Or if he smite him with an hand-weapon of wood, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

19 The [r]revenger of blood himself shall slay the murderer: when he meeteth him, he shall slay him.

20 But [s]if he thrust him of hatred, or hurl at him [t]by laying of wait, that he die;

21 Or in enmity smite him with his hand, that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death: for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer when he meeteth him.

22 But if he thrust him suddenly without[u] enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait;

23 Or with any stone wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and was not his enemy, neither sought his harm;

24 Then [v]the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood, according to these judgments:

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled: and he shall [w]abide in it unto the death of the high priest,[1] which was [x]anointed with the holy oil.

26 But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whither he was fled;

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders[2] of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer; he[3] shall not be guilty of blood:

28 Because [y]he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest: but [z]after the death of the high priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession.

29 So these things shall be for [a]a statute of judgment unto you, throughout your generations, in all your dwellings.

30 Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by [b]the mouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to cause him to die.

31 Moreover [c]ye shall take no satisfaction[4] for the life of a murderer, which is guilty[5] of death; but he shall be surely put to death.

32 And ye shall take [d]no satisfaction for him that is fled to the city of his refuge, that he should come again to dwell in the land, until the death of the priest.

33 So ye shall not pollute the land wherein ye are; for blood [e]it defileth the land: and the[6] land cannot be cleansed of the blood that is shed therein, but by the blood of him that shed it.

34 [f]Defile not therefore the land which ye shall inhabit, wherein [g]I dwell: for I the LORD [h]dwell among the children of Israel.

2 It is obvious that Moses is here legislating for the regulation of existing usages. The avenger, or goel, which also signifies redeemer, was the nearest of kin to the person killed, and was authorized to execute vengeance upon the slayer; and the design of the institution of cities of refuge clearly was to save the slayer from the effects of the avenger's fury until the case should be investigated. Much light is thrown upon this subject by a knowledge of the practices still prevalent among the Bedouin Arabs, which show very distinctly the evils which the cities of refuge were designed to prevent. Among them the right of revenge is not limited to the one avenger, nor is the actual offender alone liable to the punishment, but the right of revenge descends through several generations, and the liability to vengeance in like manner descends, so long as the matter remains unsettled. Their customs, moreover, make no distinction between murder & manslaughter, it is life for life, blood for blood, in whatever manner the life may have been taken, or the blood shed.

3 These cities were conveniently situated so as to be accessible to the various districts of the land, and we learn that the best provision was made for the manslayer's easy and safe flying thither. The roads that led to them were kept in good repair; and that he might not miss the way, posts were erected, where several roads happened to meet, bearing the inscription, 'city of refuge.' Do not these cities of refuge remind us of the salvation of the gospel of our blessed Lord, the only refuge provided for perishing sinners to flee to 'from the wrath to come?' To them there seems to be allusion in Heb. 6. 17, 18.

1 Maimonides views this in the light of a 'prudent charity to the man-slayer, and to the relations of him that was slain, since by this means the man-slayer was kept out of the sight of the avenger of blood, who might have been tempted some time or other to fall upon him, if he had come in his way; but by long absence his anger might be mitigated, at least by the death of the high priest, the most excellent of all persons, and most dear to any one in the nation, which made the public grief, when he died, so great, that men forgot their private resentments.
